ARCHANGEL OUSTS ALLIED ENVOYS; NOW IN LAPLAND

Local Soviet Refuses to Permit Embassies from Vologda to Stay There.

WOULDN'T GO TO MOSCOW

Tchitcherin, Who Invited Them, Said Vologda Was About to be Shelled.

WASHINGTON IS INDIGNANT

Belief There That Affront by Bolsheviki Will Not Be Overlooked by the Allies.

KANDALASKA, Russian Lapland, July 30, (Associated Press.)—The allied embassies, which recently left Vologda for Archangel, were not permitted to remain in Archangel and have arrived in Kandalaska.

The embassies left Vologda July 25 in response to a message of M. Tchitcherin, Bolshevist Foreign Minister, declaring that they were in great danger, and that a bombardment of Vologda was threatened for the next day. He urged the embassies to come to Moscow, but the Ambassadors decided to proceed to Archangel, where they expected to communicate with their Governments.

At Archangel, the Soviet, acting under orders from Moscow, refused to permit the foreign representatives to remain, but placed two small Russian ships at their disposal, and aboard these they left July 28, escorted by a Russian trawler, on an uneventful voyage across the White Sea.

On the night they were leaving Archangel it was reported that the Moscow Government had ordered that the sailing of the Ambassadors be prevented.

LONDON, July 30.—A Russian wireless communication received here tonight says that M. Tchitcherin, the Bolshevist Foreign Minister, has sent the following message to M. Joffe, Bolshevist Ambassador to Germany:

"The American Consul General, Mr. Poole, who is charged with the mission of maintaining diplomatic relations with the Council's Government at Moscow, visited the Commissary of Foreign Affairs and declared in the name of the British diplomatic representative and the Consul Generals of France, Italy, and Japan that they approved the declaration previously made by Mr. Poole to the Commissary, which essentially follows:

"'In conformity with the personal opinion of the allied Consuls there is no reason to believe the situation in general outlines is changed by the departure of the Ambassadors to Vologda. The representatives of the aforesaid powers expect to remain in Moscow as long as circumstances permit them to do so, and they are permitted to use the privileges attached to their functions, especially direct communication with their respective Governments, unless they receive other instructions.'"

Reds Dominated by Germany.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Washington observers of events in Russia are being forced to the conclusion that the Bolshevist Government, acting in accordance with the wishes of Germany, is seeking to bring about war between the allied Governments and the so-called Government of Russia. Further evidence of this German-directed effort was afforded tonight by the news contained in a press dispatch from Kandalaska, Russian Lapland, that the allied embassies, which had been forced to leave Vologda by the Bolsheviki and had gone to Archangel, the White Sea port, were obliged by the Archangel Soviet to leave that place, and this accounted for their presence in Kandalaska.

The treatment accorded to the diplomatic representatives by the Bolshevist central authority is an affront that the allied Governments are not likely to overlook. No doubt is felt in some informed circles here that the Soviet Government is anxious to bring about a clash that will sever all relations between itself and the allied representatives.

Evidence has been accumulating that the Bolshevist Government at Moscow was completely subservient to the Germans. It is apparent to those who have followed the situation closely that the Bolshevist leaders, like Lenine and Trotzky, are willing to sacrifice Russia as long as they are retained in power by their German masters, to whom they sold out Russia through the treaty of Brest-Litovsk.

At this time the German Government, according to evidence furnished by the German press, is becoming concerned over the program that is being formulated by the allied Governments for the regeneration of Russia through sending

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, July 31.—According to The Morning Post, Major Gen. Davidson, who has been elected for the Fareham Division in place of Lord Lee, left general headquarters in France yesterday morning, came to England by airplane, motored from his landing place to Westminster, took the oath and sat in the House of Commons a while.

Then he went back as he had come and was probably on duty again, while the House was still talking about national shipyards.

He was anxious to take his seat before recess, could get only a few hours off, and there was no other way to come.

CALL FOR DE HAVILANDS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Demand for an Air Ministry under which activities of both the army and navy would be co-ordinated, was made today by Senator James A. Reed of Missouri. Mr. Reed is a member of the Senate Military Affairs Subcommittee on Aviation which is now examining into aircraft production.

"Air service has come to be of such vast importance that it justifies the creation of a new Cabinet position," he said. "Some one man should have plenary powers, and should be surrounded by a staff of the most skilled aeronautical engineers, great practical fliers, and experts on manufacturing."

The need for central control of air activity and production has been emphasized before. Several bills to this effect were introduced last year. Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas was one of the prime movers for such a plan. Sentiment is increasing that instead of the army and navy having separate aeronautical departments they should be placed under one authority. It is felt that with responsibility for aircraft placed upon one man or one board there would be no difficulty or competition in obtaining necessary material, and many of the delays and criticisms which have developed heretofore would be obviated.

Pershing Calls for De Havilands.

The latest of these criticisms centres about the de Haviland airplane, which has been accused of "falling down." Secretary Baker was asked today about these charges, and replied:

"There are probably no perfect airplanes. Improvement in the best of them is constant and rapid, both as to types and succeeding numbers of the same type. This is true of the de Haviland and all others.

"The latest machines made of that type are better than the earlier ones, and this improvement we hope will be constant. General Pershing has requested a large shipment of de Haviland airplanes (de Haviland 4) of the present type on the priority schedule for August.

"The purpose of this is to set at rest the statement which was made from some quarter that General Pershing had directed that no more de Havilands be shipped, because he has asked for a very large shipment of the present type."

Senator Reed and Senator New of Indiana, of the Aviation Sub-Committee, heard officers testify today behind closed doors on the performance of the de Haviland at the Dayton Field. Captain Muhlenberg, Captain Schroeder, and Lieutenant Foote, all skilled fliers, told of the advantages and disadvantages of the machine. Committee members refused to comment on the testimony. It was said, by a man entirely conversant with the situation, that some of the newspaper statements regarding the de Haviland were "mere conjecture."

New Forecasts Full Inquiry.

All that Senator New would say, was:

"The committee is not talking about the testimony, and the fact that the officers have been called from Dayton Field suggests only one thing, and that is that the committee is making a thorough investigation into all rumors, from newspapers and other sources. We are trying to arrive at the exact facts on production, character, quality, and so on, with a view to changing conditions if conditions need changing."

It was learned that the sub-committee

Austria Firm in Demand to Bring New Kingdom Under Hapsburg Rule.

TURKS REPROACH BULGARS

Ignore German Aims in Caucasus—Inspired Berlin Warning of Threatened Danger.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, July 30, (Dispatch to The London Daily Express.)—Trouble is admittedly brewing among the Central Powers, first between Germany and Austria over the Polish question, and also between Bulgaria and Turkey regarding the Dobrudja. Every possible solution of both questions has been repeatedly discussed by the four Governments, but no agreement is likely to be reached.

Germany will not hear of the Austrian annexation of Poland in any form whatever, whereas Austria considers the bringing of the "Kingdom" of Poland under the Hapsburg sceptre as a "vital necessity." It was hoped in Germany that once Czernin resigned no more would be heard of the "Austro-Polish" solution of the Polish question, and thus Austria was permitted to annex important Rumanian lands under the pretext of the "safety of her frontiers."

It appears from an inspired article by Emil Zimmermann in yesterday's Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger that Baron Burian is just as anxious as Czernin was about the Austro-Polish solution, over which Austria seems likely to remain most obdurate.

No peaceful solution is in sight regarding the Turkish-Bulgarian Dobrudja and Adrianople difficulties. The feeling is rising high in both Sofia and Constantinople. The Turks are accusing the Bulgarians as being "the Germans of the Balkans," while the Bulgarians are saying equally hasty things about the Turks.

Zimmermann urges the Central Powers not to fight among themselves during the war, for otherwise "what they have so far managed to gain will probably be lost."

Turks Take Free Rein in Caucasus.

AMSTERDAM, July 30.—Turkey is going to handle the situation in the Caucasus according to her own ideas. This is indicated in a telegram from Constantinpole dated July 28, which quotes an article in the newspaper Nasfiri Ekfiar presenting the Turkish viewpoint.

"We have nothing to say against the principles laid down in the Brest-Litovsk treaty," says the article, "but when the Caucasus, newly reorganized, turned toward us and, master of its own destinies, refused to be bound by the treaty, what was more natural for us than to take into consideration the necessities of this new situation created on our important eastern front? Could we close our ears to the appeal of the Government of a people largely of the same race and same creed as ourselves?

"We are aware of the action, and its present progress, to place under German control Tiflis and Baku. That is a logical consequence of the application of the Brest-Litovsk treaty. How could this treaty be taken into consideration in the affairs of the Caucasus, seeing that the Bolshevist Government has not even been able to return to us, in accordance with the treaty, our eastern frontier, and that in the Caucasus influences entirely independent of the Bolshevist Government have arisen!"

This reported attitude on the part of Turkey may account in part for the report received through Copenhagen that Turkey and Germany had severed relations.

Early this month it was reported through Washington that Germany was becoming alarmed over the aggressive territorial tendencies of her allies, especially Turkey. Several weeks earlier it had been reported that Germany had ordered Turkey to stop her advance in the Eastern Caucasus.

Almost simultaneously announcement came from Berlin that German troops had been landed at Poti, on the Black Sea coast, an important point on the railroad running through Tiflis to Baku. On June 13 Turkey signed a peace treaty with the Transcaucasusian Gov-

More American Troops Reach Italian Front

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, July 29, (Associated Press.)—American troops continue to arrive here. They are in excellent condition and splendid spirits, and are enthusiastic over the welcome that has been accorded them.

Nothing has been left undone by the Italians to show the Americans how much their presence in Italy is appreciated. The commanding General and his staff turned out to greet the men from overseas, while airplanes flew over them, dropping colored papers on which was printed "Viva Wilson."

Geddes Tells House of Commons of Net Increase Against the U-Boats.

LOSS FALLS, BUILDING RISES

Britain and America Economize Skilled Labor in Newly Designed Vessels.

LONDON, July 30.—Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the British Admiralty, gave the House of Commons today a review of the naval situation.

The First Lord compared the situation today regarding tonnage with that of a year ago. Then the net loss in tonnage, he said, was 550,000 gross tons. Submarines then were not being destroyed as fast as the Germans were building them, while the merchant shipyards were short of men and material. Four hundred thousand tons net loss monthly was the British deficit. Every yard that could take naval work had been put on naval building.

Gradually during the last year, Sir Eric continued, the position had changed in many directions. Instead of losing tonnage, the world's net result in the last quarter had been a gain, roughly, of 100,000 tons a month. The allied and neutral world was as well off on June 30 as on Jan. 1, 1918. This result, he declared, had been obtained by reduced sinkings and increased buildings.

The reduced sinkings had been arrived at, said the First Lord of the Admiralty, by a greater productive effort devoted to warships and small craft of an anti-submarine character. Nothing commandeered or acquired tonnage was included in this result.

"The total increase in labor last year in shipbuilding yards," Sir Eric continued, "was 35,000 men. The original demand of a year ago was for 80,000 additional workers, part of them skilled. Owing to events on the western front and the great demands for technical men for the air force and the army, it was impossible to obtain the proper quota of skilled men by their withdrawal from the army. Unskilled men were offered freely, but they could not be absorbed because of the lack of skilled men."

The First Lord declared that skilled men still could not be obtained in sufficient numbers to man the existing yards. This situation had been feared, so the Government had decided to go ahead at once with a scheme for building a simple ship which could be constructed with a minimum of skilled labor. This ship was designed and originated in the Admiralty.

"It is interesting," added the First Lord, "that the very same problem confronted America, and America met it in practically the same way—the same class of yard and the same type of construction, and with excellent results."

Merchant ship repairs, said Sir Eric, were today engaging nearly two-thirds as many workmen as were engaged on new construction of merchantmen. "But," he continued, "the submarines have found it too dangerous to work inshore, and are going far out. The number of ships damaged, as well as sunk, is decreasing, and the transfer of men from repairs to new construction is possible. The number of men employed on new construction of warships and auxiliaries is, roughly, 150,000, and on merchantmen 120,000."

"Britain has borne the preponderating burden to a preponderating extent of fighting the submarines. The new output of anti-submarine ships, mines, and implements has been preponderatingly ours, and the responsibility for combatting the menace has been ours. Even today the increased assistance brought about by the new construction of the Allies is small indeed, but times are changing.

"America's program is now beginning to come along. And I have had the pleasure of considering it with Mr. Roosevelt. My conferences with him have confirmed what I have relied upon, namely that when once the flow of destroyers and anti-submarine craft starts from the United States it will become a formidable torrent."

EPIC BATTLE FOR SERGY

Village Changed Hands Nine Times, but Is Now Back of American Line.

BROOKLYN BOY'S HEROIC ACT

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE MARNE, July 30.—Sergy changed hands nine times in twenty-four hours. That tells the story of the bitter fighting when the German command threw two fresh Guard divisions against the Americans north of the Ourcq yesterday, in an endeavor to put them back across the stream.

The result may be best told by saying that the Americans are not only on the north side of the Ourcq this morning, but in positions further advanced than when the Crown Prince hurled his violent attacks against our line early yesterday. At least one German Guard division was rendered fightless for some time to come.

Had the Americans not held back these fighting Prussians the French would not have been able to make their advance north of Fère-en-Tardenois, and also on our right.

Germany's Best Shock Troops Beaten

The Prussians and Bavarians now trying to hold back the Americans were brought hurriedly from the rear, where they had been held to make an attack against the English, preparatory to the Crown Prince's grand drive in August.

It should be a source of the greatest pride to America that her youthful soldiers are able to hold their own against the Kaiser's best shock troops, for such the Prussian and Bavarian Guards are.

At Sergy was an American division which met the 4th Prussian Guard Division. The result speaks for itself.

As told in these dispatches yesterday, it was part of the German plan to stand on the north bank of Ourcq and hold the Americans while the withdrawal behind the lines was made more easily. The charge of the Americans across the river on Sunday, in which they took Seringes and Sergy and established themselves, broke up this part of the German plan.

Early yesterday morning the Americans in Sergy were attacked by the 4th Prussian Guard Division, which had arrived only a few hours before from the training area in Lorraine. Overwhelmed by vastly superior numbers, the Americans withdrew before a terrific small artillery and machine-gun fire.

But when the Prussians got into the town the German artillery could no longer shoot into it. That gave a chance for man to man in a hand-to-hand fight, and the Americans grasped the opportunity.

Machine Guns Under the Red Cross.

They rushed back into the village, up against a withering fire from machine guns placed practically in every building. When the charge was at its height, from a building bearing the Red Cross five machine guns spoke with telling effect. But soon the Americans got hand-to-hand with the Prussians. In repayment for the deadly machine-gun work our men got their bayonets into action, and no German has yet been known to stand before a bayonet with an American behind it. In half an hour we had possession of the town.

Down came the German artillery fire again, and we had to retire. Into the village came the Prussians, and when the artillery fire stopped, back went the Americans. Again we drove them out. No sooner had we got into the village, when back came the Prussians. The German airplanes rendered their men great aid, sweeping down close to the ground and raking our lines with machine guns. They also used bombs against us. Neither side would throw gas into Sergy, for fear of injuring their own troops.

The fighting went back and forth all morning. First we had the mauled village, and then the Prussians had it. Both sides made advances from edges of woods and retreated to that shelter. Finally, just after noon, when it was our turn in the village, the American artillery got down a heavy barrage, which caught the Prussian attackers and drove them back. By the time the enemy came again we were too strongly situated for them, and the result of the bloody battle was that we held Sergy.

Bitter Battle at Seringes.

Almost the same story tells the fighting yesterday for Seringes, only the battle was not so fierce and the village changed hands five times instead of nine.

To realize that this fighting was entirely different from the rear-guard actions of last week one has only to consider the hurrying of the Guard divisions, which are shock troops, into the line and the infantry counterattacks, whereas during the six previous days we had machine-gun opposition almost exclusively.

The truth of the matter is that the Germans wanted to hold their line on the north bank of the Ourcq for some days. Sergy and Seringes are strong villages on a series of hills running along the north side of the Ourcq, and evidence taken from prisoners showed that the Americans were supposed to have been held on the southern bank of the stream.

Evidence still points to the probability that the Germans intend to go back to the Vesle and hold there. The desire to hold the northern bank of the Ourcq is to be explained for the same reason.

Fighting to Save Supplies.

The Germans tried to hold the French and Americans in the southern part of the Forest de Ris. A trip through that forest today showed hundreds of tons of ammunition for big German guns, piled six feet high in rows a hundred yards long for some distances. This ammunition had been stored there to be used in the advance on Paris.

It is the belief that in Nesle Woods, north of the Ourcq, the Crown Prince has stored great supplies, and intends to get them out at any cost. Else why did he hurl against the Americans two divisions from the dwindling supply of his reserve divisions? This was done, of course, to stop the Americans, who could not be halted by ordinary German troops.

He succeeded in slowing down the Americans yesterday, but there are Americans in France who have not yet faced the Kaiser's fighters. The Germans have got to go further back, and they know it well. The throwing by the German command of fresh Guard divisions against the Americans is significant, when it is known definitely that it is planning another drive soon, perhaps against the British, for which it will need all available troops.

Lies Told to the Germans.

A captured officer said a regimental commander told his men two days ago that the Germans had hit the British and captured the Channel ports, but that the announcement had not yet been made by Ludendorff. He explained that Germany was still winning the war and that the withdrawal from the Soissons-Rheims sector was only for strategical reasons. The German command promised the German people to hit the British, and wants to make good.

Another significant factor in yesterday's counterattack against the Americans was that the Germans brought a large number of new airplanes, at least sixty, into the sector, and thus gained a temporary air supremacy which enabled the air fighters to do effective work against our troops. Undismayed by superior numbers, for the sixty were in addition to many chase machines the Hun already had, the American fliers went out to meet them, and there were many air fights all day long. British and French aviators also aided us. The Americans last night believed that they had brought down at least six airmen.

Grenades Under the White Flag.

The Germans are trying every art of their kind of warfare against our boys, but the Americans are learning fast. For instance, one squad advanced toward a platoon of Americans yesterday waving a white flag. The Americans let them come about a hundred yards and then cut loose and annihilated them. That they acted rightly was shown by the fact that the white flag had been tied to the handle of a live grenade, and while the Germans appeared at a distance to be weaponless, each was loaded down with deadly grenades.

Another favorite trick is that the German machine gunners, when seeing Americans approach, wait until our lads are close, when they cut loose with a final spurt of bullets, and then step out and cry "Kamerad!" Our men have adopted a rule that any German who shoots a ma-

German Masses Becoming Deeply Depressed; Realize Military Defeat; Food Stress Grows

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Switzerland, July 30, (Dispatch to The London Daily Express.)—La Suisse states that a high neutral official who has just arrived at Basle from Berlin declares that, in spite of all German precautions to hide the defeat in the west, the truth has penetrated among the masses.

Such great moral depression has not been seen before during the war, which, it is now considered, is lost whenever Foch chooses his hour to strike.

The German people want the Government to make peace by ceding Alsace-Lorraine before it is too late.

The German losses during the last three months reached nearly a million. The losses during the last two offensives numbered 350,000, and these losses have completely disorganized the plans of the high command. Most of the wounded are greatly depressed and demoralized.

Munich Without Flour, Vegetables, or Fruit.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ZURICH, July 30.—The latest news and comments in all the German papers, especially the South German, show the food situation to be lamentable. The Munich Post writes:

"This year's fruit harvest is completely spoiled. The population is absolutely without fruits and vegetables, and it is impossible to obtain a pound of potatoes at any price. The potato harvest, despite official declarations, is less than two-thirds that of last year."

Terrible rumors are current in Bavaria that for days to come no flour will be available. Herr Dilly, President of the Vegetable Supply Department, declares it impossible to provide vegetables, and the population must submit to greater restrictions still in the near future.

A demonstration of women took place Friday in Munich, demanding bread and threatening the Town Hall and the Burgomaster. The deputation was received by the latter, who declared that everything was being done to deal with the misery of the population. Since July 26 the Munich municipality has been selling vegetables at reduced prices, to counteract monopolists, but the quantities are utterly insufficient and popular irritation increases daily.

STRUGGLE IS MERCILESS

Few Prisoners Taken After Americans Find Their Wounded in Sergy Were Bayonetted.

FRENCH ADVANCE ON WEST

Are Winning Plateau North of Grand Rozoy—Germans Gain Southwest of Rheims.

LONDON, July 30.—French and American troops in the region of Fère-en-Tardenois again thrust their lines forward, despite stiff resistance from the enemy.

The American troops have advanced from Sergy nearly two miles, again defeating the Prussian Guards and Bavarians. This followed a terrific German assault on the American lines, whereby the Germans won Cierges, [southeast of Sergy,] and apparently still hold it.

The French gains were made northeast of Fère and to the eastward of Sergy.

Heavy counterattacks were made by the Germans along almost the entire front to the east, but gained little ground except west of St. Euphraise [southwest of Rheims.]

In this same area the French troops have captured Romigny.

Some advance also has been effected by the Allies in the Ardre Valley, toward the village of Aubilly.

The main advance on the westerly side of the front seems to have been at Grand Rozoy, northwest of Fère-en-Tardenois. The French here are progressing north to the crest of the plateau between the Vesle and the Ourcq. The Germans drove the French out of Bengneux, but it was afterward retaken.

There has been heavy fighting near Buzancy, five miles south of Soissons, and also in Plessier Wood, about five miles further south.

There are now seventy-one German divisions in the Marne salient. Of these, ten belong to the northern army of Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria. Five of these ten have been twice used in attacks.

Our Men Defy Barrage and Advance.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE AISNE-MARNE FRONT, July 30, (Associated Press.)—Through a barrage as deadly as any the Germans have laid down on any sector for months, the American soldiers, comprising men from the Middle West and Eastern States, pushed their line forward a little more today, and tonight it forms the apex of the long allied front between the Marne and the Vesle.

Their progress was somewhat less than two miles, but their operation is regarded as a brilliant one in view of the determined countering by the Germans.

On either side the French also moved forward, while steady pressure was maintained against the east and west flanks.

Information early in the day indicated the withdrawal of the 4th Division of Guards from this front, but it developed that that renowned organization and the Bavarians were still there, and the strong opposition they offered justified their reputation. But their sacrifice was in vain.

The Americans withstood two heavy attacks during the night, and at daylight began their operations, which left them tonight well to the north of Sergy, on the long slopes approaching the heavy woods beyond Nesles, a town directly east of Serignes-et-Nesles, for which the Germans fought bitterly.

The east end of the line swings northeasterly opposite this point, and then drops off sharply in the direction of Cierges and Ronchères. The Ourcq River has been left far behind, the line being pushed forward across the zone to the northwest.

The Germans are holding positions in Nestles forest, from which their guns are shelling ineffectively.

It was late in the day before the whole of Seringes was cleared. The Germans clung to the northern part of the town tenaciously, and used their machine guns murderously.

Neither side used artillery in this particular battle. There was hand-to-hand fighting in the streets, in which the Americans proved the masters, driving the enemy before them.

No Mercy Shown in Battle.

The story of the fight for the possession of Meury Farm, lying directly south of Seringes, will long be remembered in the history of the division. The Germans, on their withdrawal, left behind a strong force of machine gunners and infantry. The Americans moved forward through the yellow wheatfields, which were sprayed and torn by bullets. But they advanced as though on a drill ground.

The American guns laid down a heavy artillery fire, but notwithstanding this many Germans remained when it came to hand-to-hand fighting. In a group of farm buildings the enemy had set up a strong defense. Here the Germans stuck to their guns, and the Americans rushed them and killed the gunners at their post.

It was a little battle, without mercy, and typical of similar engagements along the whole line. The Prussian Guards and Bavarians everywhere fought in accordance with their training, discipline, and traditions, but were outwitted and outfought.

To the north of the farm, up the long slopes leading to the woods, the Americans encountered the fiercest exhibition of Germany's war science. The Germans laid down a barrage which, it was said, was as heavy as had ever been employed. The American guns replied heavily.

The order for the advance came, and the line moved forward across the grain fields directly through the barrage. On a nearby hillside the chief staff officers watched the operation. They saw shells fall, leaving long gaps in the line in some cases, but the troops never halted.

On through the barrage the Americans went into the German positions, attacking fiercely the machine gun and infantry detachments. The barrage died away, the Germans leaving the work of resistance to the men they had failed to protect with their heavy guns.

German Forces Cut Up.

The Germans were "mopped up" and the Americans held their new line, just east of the forest. Not many prisoners were taken, but here and there a few were rounded up and brought in.

Sergeant Louis Loetz of Sioux City contributed fourteen. He attacked eighteen Germans who had become separated from their command, killing four of them and capturing the others.

Heavy execution was done by the Americans. Eight captured Guards said that they were all that remained of a company of eighty-six. Yesterday their number had been reduced to thirty and a Lieutenant. Today the Lieutenant and all but they were killed.

Corporal Chris Berthelsen of Sioux City was among the men of the first wave to cross the Ourcq River on the recent advance. They immediately went after machine guns on a hill on the north bank of the Ourcq. The fire which they opened on the enemy nest at this point was so intense that the Germans raised a white flag.

Expecting a nice bag of prisoners, the Americans rushed up, only to be opened upon again by the enemy machine guns as the Americans approached. Then the Americans let loose with the full weight of their fire against the Germans, who again raised the white flag. Twelve Germans were killed and nine captured in this operation.

chine gun at a closer range than 200 yards cannot be allowed to surrender.

Considering the good treatment we give the German wounded, their use of the Red Cross flag to shelter machine guns appears particularly dastardly.

If the Germans' withdrawal seems to be a success, it is because they use countless machine guns, of which they appear to have an inexhaustible supply. Our men, seeing what these deadly weapons can do, are very grateful that our army plans will eventually give us a great number of machine guns. Incidentally, the best German machine gun is a Maxim.

Seeing reapers at work today in wheatfields liberated by the allied offensive led me to make inquiries, which revealed that the advance of the Americans alone has freed several million bushels or ripened wheat for the use of the French people.

It happens also that the advance of the American contributed very largely to freeing the main railroad line through Château-Thierry. The Paris-Nancy line is thus freed, and will soon be in operation.

Brooklyn Boy's Story of Heroism.

I struck up a conversation last night with a weary-looking lad back from the front, and he told me a story that ought to be recorded. He is James Hyland of 121 Fort Greene Place, Brooklyn, and he used to be a law clerk. Hyland was a member of a platoon of fifty men who were ordered to go into Sergy on Sunday morning and hold a certain street.

From a wooded shelter on the northern bank of the Ourcq the platoon went across a sloping field toward Sergy. Caught under the fire of machine guns on the outskirts of the village, they kept on going. Twenty-odd of them reached Sergy and got into a poor shelter, where they were raked by machine guns and snipers. The Lieutenant in command, who is now dead, decided, inasmuch as his orders were to stay there until relieved, that he would stick.

Hyland said that in the windows of a Red Cross building three machine guns kept picking them off. The Americans fired nearly all their ammunition trying vainly to get those guns. Then they rushed them, but had to come back. Foodless and waterless, they stayed there as the long hours dragged on, and the gallant band grew smaller and smaller. All the officers had been killed, and the privates elected commanders, who one by one were shot down.

When relief reached them at 7 o'clock Hyland and one comrade were left of the fifty who had started. Hyland was in command, and the two were shooting their last bullets at the machine gunners up the street they had been told to hold.

I have heard of no instance that better tells the spirit of Americans in this war. They do not know when to quit. In fact the allegation is being made that they do not know well enough the line between proper bravery and recklessness.

FOE'S FIGHT STIFFENS IN NARROWED SALIENT

Both Sides "Feeling Each Other's Pulse" for Next Move—Region Blasted by Battle.

By WALTER DURANTY.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, July 30.—The battle is again stationary. The enemy for the moment is resisting the allied advance with good troops and a heavy concentration of guns on high ground at both sides of the salient, which is now sufficiently reduced to permit protection of its centre by crossfire from the flanks.

This morning a haze so thick as to be almost a fog over the front occupied by General Mangin doubtless contributed to the lull by hampering artillery observation.

As indicated in previous dispatches, it is a mistake to suppose that the battle is wholly progressing according to preconcived plans on both sides. True, each adversary has a fundamental scheme of endeavor, but the inevitable fluctuations of the combat produce modifications from hour to hour. Opportunism—readiness to change plans when the occasion seems favorable—has been a marked feature of the German operations in the last ten days.

Both adversaries are "feeling each other's pulse," as staff officers expressed it this morning, so as to take swift advantage of the first favorable sign, but always the situation is dominated by the fact that the Germans have suffered a costly and undeniable defeat.

It can be taken for granted that Hindenburg will do his utmost to repair the damage by a new stroke. He may not dare risk it, or be strong enough to do so, but as things are today it appears the likeliest probability on the war chessboard.

Bridges Piled in Ruins.

July 29, (Midnight.)—At the approaches to the two main bridges across the Marne at Dormans the picture of war's destruction reaches the acme of horror. Words cannot describe the confusion of twisted iron, splintered wood, hundreds of stricken horses stiffened in the incredible postures of their death agonies, and the still ghastlier remains of what had once been men.

I crossed the river below Dormans and made my way through Passy, Treloup, and Courcelles to Vincelles, which is perched on the hillside above the plain opposite Dormans. Each village and the plain itself bore increasing evidence of the gallant advance of the scanty first French detachments and the bitter reluctance of the enemy, though dominated by superior artillery, to abandon the positions that gave them command of the Marne. Even now, in the woods two or three miles northward, they are offering determined resistance.

"I must admit that the boche is a tenacious brute," said a French Lieutenant just back from the firing line. "This Guard division has been smashed to pieces, yet the remnant fights just as hard. Cornered rats, I suppose. Anyway, it shows that their discipline is still strong, that men will sell their lives thus without hope.

"Again and again we are delayed by a lone mitrailleuse in some unexpected place—the middle of a cornfield, for instance—and have to wait until it is ousted by crossfire or grenades before the advance can proceed. Sometimes there are groups of them, and then we usually call on the artillery."

Germans Leave Many Dead.

We were standing amid the ruins of Vincelles, over which alone in the whole region German shells still screamed from time to time. Here death and devastation had reached their climax. Houses were smitten as by an earthquake, and the roadway was blocked with débris. Every few yards stones were yellowed by mustard gas, and from each room or courtyard that remained intact dense swarms of flies rose at our approach in warning of sights it were better not to see.

"There are 400 or 500 dead boches here," said the Lieutenant calmly. "At least that. They were mostly killed by our shells, as there was little street fighting. We shall never be able to get them out of this rubbish for burial. To my mind the best thing would be to blot the whole place off the map with dynamite. Just look at that!"

"That" consisted of five blackened fingers of a German hand outstretched from a huge stone heap as if in final supplication. Such is war as Germany has brought it upon the world.

If there still be people in America who think that the Central Empires should be spared to recover forces for a new effort, let them picture the Marne Valley as I have tried to show it, and think of their own home towns in a similar condition.

GERMANS FOUGHT HARD TO KEEP THE OURCQ

Also Contested Fere Fiercely in Hand-to-Hand Struggle from Street to Street.

ON THE FRENCH FRONT, July 29, 8 A. M.—A characteristic feature of yesterday's battle in the pocket between Soissons and Rheims, where the Germans are making a desperate effort to get away with as much material and as many men as possible, was a recrudescence of the enemy's resistance.

Compared with Saturday, the enemy fought with extreme determination, and the allied advance, although it continued pretty generally all along the line, except on the two extreme wings, met with very obstinate opposition. Very soon after dawn the allied patrols reached Fère-en-Tardenois, which they found strongly occupied by enemy troops, which were not ready to cede ground without a contest.

When the allied supports came up the men soon got to close grips, and individual combats went on in the streets for some hours. The issue was never in doubt, but the struggle was hard, and eventually the Allies came out victorious.

What remained of the Germans made for the other bank of the Ourcq. There they joined hands with other sections of their comrades, who had taken up positions to oppose the passage of the Allies to the northern side. All bridges had been destroyed or rendered useless, but the river is not very wide hereabout, and a long period of dry weather had diminished the volume of water. The Germans had the assistance of their artillery, which worked hard in trying to keep back the allied troops, who, however, managed to obtain a footing on the northern bank, and soon firmly established themselves there.

Forest of Riz Cleared.

In the Forest of Riz northwest of Dormans, almost in the centre of the German salient, there was some very serious fighting, in which both big guns and infantry took part. The whole forest was cleared of Germans, and the village of Champvoisy was occupied.

Later on French patrols reached the village of Ronchères. Some parties of allied cavalry were sent forward into Meunière Wood, a little further to the east, and occupied Villers-Agron. The Germans made great use of gas shells in this thickly wooded country, but the precautions taken sufficed to nullify their effects.

The national road leading from Dormans to Rheims was the scene of continual heavy fighting, which resulted in the Allies getting across it and taking up positions on the northern side in the vicinity of Romigny and Bligny.

On the eastern flank of the pocket the Allies have now got beyond the broken wooded ground and have obtained a foothold on the plateau. Their progress here was slow in consequence of the great number of machine guns with which the enemy barred their advance.

Ville-en-Tardenois was last night still in dispute, but the allied troops had gained the southern suburb.

Artillery Fighting Heavy.

1:45 P. M.—The German guns spoke loudly last night and throughout this morning both north and south of the Ourcq, and the artillery duel was one of the heaviest heard since the beginning of the allied counterstroke.

Northward of Fère-en-Tardenois the Allies, including the French and Americans, made a further advance today, notwithstanding repeated German attempts to force them back. Further southeast there was a continuous battle throughout the early hours, and the village of Sergy changed hands no fewer than four times within a few hours. At the end Sergy remained in our possession, with Germans not far away.

In the vicinity of Ronchères the Americans sustained a very strong attack by a famous Guards division, and eventually thrust back troops picked from the district around the Prussian capital, after inflicting upon them most severe losses.

On the German left flank, southwest of Rheims, the artillery fire was also very heavy during the night, and this morning the enemy threw thousands of gas shells into both the Marne and Ardre Valleys, hoping to catch concentrations of allied troops, but most of their projectiles were ineffective.

The Germans are showing strong determination to cling to the line starting from Ville-en-Tardenois and passing along the northern bank of the Ourcq, at least for the moment. Ville-en-Tardenois is still occupied firmly by the Germans, with whom advanced guards of the Allies in the southern portion of the town are keeping the closest contact.

In Cohette Wood, somewhat further south, there was much fighting, but eventually the Allies chased out the enemy, who left behind him two field guns and two six-inch guns, with large quantities of ammunition and other material.

Advance North of the Ourcq.

5:30 P. M.—The allied troops shortly after dawn this morning hit the Germans another very sharp blow north of the Ourcq. They captured a section of important territory, reducing the pocket, and took a number of prisoners. The region where the attack took place was just beyond Oulchy-le-Château, and the progress which was made by the Allies, whose advance seems to be continuing normally, gave them possession of Grand Rozoy.

The advancing troops when this dispatch was written were approaching two dominant heights, numbered 205 and 208, whose possession would give the Allies fine views right over Fismes, where the enemy has an enormous supply of dumps and concentrations of troops.

Other parties of the Allies crossed the Ourcq further eastward and captured Corbeny Farm, southwest of Saponay.

STYLES OUR ATTACK "ALMOST INCREDIBLE"

Coolness and Steadiness of American Drive at Seringes Stir Observer to Admiration.

LONDON, July 30.—The Reuter correspondent with the American Army on the Aisne-Marne front sends the following under Tuesday's date:

"Yesterday was a day of ceaseless fighting in which little actual progress could be made. The enemy offered a most determined resistance and brought up fresh troops, but, although he delayed us for a day, my conviction is unaltered that the Germans have no intention of standing this side of the Vesle.

"Throughout yesterday the enemy's machine gun fire scarcely ceased, even when apparently none of our men were in the open. The fire swept every bit of cover where they might be expected to be, and during the morning was strongly backed by artillery, whose fire slackened in the afternoon, except at this hour when our attack on Seringes is in progress.

"Soon after they recaptured Sergy, the Americans, who forced the passage of the Ourcq overnight, advanced up the narrow valley dividing the hill behind Sergy, and, after a fight in which the bayonet and the rifle butt were almost alone used, took Meuroy Farm, about a mile up the valley.

"This was preliminary to an attack on Seringes, as from the farm it was possible to outflank the Seringes defenses and approach them by a less steep ascent.

"The enemy held Seringes in great strength. The village was also protected by machine gun nests on either side. The attack was an almost incredible affair, for the coolness with which it was carried out and for the mere fact that it could be done under such conditions.

"It was plain that the Guard division had been bitterly chagrined by the loss of Sergy the previous evening after four times having retaken it. Therefore it was no surprise when, shortly after dawn, they launched a fresh attack from both sides of the southernmost angle of the Nesles Forest. The attack was backed by field guns and with a ragged barrage on our second line and batteries, the enemy's gun positions above Clerges being well placed for a flanking fire, which the holders of Sergy found most trying.

"They were forced to withdraw from it and fall back across the river. The enemy was permitted a few unpleasant hours of occupation, during which he did his best to improve the defenses, and daringly brought some field guns toward the brow of the hill above it. But these apparently found the price of their daring much too high and the American gunfire too accurate, for their disappearance was more rapid than dignified.

"As they fell back what one hopes may have been the last American attack on Sergy developed. The Guards, apparently, had been shaken by their last exploit and, though in a few instances they stayed to face the bayonet, the fighting was less desperate than the day before.

"The assaulting troops formed upon the south side of the Ourcq on open ground. The enemy opened a heavy fire of artillery and machine guns along the slopes east and west of the river. The ground in front of the advancing lines were plowed by the enemy's fire, and the advance was obscured by clouds of dust from the cornfields through which they were marching. Nevertheless the men forded the river with drill-like steadiness.

"It was a wonderful performance for any troops, astounding for troops so recently blooded, and as fine a test as any to which the American Army has been put.

"The men went steadily up the slopes, silenced one after another the German machine gun nests, and swept on to the top of the hill, then, wheeling eastward, stormed the village..

"It was a fierce fight. There was no asking or giving quarter. The enemy was stout-hearted, and the Americans were glad to find him so. They wanted that sort of a finish to their ordeal. Some of the Germans fled into Nesles forest. The remainder are where they will remain—in the village.

"The last success of the day was the capture of Hill 212, above Sergy, which can now be held on much securer terms.

"So, once more the line is re-established, although the Germans are still apparently holding the pocket at Clerges, from which it seems nobody has yet turned them."

"Some progress may be looked for today. The forest lying right ahead of our advance will take some clearing. Prisoners say the enemy is making elaborate preparations to hold it, one of his best regiments being detailed for the task. Troops were seen this morning marching into Nesles, a little village below the forest.

"Prisoners report severe losses. Two stretcher bearers say their company went into action with reduced numbers and that this morning the commanding Lieutenant told them that only thirty men were left, while during this morning's fight all the remaining thirty were killed. Almost all their casualties, the prisoners said, were from rifle and machine gun fire.

"The enemy is still retreating, but it it very plain that we have slow work before us."

FIGHT LIKE FRANCE'S BEST.

American Troops Praised by Tardieu—"Too Brave," Says Premier.

PARIS, July 30.—American soldiers in the fighting on the Marne salient showed themselves equal to the best French troops, said André Tardieu, French High Commissioner to the United States, at a dinner in his honor last night at the American University Union. Professor George Nettleton of Yale University presided, and representatives of many American universities and colleges were present.

Captain Tardieu expressed the opinion that the dark days were over, but that there were hard months ahead. He said:

"The first great battle in which your own troops have participated extensively has been a great victory. The part taken by your soldiers is well known in France. The soldiers of the American divisions, which on the morning of July 18 gained six kilometers, have shown themselves to be the equal of the best French troops. Your rank and file, officers and staffs, are deserving of the same praise.

"Every one at the front, including the enemy, knows well what the American Army is worth and what new power will be let loose in the course of the next few weeks under the folds of the Star-Spangled Banner.

"The war is not over yet. Hard months are ahead of us, but we have already taken the initiative. As far as numbers go the critical times are over with us. Under the strong leadership of a chief who is worthy of France—Premier Clemenceau—we have held our ground. Today, after some time on the defensive, the time for a victorious attack has come and the dark days are over.

"While greeting the completion of the first million American troops in France we have greeted the first success. In common with you Americans we and our gallant Allies are standing ready for the supreme effort. The faith which is inspiring us will not falter.

"In our crusade for the democracies of the world we are progressing steadily toward our goal. Through the wonderful unity and force of the minds and hearts of your countrymen we can expect to reap the reward—the liberation of all peoples—which we anticipate from our sacrifices."

William G. Sharp, the American Ambassador, said in response:

"American soldiers could not help being brave after such examples of magnificent courage as are displayed by the French troops. The first million is here. Another million will follow, and as many millions as are necessary to bring the cause of democracy to a victorious peace. Only the other day Premier Clemenceau, the Grand Old Man of France, said to me:

"'I have a reproach to make to you. Your soldiers are too brave, too reckless with their lives.'

"I replied that this was the best reproach I could expect to hear. I much prefer that Americans should sin on the side of bravery, recklessness, and determination than on the side of timidity."

Major Perkins, European Commissioner for the American Red Cross, and Professor Paul Van Dyke of Princeton spoke of the determination of the United States to carry on the war until victory.

CONGRESSMEN SAW BATTLE AT SERGY

VISITED CHATEAU-THIERRY

There Saw a French Woman Unearth the Treasure She Buried When She Fled Before Germans.

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES ON THE AISNE-MARNE FRONT, July 30, (Associated Press.)—Six war-weary American Congressmen are on their way back to Paris today after having witnessed from a hillside on Monday the tussle for possession of Sergy, two and a half miles southeast of the former German base at Fère-en-Tardenois in the Soissons-Rheims pocket.

The Congressmen saw American infantrymen in action, witnessed the firing of the big guns, and heard the rattle of German machine guns and the crashing of the heavy cannon of the German Crown Prince. They probably would have remained on the eminence longer had not the German heavy shells begun exploding overhead. That ended the sightseeing trip in that vicinity, one Representative remarking that the Germans could quit that sort of business right then so far as he was concerned.

The Congressmen, who had visited the Austro-Italian front, said that their observations on Monday showed to them the first actual fighting worth talking about. The party was conducted by Lieutenant Freeman Light of South Norwalk, Conn., and it consisted of Representatives Thomas A. Chandler of Oklahoma, M. Clyde Kelly of Pennsylvania, Louis C. Cramton of Michigan, Thaddeus H. Caraway of Arkansas, John A. Elston of California, and Joseph Thompson of Oklahoma.

The Congressmen had luncheon on the hillside of Château-Thierry amid the ruins of numerous fine homes, the lazy Marne creeping along through a great gap in what was Château-Thierry's finest bridge and now destroyed by the Germans.

While the Congressmen were sitting down to a basket luncheon a fashionably attired woman from Paris came to the ruins of her old home, where she found a group of American soldiers in possession. The woman explained her mission in broken English. She went to the basement, requested the aid of the American soldiers, and had a private dig a hole in the basement at a point indicated by her. The soldier soon uncovered a basketful of bonds, securities, and other valuables. Among them were a lot of 5 per cent. gold $100 bonds of the defunct St. Louis, Oklahoma & Gulf Railroad. The woman gave the soldier three bonds for his trouble.

The Congressmen visited the shattered houses in Château-Thierry and also the hillside dugouts formerly occupied by the Germans, gathering numerous souvenirs. They then proceeded toward the battlefield, eventually reaching the hill southeast of Fère-en-Tardenois.

When the Germans began replying to the Allies' fire in earnest the Congressmen decided that it was about time to adjourn, and did so, leaving behind the souvenirs they had gathered at Château-Thierry. On their way to the rear, however, they passed through the Forest of Fère, visiting additional former German dugouts and camps, and gathered up another assortment of rifles, helmets, and various articles, which they took back.

The Congressmen also visited a field hospital, having seen stretcher bearers bringing in wounded men from the field. They were satisfied that everything possible was being done for the men on the front lines and for those who fell in the fighting.

"JIMMY" HYLAND WROTE OF ANGER AT GERMANS

Men of Old 69th Eager to Punish Them for Cruelty to French Women and Children.

The fifty men who made the heroic stand in the streets of Sergy, as reported in a NEW YORK TIMES dispatch from the front this morning, were members of the 165th Infantry, the former "Fighting 69th," if twenty-one-year-old "Jimmy" Hyland was fighting with his old regiment. Inquiry last night at 121 Fort Greene Place, Brooklyn, disclosed that Hyland, up to the time the 165th was federalized, lived at that address with his father, James Hyland, now a shipbuilder, employed at Elizabethport, N. J.

The Hylands boarded with Mrs. Mary Lee. She said last night that young Hyland enlisted in the 69th New York early in 1916, and when that regiment went to Mission, Texas, in the border mobilization, he went along in Company K. When the 69th returned he retained his enlistment and several months later was promoted to a Sergeantcy.

Mrs. Lee said that Hyland was born in Brooklyn and had received his education at a Roman Catholic parochial school. His last position was with the law firm of Brooks & Brooks at 12 Broadway, Manhattan.

In letters, which his father went over to Brooklyn once a week to get, Sergeant Hyland told how much impressed he was with the destruction of northern France. He mentioned the long streams of maimed and weary women and children wandering about aimlessly, their former homes destroyed by the Germans. Hyland said that he had one ambition in life after seeing the things which the Germans had done, and that was to get into the first line trenches "and stay there till my fingers are burned holding the rifle, with which I'll keep pumping bullets at them."

His last letter was dated June 5, and in it he wrote of the anger of the men of the 165th and their desire to keep fighting night and day "to even up for the things the Germans have done to these women and children."

Official Reports of the Day's Operations

French

PARIS, July 30.

Night Report—On the right bank of the Ourcq some local fighting enabled us to advance on the height to the northeast of Fère-en-Tardenois.

In the region of Sergy we maintained our gains, in spite of several reactions by the enemy.

Southwest of Rheims the Germans attacked on both sides of St. Euphraise. All their attempts to capture St. Euphraise failed, in spite of a slight advance made by them to the west of the village.

There is nothing of importance to report from the rest of the front.

Day Report—During the night no event of importance was reported from the front north of the Marne.

German

BERLIN, July 30, (via London.)

Night Report—After his defeat of yesterday the enemy has remained quiet.

Day Report—There has been lively reconnoitring activity during the night. Partial attacks by the British in the region of Merris and on both sides of the Ayette were repulsed.

The enemy launched attacks with strong forces against our new lines north of the Ourcq and on our positions on the wooded heights southwest of Rheims. The French, British, and Americans were thrown back on the whole of their attacking front with the heaviest of losses.

The main weight of the enemy's attack was directed against the Hartennes-Fère-en-Tardenois front, where during the morning and afternoon the enemy stormed again and again in dense waves. His assaults broke down before and at our lines, sometimes under our counterattacks.

In the afternoon the enemy extended his attack beyond Fère-en-Tardenois eastward. They were just as unsuccessful as partial attacks he launched in the morning at the Bois Meunière.

Southwest of Rheims the enemy renewed his attack as many as five times at isolated points between Chambrecy and Vrigny, keeping them up in violent partial attacks until late in the evening. He was repulsed everywhere with sanguinary losses.

In Champagne, south of Mont Ficstel, we drove the enemy out of trenches which he had occupied since his thrust of Saturday, and captured an enemy point of support northeast of Perthes.

AUSTRALIANS RUSH TWO GERMAN LINES

Village of Merris Taken and High Ground in Front of Amiens Cleared.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, July 30.—The local exploit of the Australians between the Ancre and the Somme early yesterday morning has been entirely successful.

Flowing from the northeast in a deep and wooded valley, the small river Ancre comes gradually to meet the Somme at a point about six miles east of Amiens. A long tongue of land rising high between the rivers forms, as it were, a spearpoint thrusting toward the Cathedral City. Close to the union of the rivers stands the town of Corbie, now uninhabited and much ruined by shells, though the double towers of its great church still stand.

For the safety of Amiens it was essential that the enemy's lines should be pushed back along this peninsula or projection of high ground which dominates the two river valleys as they approach their junction, and the Australian Corps commander has succeeded in this restraining movement by a series of small, repeated actions, of which yesterday's was the latest. He employed Victorian troops, who, by attacking soon after midnight, rushed two German lines and advanced 500 yards on a front of 4,000 yards, as already reported.

The German front line now consists chiefly of unconnected points without continuous trenches. A second or supporting line is entrenched along its whole length. Both lines were vigorously held, at least in parts, as is proved by the number of bayonet wounds received by the British, a rare occurrence; yet the casualties were slight, and the number of prisoners taken amounted last night to 150, besides some wounded prisoners still expected.

Standing on high ground behind the line of the advance, one can realize the importance of this small action, for the line extends on both sides of the high road from Corbie to Bray, and now has pushed back the enemy on to the villages of Morlancourt and Sailly Laurette. Over the latter village and the neighboring woods close down to the Somme, which is here transformed into a series of lakes and canals, British guns were throwing shrapnel and heavy shell all yesterday afternoon, while the infantry consolidated the position. The German guns answered with occasional 5.9's.

Many streets and some public buildings in Amiens itself are already ruined. The cathedral has hitherto escaped serious damage. Most of the stone carving, the statues on the west front, and the porches are protected by sandbags, and so are the famous wooden stalls of the choir. Much of the glass has been removed, but some shells have struck the roof and surrounding houses.

Next to the loss of life and the damage to buildings, the most lamentable evidence of the war in this district is the vast extent of the splendid harvest, now almost ripe, but never to be reaped.

Later a similar small action to the above, also executed by the Australian Division, is reported this morning at Merris, near the Meteren section.

LONDON, July 30. — Australian troops have completely occupied the Village of Merris, southwest of Ypres, according to Field Marshal Haig's report from British Headquarters tonight.

The day bulletin of the War Office, telling of the beginning of the operation, says:

> We captured a few prisoners last night in a successful raid in the neighborhood of Ayette.
>
> Shortly after midnight Australian patrols entered the enemy's positions about Merris. Forty prisoners have been taken by our troops in this locality.
>
> The hostile artillery has been active with gas shells northwest of Albert, and has also shown activity at a number of points between La Bassée Canal and Ypres.

General Haig's report is as follows:

> During the latter part of the night patrols of the 1st Australian Division, who had entered German positions about Merris, successfully established themselves east of the village, which they surrounded and captured. One hundred and sixty-nine prisoners and a number of trench mortars and machine guns were taken by us in the course of this enterprise. Our casualties were light. A few additional prisoners were captured by our patrols during the day in Nieppe Forest.
>

GERMAN PLANES COLLIDE IN FIGHT, 4 GERMANS DIE

American Flier, Single-Handed, Attacks Enemy Who Bombed Dressing Station.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE AISNE-MARNE FRONT, July 30, (Associated Press.)—After daylight on Tuesday two German aviators, with machine gunners aboard, flying low, attacked an American supply train south of Sergy. They were driven off by anti-aircraft guns.

The Germans later attacked a dressing station. Word of this having been sent to the aerial commander, an American aviator soon arrived and, single-handed, attacked the enemy from above. In trying to get away the Germans collided. The wings of their machines locked and the planes fell, both aviators and gunners being killed.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, July 30, (Associated Press.)—Lieutenant A. R. Brooks of Framingham, Mass., and Lieutenant David E. Putnam of Newton, Mass., report that they probably brought down an enemy airplane last night behind the German lines at Montsec. The fight was the first in the Toul sector for several days.

GERMAN RETREAT AS MAURICE SEES IT

Only Possible Explanation Is That Defense Had Been Worn Down, General Says.

AMERICANS A BIG FACTOR

Effect of Dash and Enthusiasm of New Troops Among War-Weary Armies Tremendous.

By Major Gen. Sir FREDERICK MAURICE.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 30.—There is only one possible explanation of the German retreat "according to plan," and that is that the defense has been worn down by steady progress of the attack.

As I have already explained, there was nothing in the shape of the German salient or in the character of the ground which the enemy occupied to make it peculiarly difficult for him to hold the line of the Ourcq until his internal communications had been reorganized. Foch's counterattack was delivered on the western flank of the salient, and that flank, from Soissons as far south as the Ourcq, near Oulchy-le-Château, had been holding well since the first days of the allied advance, while on the other flank, between Rheims and the Marne, our progress has not been such as in any way to endanger the retreat of the German troops on the southern front.

Therefore there has never been any question of these troops being pinched out and of the Allies making by such means large captures of prisoners and guns.

This southern front has been in the greatest difficulties owing to the breakdown of the German communications inside the salient, and the allied pressure upon them has been too incessant to allow the exhausted troops to be relieved and a new line of defense to be formed. The Germans required time to enable them to settle down on the line of the Ourcq through Fère-en-Tardenois, and they could not gain the necessary time.

Among the causes of this failure I should place very high the effect of the dash and energy of the American troops. All the other armies now fighting are more or less war weary and they all contain a high proportion of lads and of middle-aged men. Therefore the appearance of a new army in the field with its eagerness and enthusiasm unimpaired and composed of the pick of the manhood of a great nation must be out of all proportion to its numerical strength.

It would be absurd to suppose that anything like the million and a quarter of Americans who, we are told, have been shipped from the United States, have taken part in this battle or are anywhere on the front.

The military power of America is only just beginning to make itself felt, and the most hopeful and encouraging feature of this battle is that that beginning has been so effective, for, I would repeat, it has not been the danger of the Allies driving in the flanks of the salient which has caused the Germans to withdraw, as the danger of the German progress on our flanks at Cambrai and in the second battle of Ypres caused us to withdraw, but the defeat of the enemy on the southern front by the French-American forces opposed to them.

In fact, the German retreat has been caused by direct pressure, and has not been carried out in order to avoid the contingent danger.

I am inclined to think that it is doubtful weather the enemy has yet got a complete defensive line either on the Vesle or on the Aisne, and it looks as if he were still trying hard to gain time, for there would be no point in sacrificing men in a counterattack if he had made up his mind as to how far he intended to withdraw and had all his arrangements for withdrawal ready.

In fact, the battle is continuing under conditions which are very unfavorable to the enemy, and it still seems to me premature to prophesy as to how and when it will end.

The French-American advance at Fère-en-Tardenois and across the Ourcq has had the effect of turning the front between Soissons and the Ourcq, and it has, in consequence, begun to crumble.

The Butte de Chalmont, a big hill dominating Oulchy-le-Château and Nanteuil, which has formed the buttress of the western face of the salient, has fallen into our hands, and it is clear from the presence of Scotch troops at Buzancy that Foch is taking advantage of the allied progress in the south to reinforce his attack on the Soissons front, and so, by maintaining pressure on the enemy all around the salient, to keep the initiative which he has won in this battle and prevent the enemy from obtaining the time he wants to establish a new front.

The enemy is carrying out his retreat in good order under cover of strong rear guards plentifully supplied with machine guns, and in broken and wooded country, such as forms the present battlefield, the delaying power of machine guns is very great. It is therefore not at all likely that we shall be able to cut off any considerable part of the German force in the salient, but this will in no way detract from the completeness of the allied victory.

If the enemy had been able to strike elsewhere and gain some conspicuous success before his retreat he might perfectly well argue that he had changed his plans owing to altered circumstances, and had decided to employ his troops where they could be used more effectively, but no argument will now alter the fact that the second battle of the Marne has ended like the first, in complete German defeat.

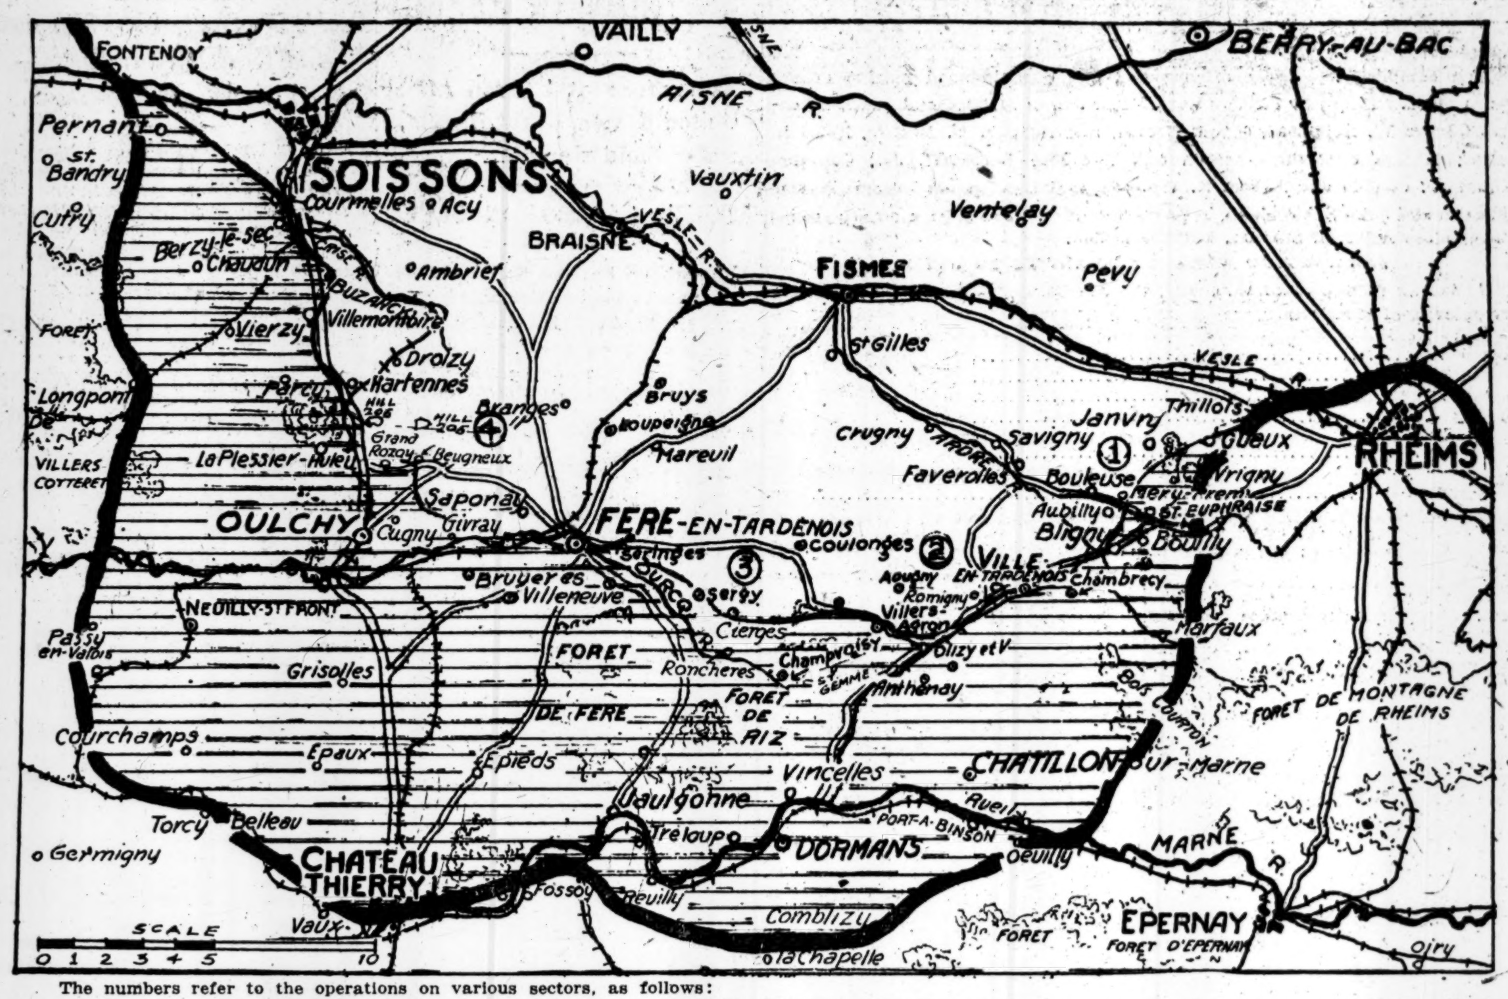
We must, however, keep in mind that what we have achieved so far is to prevent the enemy from obtaining the decisive results which the German General Staff and their friends at home confidently believed to be within their grasp. This is no small matter, but it is in its essence a measure of defense and has, for example, as one of its chief results, removed the danger to Paris.

But we are still left with a long way to go before we can obtain a satisfactory decision in our favor, and the situation calls for an increase rather than a slackening of our efforts, so that we may be able to shorten the war by taking every possible advantage of the successes we have gained.

There has been very natural tendency to exaggerate the effect of Foch's bolt from the blue, and there is little doubt but that these exaggerations have been used for their own purpose by agitators in fomenting the strike which has so happily collapsed.

The enemy are quite certain to try to follow up their practice in the past of bringing the year's campaign to an end with some show of success, which will carry their people through the period of Winter gloom and inactivity. We must keep our eyes skinned if we are not again to be caught out as we have been aforetime.

The Situation on the Marne Battlefront



The numbers refer to the operations on various sectors, as follows:

(1) By a hard thrust the Germans have won a little ground west of St. Euphraise. The French, however, have gained along the Ardre in the neighborhood of Aubilly.

(2) The Allies have taken Romigny.

(3) Americans and French have made important progress near Fére, the United States troops driving nearly two miles north of Sergy.

(4) French troops are making an advance north of Grand Rozoy.

FOE SPREADS YARNS ABOUT OUR LOSSES

BUT ADMITS THEIR VALOR

Washington Points Out That Retreating Foe Is Not in a Position to Count Our Dead.

AMSTERDAM, July 30.—The Berlin Vorwärts correspondent at the front telegraphs the following under date of July 27:

"In the battle between the Aisne and the Marne the Entente for the first time threw American forces into the fire. As a result of personal inquiries among the divisions of Generals von Etzel and von Watter in the centre of the German front I am able to state the following:

"The Americans fought partly in serried divisions, partly incorporated in the French forces. Of the regiments now in the battle, most have been over a year in France, the others were only superficially trained in America and on the Continent. Their equipment is excellent throughout.

"The new American Army, like the French, has a number of negro divisions, but these have not yet been thrown into the battle.

"Among the American prisoners a surprisingly large percentage bear German names. They say men of German descent are prominent among the American Army leaders.

"The consensus of opinion among our front troops is that the fighting value of the American troops should in no wise be underrated. Boastful of their American superiority and in high spirits, owing to the fulsome flattery of the French public, they rush into the fire with naïve recklessness, but as they have not yet learned to fight in extended order and how to protect themselves skillfully from artillery fire, their losses are immensely heavier than the others.

"The piles of American dead, for instance, fronting Monthiers Hill is only comparable with the Russian corpse-strewn fields at the time of Brussiloff's offensive.

"Keen as the Americans are in attack, they are clumsy enough in defense. All the German counterthrusts, even by the smallest detachments, have so far been successful when directed against the Americans.

"From July 21, when the German counteraction set in, the Americans suffered casualties which officers who participated place at between 50 and 75 per cent. The result was that several American divisions had to be relieved after there had been no more than five days' fighting."

ONLY GERMAN PROPAGANDA.

Vorwaerts Story of American Losses Ridiculed in Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Army officials regard with some amusement the statements attributed to the German Socialist paper Vorwärts to the effect that the American Army sustained staggering losses in the recent fighting through inability to protect themselves against artillery fire. Nothing has been received by the War Department to show that the losses of the American forces have been anywhere near that represented by the German organ.

If, as asserted by Vorwärts, the American regiments sustained such losses it is considered rather remarkable that what was left of the American Army should have been able to hammer the Germans so hard. As a matter of fact, it was pointed out tonight, the Germans are not in a position to know the losses sustained by the Americans other than in prisoners taken, whereas the American forces are able, because they are advancing, to know the German losses.

The Vorwärts statement is nothing but German propaganda. Vorwärts, other German papers and the Wolff Agency have undertaken to misrepresent the situation. They count on making it appear to the German people that the ground lost by the Germans has been only at the cost of a terrific toll of life for the French and Americans. Only a few weeks ago the German Government was ridiculing the forces of the Americans in France and denying that we had enough men there to count. Now, in an effort to deceive the German public, they are spreading reports that our losses are astounding.

The Wolff Agency a few days ago sent broadcast by German wireless the report that the American troops were "cannon fodder." Besides trying to appeal to the German public by such propaganda the German Government-controlled press is seeking also to undermine American morale at home by making it appear that our losses are "horrible."

When Secretary Baker's attention was called to the Wolff Agency report which referred to American troops as "cannon fodder" several days ago, he said: "The best information we have seems to indicate that they are themselves supplying most of that material at the present time. We have no reports on our own casualties as yet, but our own people have a much better opportunity to know our losses than the Germans have, because we are taking ground and they have been giving ground, and in that situation we have a superior opportunity for observation."

FEAR TALKING UNDER ETHER.

Germans Train Themselves to Count "One, Two, Three" Monotonously.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE AISNE-MARNE FRONT, July 30, (Associated Press.)—Brought to an American dressing station on the banks of the Ourcq, a wounded German Captain kept repeating "one, two, three" monotonously, but with an earnestness indicative of his concentration. An inquiry to a nurse elicited this explanation:

"Oh, all the German officers do that."

"You see," said the nurse, who was administering ether preliminary to an operation upon the German officer, "an average person talks when under the anaesthetic. It is like talking in your sleep. The Germans know this and every officer we get goes under the ether while counting. The result is that instead of talking and giving information they keep right on counting."

"FIGHTING HEAVY"—PERSHING.

Counterattacks by the Enemy Met by Our Troops.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Severe fighting resulting from heavy counterattacks by fresh enemy troops beyond the line of the Ourcq was reported in General Pershing's communiqué for yesterday, received today at the War Department. It reads:

"Headquarters, American Expeditionary Forces.
"July 29, 1918.

"Section A.—Beyond the line of the Ourcq heavy counterattacks made by fresh troops of the enemy have resulted in severe fighting. Sergy, taken by our troops yesterday after having changed hands four times, remains in our possession.

"Section B.—There is nothing to report in this section."

THINK FOE PLANS A STAND.

Paris Observers Believe He Will Halt His Retreat.

PARIS, July 30.—The fierceness of the fighting Monday, it is believed here, is a sign that the German retreat has reached its limit and that the enemy will make a stand with his right wing on the plateau south of the Crise and with his left on the hill south of the Ardre.

For the defense of this line, it is held, the Germans will devote all of General von Boehn's army and the reserve divisions taken from Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria.

MACHINE GUNS USED ON GERMAN STRIKERS

Leaders at Kalk Arrested, but Crowds Continued to Gather in the Streets.

AMSTERDAM, July 30.—A new strike has broken out at Kalk, in Rhenish Prussia, near Cologne, according to the Echo Belge. Machine guns were used to suppress the movement and the leaders were arrested, the newspaper says.

The police, it is added, were still busy when the report was sent, dispersing the crowds which continued to gather in the streets.

WOMEN RIOT AT ESSEN.

Fear Sending of Relatives to Front When Dutch Workmen Arrive.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, July 30, (Dispatch to London Daily Express.)—Dutch workmen who have just returned from Essen tell me that Essen womenfolk have decided that no more neutral workmen shall work at Krupp's during the war.

When the last batch of Dutchmen arrived at Essen last week thousands of women greeted them on the station square with stones and shouts of "Down with neutral job stealers!" The reason for the outcry is that for every Dutchman who goes to Krupp's workshops one more German workman is sent to the front. The women are determined that any Dutchman arriving in Essen shall be stoned.

The police of Essen, who are reduced to one-tenth of their peace-time strength, are helpless.

STRIP CAPTIVE AMERICANS.

Germans Give Them Other Clothes, Probably to Deceive Public.

PARIS, July 30.—Information reaching Paris from Swiss sources tends to show that the Germans still are trying to keep from their people the fact that American troops are now engaged in battle on the Soissons-Rheims sector.

These advices say that the Germans recently stripped the uniforms from a number of Americans they had captured and gave them other clothing to wear.

FRENCH SOCIALISTS TAKE SLAP AT ALLIES

Oppose Intervention In Russia and Also Hit Members Siding with Our Labor Men.

NARROW MAJORITY WINS

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 30.—If the French Socialist Party were not at present in an almost amusing state of topsy-turveydom and incoherence, the vote which was taken at the close of their national congress yesterday might lead many patriots to tremble for the difficulty which this section of the French political world may cause the allied cause in the near future.

The resolution which obtained final acceptance, although by a very small majority, pledged the party against intervention by the Allies in Russia and "under no pretext to favor projects of a Russian counter revolution."

A further resolution records the regret of the party at "recent manifestation by certain members of its parliamentary group who, contrary to the clearly expressed decisions of all the national sections of interallied socialism, have taken up an attitude in connection with the American Labor Federation, which is in open opposition with such decisions."

This refers to the action of M. Albert Thomas and forty other Socialist Deputies who indorsed the attitude of the American labor delegates, who recently came to Paris and met French Socialists in conference.

The Americans refused flatly, much to the disgust of the majority of French Socialist members of the conference to consent to meet enemy Socialists "in any kind of international congress." As a result Mr. Thomas and other patriotic Socialist Deputies took their courage in their hands and ranged themselves beside the American delegates. They have since formed a new section of the party in open dissent with the majority of the present delegates of the rest of the party.

That vote means theoretically that the French Socialist Party which has just over 100 representatives in the chamber and claims to represent the working classes of France has pledged itself to be a stumbling block to the Allies on the road to victory. Practically it means nothing of the kind.

Although the extremist members of the party, represented by Jean Longuet and the Kienthalians and Zimmerwaldians, succeeded in getting their resolution carried and thereby passed from a minority to majority and henceforward appear to control the entire party, they won by only a bare majority and were inclined, instead of smiling, to show wry faces at their triumph.

All the smiles were on the faces of Mr. Thomas and the rest of the former majoritaires, who realize that their antipatriotic comrades have won only a hollow victory. If the new leaders of the party make the mistake of carrying out their threat to expel from the party Mr. Thomas and the rest of the "superpatriots," as they are derisively called by Longuet and his friends, nobody will rejoice more than the threatened ones.

Mr. Thomas and his friends are convinced that Longuet and the Internationalists is no way represent the real attitude of the rank and file of French Socialists, and would welcome any chance, such as general action, that would enable them to prove their theory.

There is at the same time every indication that the bulk of the French working classes are now out of sympathy with the Parliamentary Representatives they elected before the war came to upset all values and aspirations, and that they are solid with the rest of France in whole-hearted desire to bring about victory and in their determination not to tolerate any intrigues with the enemy in the form of international conferences.

Yesterday's discussion showed that only strict sense of party discipline prevented a manifestation of the same feeling even among those who voted with the majority and that the coming national congress, which will be held in Paris in two months, will probably reveal that the party has been purged of most of its anti-patriotic tendencies.

PARIS, July 30.—A resolution demanding that the French Government revise its war aims, denounce imperialistic tendencies, and set forth clearly its peace terms on a basis defined by President Wilson has been adopted by the French Socialist Party. It was presented before the National Council of the party by a minority section headed by Jean Longuet, Socialist member of the Chamber of Deputies.

The resolution demands, further, that the preliminary negotiations for a League of Nations be commenced at once in accordance with the terms and the spirit indicated by President Wilson. It also adheres unreservedly to the reunion of the International Socialist Congress and declares the party ready to accept the invitation of Camille Huysmans, Secretary of the International Socialists and Belgian Socialist leader; Hjalmar Branting, the Swedish Socialist, and Pieter J. Troelstra, the Dutch Socialist leader, for a meeting of Socialists at Berne. In conjunction with other allied Socialist bodies, the resolution declares, every means, even to a refusal to vote war appropriations, should be taken to force the Governments to issue the necessary passports for Socialist delegates who wish to attend this conference.

BATTLE'S CRISES NEAR, WASHINGTON BELIEVES

Fury of Engagement Forbids Decision Being Long Delayed, Officials Say.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—The second battle of the Marne has entered a new phase. Both French and German official statements tonight reflected the increased fury of the fighting for several days past, indicating to officials here that a new crisis is apporaching. The decision cannot be long delayed, although relatively small changes in the battle line were noted tonight.

It was not clear whether the enemy had reached a line on which he proposed to halt his withdrawal. The general trend of his present front along the irregular line that now forms the bottom of the Aisne-Marne salient was regarded by most observers, however, as not representing positions of such nature as would lend themselves to a determined effort to bring the Anglo-French-American forces to a halt.

The intensity of the struggle and the vigor with which picked German troops have been hurled forward in local counterattacks showed conclusively the importance the German High Command attaches to holding fast for the moment at least. The reaction appeared to centre on the American spearhead, striking at the very centre of the enemy position. It was quite evident that the Germans regarded this thrust as menacing.

The last available accounts indicated that the American positions southeast of Fere-en-Tardenois had been retained. The fiercest fighting of the battle appears to have taken place here, with the village of Sergy as the storm-centre.

If the American spearhead is further advanced as a result of the present prolonged struggle, this, coupled with French and British flank operations to the east and west, would create a situation that might well force further German withdrawal to escape envelopment on one side or the other of the American thrust, it was thought. There was some fear, however, that the impetuosity of the American troops might lead them too far forward in case of renewed successes, placing them in danger in their turn of squeeze operations by the enemy.

In any case, it could not be seen clearly tonight whether the present enemy resistance is along a definite line of defense he has established, or is merely a screen behind which he is struggling either to prepare strong defense positions on the heights of the Vesle or to organize the mass of reserves he has assembled on this narrow front for an attempt to drive back in France. The report that seventy-one German divisions had been concentrated in this section led to speculation as to the purposes of the Germans.

General March will again review the situation tomorrow for newspaper correspondents. It is very probable that he will be able to tell the country just what troops of the American Army have been engaged in the operations of the last few days that have added new pages of achievement to American military history. Secretary Baker said today that he heartily favored announcement of specific units engaged in such operations as the battle of Sergy or the crossing of the Ourcq.

Mr. Baker also anticipated that General March would be prepared to detail the supplemental regulations on which he has been at work which will complete the merging of all branches of the army, regular, National Army, or National Guard, into a single army. This is already largely an accomplished fact under an opinion rendered by the acting Judge Advocate General, Brig. Gen. Ancell, months ago, in which it was held that there was but one army, the army of the United States, and that every element of it should be interchangeable, regardless of its origin.

The War Situation

By THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.

There is very strong indication that the German retreat got somewhat out of hand. The general plan of the retreat, as given in these columns yesterday, seems to be that which is being followed. But, like many other military conceptions, it is one thing to plan and another to carry out.

The enthusiasm of the French, who, when they found the Germans giving way before them, pressed the advantage, when they should have merely held where they were, did much to prevent a veritable disaster from striking the German Army in the first battle of the Marne, and to this extent harmed the splendid plan which had been conceived for that battle. It is extremely difficult under such circumstances as then prevailed to control the action of all the various units of a huge army. But, if it is difficult when an army is on the offensive, it is much more so when the army is in retreat.

That is what the Germans have been contending against, and apparently their scheme has to some extent gone wrong. Between the Ourcq and the Vesle River there is an almost inconceivable mass of military material. All that the Germans had collected for their offense against the Marne is practically locked up in this area. It is being moved back as fast as the meagre transportation facilities permit. But these facilities consist of but few roads and two single-track railroads, a part of both of which are under shellfire, and all under airplane observation and subject to bombing. The efficacy of the latter feature under present conditions can be appreciated from the fact that at an altitude of from 10,000 to 15,000 feet the accuracy of the bombing plane is almost if not quite equal to that of the heavy artillery at that range in yards.

These communications consist of a fairly good road from Fère to Braisne on the Vesle, the railroad from Fère to Bazoches, a mediocre road from Coulonges to Fismes, and a single track road to Fismes by way of the Ardre Valley. Over these lines all of the German guns and supplies must move. As we approach the end of these roads we naturally would find a tremendous congestion, everything jammed, struggling to find its way through before the rearguard is forced to break ground and give way to the rear.

The Germans apparently had planned to stop at the Ourcq in order to give time for this mass of material to be moved. But the Allies were pressing so closely that the rearguard was unable to hold them back. Possibly, also, the rearguard took positions too close to the main body, so that, while it was intended that the rearguard and that only should have been engaged, the main body was unintentionally but none the less necessarily involved. At any rate, whatever the cause may have been, what seems to have happened is that, contrary to the German wishes or expectations, the main body found themselves with the rearguard either driven in or disposed of, and the mass of materials close under the allied guns and in consequent danger.

The probable German plan was, as has been stated, to make a stand on the Ourcq. But the American troops pressed the fighting, followed the Germans closely across the river and before the pursuit could be checked were firmly established on the northern bank. This move took, in reverse, the German positions on the Butte of Chalmont, just northeast of Cugny. The Germans then were forced to withdraw, to escape capture, and the French took possession, immediately advancing their line beyond Grand Rozoy as a result.

The position on the Butte of Chalmont was the key to the whole situation from Fère westward. Particularly was this true of the north bank of the Ourcq, which the American forces held. From this height the German dispositions were clearly visible. In order to restore the situation and to gain time, the Germans counterattacked. The weather favored them, a heavy fog preventing the Allies from utilizing the advantages which they had obtained.

Apparently some slight advantage was gained. But the fight is still progressing furiously, and does not seem to be favoring one side or the other at present. This does not mean, of course, that Foch's troops are failing in their efforts to force a continuation of the retreat. It is highly unreasonable to suppose that the Germans will halt on their present line, while just a few miles beyond is the very much stronger line of the Vesle. But the Germans do need time. They need it badly in order to save their materials and guns, and to get it they have to fight for it.

In a sense, we have come to the crucial period of the Allies' offense. Not that the capture of a great number of prisoners is at stake. This has never been the issue, and it has never appeared that there was the slightest chance of the Crown Prince's army surrendering. But the fairest opportunity for the destruction of German guns and war supplies is at hand, and this is what Foch is driving for at the moment.

GERMANS BAYONETED AMERICAN WOUNDED

Then Our Men, When They Fought Their Way Back Into Sergy, Took Few Prisoners.

LONDON, Wednesday, July 31.—The Daily Mail's correspondent with the American Army on the Aisne-Marne front, telegraphing Monday night, emphasizes the severity of the fighting in the Sergy-Seringes section. He says that the Prussian Guards suffered severely in repeated attacks against the Americans, who piled up enemy corpses on their front.

The correspondent says that for some time on Monday the Germans dominated positions on the heights beyond Sergy, the Americans being in the valley. It was here that the fighting Monday afternoon was most intense. The Americans had no cover and were obliged to lie in street gutters for shelter, but with the bayonet and machine guns they stormed the heights.

"Sergy changed hands nine times," the correspondent continues, "but tonight it is in American hands. The bitterness of the fighting is shown by the fact that the Americans have taken only a few prisoners. The men are exultant over having defeated so severely the fresh guard divisions.

"The Americans found that their wounded in Sergy had been bayoneted. The Germans placed machine guns in the church and also in the Red Cross buildings.

"The most probable reason for the counterattack is that the enemy found the allied advance too rapid and that it necessitated bringing the guards into the action to gain the time necessary for an orderly retreat."

ALMOST ENDED PARLIAMENT

Bill to Prolong Session Was Almost Overlooked.

LONDON, Wednesday, July 31.—The Chronicle's parliamentary correspondent writes:

"But for a discovery made by an official in the Public Bill Office yesterday morning this Parliament would have come to an unexpected end today.

"Last week the bill, prolonging the life of Parliament from today to Jan. 31, was received from the Lords and minor amendments made by their Lordships were accepted.

"The bill was then lost sight of, and it was not included in the group of bills selected to receive the royal assent yesterday. Fortunately the absence of the Parliament bill was noticed in the Public Bill Office and the omission thereupon was promptly rectified."

PATROL FIGHTING IN ITALY.

Enemy Supplies Captured and Raiding Attacks Repulsed.

ROME, July 30.—The War Office communication issued today follows:

On the whole of the front there has been reciprocal artillery fighting.

In the Giudicaria and Val Arsa hostile parties were repulsed.

Along the Piave our reconnoitring patrols brought back enemy arms and material.

Thirteen hostile aircraft have been brought down.

In Albania the systematization of our lines of resistance has been completed, and our troops on the Senini and west of the Osum and Devoli have lessened their pressure against the enemy.

CALLS AMERICAN TROOPS SPLENDID

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 30.—The Chronicle publishes an interview with the Swedish Socialist leader, Hjalmar Branting, who has been in London a few days, after paying a visit to the front in France. Asked for his general impressions, Mr. Branting said:

"I never made a better, more striking, or more encouraging journey. Before leaving Sweden I was sure the Entente countries would never surrender to the Ludendorff policy, and now, having been face to face with the realities, I am convinced Europe will be won for democracy.

"Yesterday there were in some quarters resigned men and women. They had suffered much, and we can understand such a spirit, after four years of war, but today resignation has been changed to hope.

"The United States has taken the place of Russia. Russia brought troops only, but the New World has brought troops, food, material, and money. And I must say the American troops are splendid."

"Have you also met Swedish-American soldiers?"

"Oh, yes, and the Swedes fight with the same determination. They did not come over in order to obtain material advantages or to gain territory. They fight to finish the war, and they pursue their aim with an honest and earnest mind. They are resolved to see the business through, and are proud to risk their lives for a cause which they identify with that of humanity."

"What was your impression of the American Army?"

"The Americans are distinguished by a spirit of organization. We in old Europe are generally complicated. When we are traveling we have hundreds of papers to submit to the authorities, hundreds of minutes to lose in a hundred different offices. Our administrative powers have not always understood, even after four years of war, the necessity of simplicity and co-ordination. There is nothing of this about the Yankees.

"Then, for instance, they have chosen a type of airplane, and they chose the best. They work in series and produce ten times more than we do. Generally they possess, in one word, the spirit of efficiency. I am under the impression that the Germans now know something of American initiative. Do you recollect how they mocked at American intervention in the beginning? I am sure the German people are of a different opinion now."

Ponder, Missing Airman, Returns.

PARIS, July 30.—Rumors of the loss of Lieutenant William T. Ponder of Texas, an aviator, have proved groundless. Ponder was forced to land in a reconnoissance over the German lines because of engine trouble, and for a time was unable to rejoin the French flying section to which he was attached temporarily. He turned up two days ago, none the worse for his experience.

EMPIRE DIVISION PROBABLY IN FIGHT

Wounding of Sergt. Springsteen Indicates That 27th Was in Action on the Marne.

MEN EXPECTED BATTLE

Lieut. Cromelin Recovering from Machine Gun Bullet—Paul Daly Wounded a Second Time.

The casualty list issued yesterday indicated that the Twenty-seventh or Empire Division, composed of New York National Guard regiments, with a sprinkling of New York City drafted men, was in action on July 14, the day the Germans' Marne offensive opened. The first official intimation that the Camp Wadsworth division had followed the Upton men into battle came through the listing of a Sergeant of the 107th Infantry as severely wounded in action on the date mentioned.

Pending, however, official announcement that the Third Army Corps, of which the 27th Division is a part, had become engaged with the enemy, it was believed that the wounded soldier may have been transferred to another division after arrival overseas. Letters from men in the 27th, received in this city in the past week, expressed guardedly a belief that the division would soon be ordered into action.

Sergeant Howard Duryea Springsteen, a member of Company E, 107th Infantry, was the man reported as severely wounded. The notification to his mother, Mrs. David Springsteen of Queens Boulevard, Forest Hills, L. I., said he had been shot on July 14. Springsteen is 25 years old and was born in Newtown, L. I. He was graduated at the Jamaica High School and the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn. Before entering the service he was a salesman for the American Agricultural Chemical Company of Manhattan.

Springsteen enlisted in the Seventh New York Infantry on June 5, 1917. He went South with the regiment in September and trained eight months at Spartanburg, S. C. He arrived in France on Decoration Day.

Faced Machine Gun at Ten Feet.

Lieutenant John A. Cromelin, severely wounded, is 22 years old and a member of the 12th Field Artillery. In a letter to his father, Paul H. Cromelin, President of the Interocean Film Corporation, 218 West Forty-second Street, Lieutenant Cromelin recently described how he was wounded while acting as a liaison officer for a marine regiment. The letter, in part:

"I walked into a German machine gun that had sneaked behind our line. They opened fire at ten feet. I was hit in the arm and leg. Luckily, a Corporal who was with me was not hit, and he ran. It was a very dark night, and they did not see us. Every fifty feet a flare would go up, and they would see us. We dropped."

After they had gone a quarter of a mile the Corporal applied first-aid treatment to Cromelin's wounds. Two miles from the place where he was wounded the Lieutenant reached a dressing station, and three days later he arrived for rest at Vichy. In his letter he had this to say of the American private:

"We were right in the middle of the fight of June 5 to 15, in which the Americans showed the boches they were a damned sight better bunch of fighting men. I take off my hat to the 'doughboy,' especially the marine 'doughboy.'"

Lieutenant Cromelin attended Trinity School in Hackensack, where he lived at 400 River Street. For three years, 1912 to 1914, he was at the University College School in London, where he was a member of the officers' training corps. Returning to this country, he was in his junior year at Princeton when war was declared. He entered the first Officers' Training Camp at Fort Myer, Va., in the Spring of 1917 and was assigned to the Twelfth Artillery, then training there. He sailed for France last January. At Princeton Lieutenant Cromelin was a member of the swimming team, won honors for mathematics in 1916, and was a member of Key and Seal.

Lieutenant Daly Wounded Twice.

Lieutenant Paul Daly of the 18th Infantry, who was wounded two months ago, but who subsequently returned to duty with his regiment, has been wounded again, according to a cablegram received yesterday by his father, Daniel Daly of 31 East Forty-ninth Street. Lieutenant Daly, a Plattsburg graduate, went overseas many months ago. A brother, Lieutenant Daniel Loughran Daly, after a long tour of service in France, has returned for duty in connection with the training of the new divisions recently authorized.

Edward E. Walter, Supervising Principal of the Springfield, N. J., high schools, received a cablegram yesterday from the British Air Ministry informing him that his son, Lieutenant Charles E. Walter, 28 years old, of the 23d Squadron, Royal Flying Corps, was in a hospital at Rouen, France. The message stated that Lieutenant Walter was wounded while on scout duty. He joined the Canadian forces last year and has been overseas since January. Two weeks after his arrival he was put out of action by a German plane, but escaped by volplaning down back of the British lines. He brought down an enemy two-seater on June 17. A brother, Lieutenant Frank L. Walter, is with our forces.

Charles Gueterman, severely wounded, was drafted last Septehmber, trained at Yaphank, and went over last March. He is a member of Company B, 102d Machine Gun Battalion, and the notification to his parents at 180 Jefferson Street, Brooklyn, seated that he was wounded on July 14. He is 25 years old, born in Brooklyn, and was graduated at St. Leonard's Parochial School. He was formerly a feeder in a Brooklyn printing shop. His parents were born in Germany.

Marino Panza, severely wounded, is 23 years old, and lived with his sister, Mrs. Sennonitti at 328 East Thirty-ninth Street. She said her brother had tired of waiting to be called in the draft, and last August had voluntarily joined the 307th Infantry, then at Camp Upton. She said she had received many cheerful letters from him, in which he mentioned the high spirits of his comrades.

Young Engineer Wounded.

Louis Christopher Gueriskie, severely wounded, was 21 years old, and lived with his mother, Mrs. Margaret Gueriskie, at 229 East Forty-fifth Street, when he enlisted last September. After a period of training at Fort Slocum and Syracuse he was assigned to the 101st Engineers. His mother said yesterday that she was glad that her son had been in active service and hoped that he would soon recover from his wounds so he could "get back on the firing line again."

Santos Fernandez, severely wounded, whose address was given as 133 West Columbia Street, Brooklyn, was not known at the corresponding number in Columbia Street. There is no West Columbia Street.

Two regular army officers, not residents of this city, were mentioned in the list, both being severely wounded. Major Goodwin Compton of Detroit was born in Mississippi May 14, 1877, and served as a private and also as an officer in the war with Spain and in the Philippine insurrection. He entered the service as of commissioned rank eight years ago when he was assigned as a Second Lieutenant to the 26th Infantry. Captain Robert Kenneth Whitson of Union City, Tenn., was born there twenty-seven years ago. He was graduated from West Point in 1916, and also went on actice service with the 26th Infantry.

160 Casualties Reported for the Army and Marine Corps; 46 Deaths and 95 Seriously Wounded in the Army List

MAIL FOR SOLDIERS STILL LONG DELAYED

PROMISES A REMEDY SOON

Officers Say Army Moves So Fast Abroad It Is Difficult to Keep Track of the Units.

While an organization is being rapidly enlarged by the War Department to handle mail to and from soldiers in France, complaints of the delay and disappearance of mail going both ways have been recently on the increase, according to information which was corroborated yesterday by army officers.

Recently the War Department, which on June 15 took over the handling of soldiers' mail from the Post Office Department, has been taking postal clerks and others experienced in handling mail, who have enlisted or been drafted, and sending them to serve in the army post office, but the building up of a trained personnel to handle mail has not progressed far enough to overcome the difficulties. Army officers who are directing the mailing service near this city asserted yesterday, however, that the faults in the army mail service would be rapidly done away with under the plans now being put into effect by the War Department.

The wife of a Colonel, who has been in France since May, told THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday that her first fifteen letters to her husband had not arrived at all, and that of her first thirty letters only six had reached him. About the same percentage of his letters, she said, had been received by her, some arriving many weeks late. The wife of another army officer told of going through practically the same experience.

Hurts Army's Morale.

"We are urged on all sides," she said, "to write many letters because of their benefit in keeping up the morale of the soldiers in France, and yet only about one letter in five or six is forwarded. One of the letters to me which has not arrived contained a Government check, and all efforts to find it have failed. I have talked with the wives of many officers, including the wives of Brigadier Generals, and their experience has not been much better than mine. In view of the fact that we are not allowed to go abroad, no matter how well fitted we may be for service in France, while young girls without relatives in France and stage beauties are being sent across in numbers, the experience of the wives left at home has been particularly depressing."

Many letters have been received by THE TIMES voicing the complaint regarding the slowness of army mails which was set forth in the complaint made by Otto H. Kahn on his return from abroad, some of them telling of the failure of families to receive allotments of their soldiers' pay. One man wrote thanking friends for a Christmas box which had been sent in November and had arrived in May. A soldier who had met a friend on his arrival in France several weeks ago told how he and his friend had cheerfully written letters to each other for a year, though not one letter had been received by either.

The principal source of difficulty recently, it was explained yesterday, was that, although the mail service had been rapidly strengthened, it had not been able to keep up with the expansion of the American Army in France in a few months from 300,000 to 1,250,000, especially in view of the movement of troops with great rapidity from camp to camp and sector to sector, and the formation of various kinds of new units, of men selected in small groups from many of the original units.

Another cause of delay in sending mail across has been the tremendous pressure on the transport service due to the policy of devoting every possible bit of available space to the sending of men. While the value of handling the mail efficiently in keeping up the morale of men was appreciated, it was stated that an even greater necessity was that of getting great numbers of men to France. During the month of June a daily average of 28,083 letters and postals for men in France were handled through this port, and this number is rapidly increasing.

Deny Mail Is Destroyed.

Various rumors, which have been in circulation to account for the delays and apparent disappearance of mail, were denied by officers handling mail yesterday. These have been statements that censors read the letters and burned those that they considered unimportant, or that, when mails piled up beyond the possibility of handling it easily, the excess was destroyed. As a matter of fact, it was said that mail sent overseas to soldiers was not censored, although mail sent back by soldiers was censored, because of the possibility that it might contain military information. Regarding the situation when the army took over the mail service on June 15, an official report said:

"At the beginning there was naturally great confusion in regard to the mail for headquarters, for new officers reporting daily for duty and for casual officers and organizations passing through. Postmen, special delivery boys, and messengers were wandering freely over the piers, endeavoring to deliver letters, telegrams, &c., contrary to the rules being established in regard to the secrecy of movement. Casual officers were having their mail addressed care of the chief of their respective corps, and in the majority of such cases mail was not delivered. Sacks of mail were being received at the —— Post Office for organizations, and the Postmaster had no knowledge as to whether the troops were here, on the way here, or had already gone abroad. It was absolutely necessary to concentrate all such mail, and the Military Post Office was therefore established."

Soldiers Must Not Take Gold Abroad

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Officers, enlisted men, and civilians attached to the army are prohibited in a War Department order today from taking gold with them when leaving for foreign service. Attention is called to the fact that this is a violation of the embargo against gold exports, and the suggestion is made that the men secure "service checks" or travelers checks and letters of credit before leaving the United States.

ARMY HAS NEW LIGHT TO GUIDE AIR RAIDERS

Flare Suspended by Parachute Sheds a Glare Equal to 150 Arc Lamps on Objects Below.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Major Gen. C. C. Williams, the army Chief of Ordnance, authorized the announcement today that an airplane flare, with a brilliancy equaling that of 4,000 candles, has been perfected.

"When hanging from its parachute over a German munition plant," said General Williams, "it lights up an area so brightly that an airman, thousands of feet in the air, can select any building he is directed to make a target for his aerial bomb, and, it may be added, American aviators are becoming so expert in bombing that they can usually hit the target at which they shoot.

"In every European city within the zone of aerial raiding operations, the rule is rigidly enforced against the burning of lights in any building that might possibly be used as a target. Therefore, the airman must be able to supply his own means of locating the object of this attack.

"When orders are received to bomb say a particular railroad centre the aviator proceeds very much in the same manner as does the Captain of a vessel. The cities and their environs are charted, and the night flier proceeds by compass, due allowance, of course, being made for atmospheric conditions. He is also frequently aided by prominent markings such as the reflection of moonlight from a river. Having reached the particular district sought, he must locate the particular object of his attack from his position, which may be 5,000 or 10,000 feet or even higher, above the earth. Equipped with the airplane flare, the aviator pulls a lever and releases it. As it drops the resistance offered by the air sets the fuse mechanism in operation. The result is the emission of a powerful light of from 300,000 to 400,000 candle power, which completely illuminates the terrain below. The amount of light given as equal to that of a battery of from 150 to 175 street arc lamps, or from 15,000 to 17,500 ordinary incandescent lamp bulbs such as are used in the home.

"As soon as the flare gets into operation, a huge parachute, made of the best quality of silk, opens and holds the brilliant light in suspension in the air for a sufficient time to allow the aviator to select his objective or target. Having located the factory, railroad depot, ammunition dump, hangars or whatever the target may be, the aviator drops the bomb and proceeds on his way.

"The height at which an aviator flies when attacking depends of course on surrounding conditions. If the enemy is aware of his presence and is preparing for attack, he must keep up and out of range of anti-aircraft guns. An idea of the effective light thrown on the ground by this flare may be gained from the fact that, when suspended at a height of from 1,500 to 2,000 feet it will clearly light a circular area one and a half miles in diameter. When on a bombing raid, an aviator seldom flies at such a low height, more generally keeping 5,000 feet or more above ground, in which case the effectively lighted area is of course diminished."

OUR LOANS TO ALLIES NOW $6,492,040,000

Treasury Advances $100,000,000 More to France, $9,000,000 to Belgium, $3,000,000 to Serbia.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—In announcing today that credits to allied Governments by the United States had reached $6,492,040,000, Treasury officials explained that secrecy would be maintained concerning the disposition of this money as a means of withholding information which might be valuable to the enemy. Reports that the Treasury was considering making public the allied purchases in this country, most of which are financed by the United States Government, were denied.

The Inter-Allied Council of Finance and Purchases, of which Oscar T. Crosby, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, is President, now forwards periodically to the Treasury from London or Paris itemized estimates of the foodstuffs, war materials, or other supplies needed for future months. The reports are carefully inspected by American officials as the basis on which new credits or loans are made from time to time. The reports also are intended to determine priority of shipment of the commodities to the various Allies.

The Allies are now getting about $10,000,000 a day from the United States. The Treasury today advanced $100,000,000 to France, $9,000,000 to Belgium, and $3,000,000 to Serbia.

CLASH OVER SHIPBUILDING.

War Department Enters the Industry and Hurley Will Protest.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—The War Department is going into the shipbuilding business entirely upon its own account. It is constructing a yard at Wilmington, N. C., and is letting contracts to the West Coast Shipbuilding Company of Everett, Wash.

This puts the War Department in competition with the Shipping Board for materials and labor, and the Shipping Board is making a protest. A special meeting of the Priorities Committee of the War Industries Board has been called for tomorrow to hear the objections of the Shipping Board.

The Everett yard was not favored by the Shipping Board when it applied for contracts, presumably because of the labor shortage on the Pacific Coast. The Seattle yards are now short 4,000 men. The War Department, however, has let contracts to the West Coast Company for from four to six ships.

This plan of the War Department came as a complete surprise to Shipping Board officials, but it was learned that General Goethals, formerly head of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, has given his official approval. Chairman Hurley of the Shipping Board said this afternoon that he would insist to the Priorities Committee that the Shipping Board be well protected in respect to the issuance of steel and other necessary material.

It is not the purpose of the War Department to build troopships, but large steel cargo carriers.

DRAFT TREATIES NOW IN EFFECT

Ratifications at London Affect United States, Great Britain, and Canada.

ABOUT 364,000 INVOLVED

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Ratifications of the military service conventions between the United States and Great Britain and Canada were exchanged at London today. This exchange makes effective the two conventions signed on June 3 last by Lord Reading, the British Ambassador at Washington, and Secretary Lansing.

The conventions, it is estimated, affect 54,000 Americans in British territory, of whom 36,000 are in Canada. They also affect 250,000 British and 60,000 Canadians in American territory.

British Classes Affected.

The classes of British subjects to which the convention with Great Britain applies are stated in Articles 1 and 4, as follows:

"All male citizens of the United States in Great Britain and all male British subjects in the United States shall, unless before the time limited by this convention they enlist or enroll in the forces of their own country or return to the United States or Great Britain, respectively, for the purpose of military service, be subject to military service and entitled to exemption or discharge therefrom under the laws and regulations, from time to time in force, of the country in which they are; provided that in respect to British subjects in the United States the ages for military service shall be for the time being 20 to 44 years, both inclusive; provided, however, that no citizen of the United States in Great Britain and no British subject in the United States who, before proceeding to Great Britain or the United States, respectively, was ordinarily resident in a place in the possessions of the United States or in His Majesty's dominions, respectively, where the law does not impose compulsory military service, shall, by virtue of this convention, be liable to military service under the laws and regulations of Great Britain or the United States, respectively; provided, further, that, in the event of compulsory military service being applied to any part of his Majesty's dominions in which military service at present is not compulsory, British subjects who, before proceeding to the United States, were ordinarily resident in such part of His Majesty's dominions, shall thereupon be included within the terms of this convention." (Article 1.)

"This convention shall not apply to British subjects in the United States (a) who were born or naturalized in Canada, and who, before proceeding to the United States, were ordinarily resident in Great Britain or Canada or in any other part of his Majesty's dominions to which compulsory military service has been or may be hereafter by law applied, or outside the British dominions; or (b) who were not born or naturalized in Canada, but who before proceeding to the United States were ordinarily resident in Canada." (Article 4.)

As Applied to Canadians.

The classes of British subjects to which the convention with Canada applies are set forth in Article I. of that convention, which reads as follows:

"All male citizens of the United States in Canada, (hereinafter called Americans,) and all made British subjects in the United States (a) who were born or naturalized in Canada, and who, before proceeding to the United States were ordinarily resident in Great Britain or Canada, or in any other part of his Majesty's dominions to which compulsory military service has or may be hereafter by law applied, or outside the British dominions; or (b) who were not born or naturalized in Canada, but who before proceeding to the United States were ordinarily resident in Canada, (hereinafter called Canadians,) shall, unless before the time limited by this convention they enlist or enroll in the forces of their own country or return to the United States or Canada, respectively, for the purpose of military service, be subject to military service and entitled to exemption or discharge therefrom under the laws and regulations, from time to time in force, of the country in which they are, provided that in respect to Americans in Canada the ages for military service shall be the ages specified in the laws of the United States prescribing compulsory military service, and in respect to Canadians in the United States the ages for military service shall be for the time being 20 to 44 years, both inclusive." (Article 1.)

All British subjects and all Canadians, as above defined, between the ages of 21 to 30, both inclusive, who have made declaration of intention to become citizens of the United States and who are liable to military service under the Selective Service act of May 18, 1917, may, during a period of sixty days from July 30, the date of exchange of the ratifications, enlist or enroll voluntarily in the British or Canadian forces at any office of the British and Canadian recruiting mission in the United States, or may leave the United States for the purpose of military service in their own country.

Limited Time in Which to Comply.

British subjects and Canadians, between the ages of 21 and 30, both inclusive, who have not made declaration of intention to become citizens of the United States, and British subjects and Canadians of the ages of 20 and 31 to 44, both inclusive, whether they have or have not declared their intention to become citizens of the United States, may enlist or enroll or leave the United States, as the case may be, for the purpose of military service in their own country during sixty days from July 30, the date of the exchange of the ratifications, if on or before July 30 they are required to register by a proclamation of the President, under Chapter 12 of the Act of July 9, 1918, or, if not so required to register on or before July 30, then they may enlist or enroll, or leave the United States, as the case may be, for military service in their own country, before the expiration of thirty days after the date when registration shall be thereafter required by proclamation of the President.

If within these periods of sixty and thirty days they do not enlist or enroll, or leave the United States for military service in their own country, they will, unless exempted by the British Ambassador under Article 3 of the conventions, be liable to military service in the United States and entitled to classification and exemption under the laws and regulations relating to compulsory military service in force in the United States in the same manner as if they were American citizens.

Under Article 3 of the conventions, the British Ambassador at Washington is authorized to grant exemption from military service in the United States within the respective periods of sixty and thirty days, aforesaid, as the case may be. British subjects and Canadians may now apply for such exemption, subject to certain rules and limitations, which will be made known by the Ambassador upon request. Full information as to the terms and conditions of service with the British and Canadian forces—pay, separation allowances, &c.—may be obtained by application at any office of the British and Canadian Recruiting Mission. A list of the offices of the mission may be obtained from any British Consular officer in the United States.

Bridges Unifies British Agencies.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Lieut. Gen. Bridges, head of a special British military mission to the United States, has completed the task of co-ordinating British military agencies in this country, for which he came to Washington some months ago. The work of the mission is being conducted on the lines he has laid down by the British Army officers who have been placed in charge of its different branches.

TANKER BEATS U-BOAT IN FIVE-HOUR BATTLE

Cook's Leg Shattered by Shrapnel—Gun Crew Fires 40 Shells—Fight 600 Miles Off the Hook.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, July 30.—The crew of a tanker which arrived late tonight from England reported having had a five-hour running fight with a U-boat on Friday which resulted in the cook being wounded in the right leg by a shrapnel fragment and the superstructure of the ship being damaged.

The submarine was sighted at 2 P. M. about 600 miles east of Sandy Hook, and began firing at the tanker with her forward gun at a range of eight miles. There was another big gun at the after end of the U-boat, and a smaller gun on deck abaft the conning tower. The U-boat fired twenty-six solid shot, and tried to get between the tanker and the shore, which was prevented by the Captain of the vessel heading his course to the eastward again.

When the German commander noticed this he began to use shrapnel and scattered the pellets in all directions around and over the tanker. The cook was standing on deck forward, watching the fight, when he received his wound.

The gun crew on the tanker fired forty shells from the four-inch quick-firer at the stern. The submarine was within five-mile range when a shell from the tanker burst near her and she submerged.

S O S calls had been sent out by wireless and were responded to by an auxiliary cruiser and two patrol boats.

After the U-boat had gone the Captain of the tanker altered his course to the westward again and made for the American coast. When the vessel arrived at Quarantine the cook was sent ashore to a hospital. The surgeons who examined his leg said it was badly shattered, and they were not sure whether or not it would have to be amputated.

RECOGNIZED U-BOAT CAPTAIN

Maine Fishermen Say He Was Towboat Skipper Here.

PORTLAND, Me., July 30.—Discussing the identity of the commander of the German U-boat which has recently been operating off the New England Coast, The Portland Press says:

"The Maine fishermen and coasting vessel skippers claim that the commander of the U-boat which sank the fishing vessel off this shore is known to them and that, just before America entered the war he was the master of a towboat which sailed back and forth along this coast for many years. One fisherman who saw the commander of the U-boat which sunk the Robert and Richard, is said to have recognized the man and to have known him intimately. There are also stories in circulation to the effect that a U-boat, presumably the same one, passed under the fishing fleet on the Georges bank a few days ago and was plainly distinguished by several fishermen. On that occasion the U-boat made no attempt to disturb the fleet, although many fine schooners were within speaking distance and might easily have become U-boat victims."

RED CROSS AIDS PALESTINE.

Society Tells of Enlarged Plans for Italy, France, and Greece.

The American Red Cross yesterday announced the inauguration of relief work in Palestine and reported on the scope of its work in Italy, France, and at Saloniki. To more effectively deal with the situation in France, the Red Cross personnel has been reorganized. The Finance Committee in Paris has been abolished and in its place a commission, with powers like the American War Council, has been established.

Nearly $13,000,000 is to be expended from July 1 to Dec. 31 in relief work in Italy, the budget of the Italian Commission disclosed. Estimates for civilian relief total nearly two-thirds of the budget, the amount being $8,961,590, while about half that amount will be devoted to the military section. The largest single item in the budget is $3,300,000 for canteen service to distribute food to Italian refugees. The principal items under the Department of Military Affairs are $1,187,175 for hospital service—which includes a gift to the Italian Red Cross to assist in replacing the hospitals lost during the retreat of the Italian Army last Fall—and $1,100,000 to carry on the fight to eradicate tuberculosis. It was also announced that the National War Council had voted an appropriation of $1,000,000, additional to a like amount made in May, as a working cash capital for the Red Cross Commission in Italy.

The cable to the Red Cross telling of the work in Palestine said that the service was begun on the Fourth of July. General Sir Eumund Allenby, in command of the British forces in the Holy Land, was the guest of honor, and all of the allied nations were represented. High dignitaries of the Roman Catholic, Protestant, Greek, Moslem, Armenian, and other churches were present, including the Bishop of Jerusalem. The Zionists' Commission was represented by Dr. Weismann.

With headquarters at Saloniki, relief measures will be extended to the Greek population in that territory, the Red Cross said yesterday. The War Council has appropriated $165,087 for the purchase monthly, for three months, of 320 tons of foodstuffs and 10 tons of soap. These monthly shipments will be devoted solely to relief in the Saloniki district.

NEW APPEAL FOR MOONEY.

Labor Leaders Want Wilson to Transfer Case to Federal Court.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—A delegation of labor leaders, others headed by W. Bourke Cockran of New York, called at the White House today to ask the President to transfer from the California State courts to the Federal courts the case of Thomas J. Mooney, who is under sentence of death in connection with the Preparedness Day bomb explosion at San Francisco. They did not see the President, who was engaged with the semi-weekly Cabinet meeting, but will submit their request later in writing.

Mooney, who recently lost his fight in the State courts for a new trial, has been reprieved by Governor Stephens until next Dec. 13.

Others in the delegation besides Mr. Cockran were Frémont Older of The San Francisco Bulletin; Frank P. Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, and Edward F. McGrady of Boston, New England representative of the Department of Labor's employment service.

LA FOLLETTE'S SON ILL.

Wisconsin Senator's Namesake in a Critical Condition.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Robert M. La Follette, Jr., son of the Wisconsin Senator, is critically ill at Virginia Hot Springs. For many months young Mr. La Follette has been in a serious condition due to a breaking down of the red blood corpuscles.

It was learned today that members of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, which has for months been investigating Senator La Follette's speech at St. Paul last Winter, intends to call the Senator as a witness soon after Congress reconvenes.

ALLIED UNITY ON FOOD.

Committee Named to Co-ordinate Programs of Four Nations.

LONDON, July 30.—It was announced tonight that the food controllers of Great Britain, France, Italy, and the United States, who have been holding daily conferences here, had appointed a permanent committee, called the Committee of Representatives.

This committee will study various programs of food supply and transport, and co-ordinate programs among the various commodities with shipping, and supervise their execution.

SHIPYARDS CALLING MEN OF ALL CLASSES

Hundreds of Clergymen Spending Vacations as Common Laborers at $3 a Day.

GIVE WAGES TO CHARITIES

Many Will Continue Work While Sons Fight—Other Professional Men There, Too.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Hundreds of ministers and other professional men have gone to work in war industries to help win the war. This has become known since the publication in THE NEW YORK TIMES of the fact that Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of the Free Synagogue, New York, and his son James were employed at $3 a day as laborers in the Luders Marine Construction Company's yard at Stamford, Conn.

In one Maine yard four clergymen are working as shipbuilders. Employed with them at manual labor in the same yard are other men prominent in public life or business.

W. F. Daggett, Professor of Elocution in the University of Maine, has put on overalls and gone to work in the yards of the Cumberland Shipbuilding Company at South Portland, Me.

"The boys from the University of Maine in France wrote that the main need was ships, so I entered the shipyard to do what I could," he said. "I am here until the university opens in October. Then I shall return to my university work.

"There are more than 1,000 University of Maine boys in army service, many already in France. What better service could I do my country than help build ships, when the need is so urgent?"

Another worker at the Cumberland yard is Professor William Wallace Andrews, Principal of the Butler Grammar School of Portland, Me.

"I had twelve weeks' vacation," said Professor Andrews, "and I didn't care to loaf. The country needed ships, of all things, and I considered it a privilege to enter the yards and do my share. I am 59 years old, but assuredly I can contribute my portion to the necessary work of the country. My son, Harold T. Andrews, who is 22, was one of the first to enlist in the war, and he was killed in the drive at Cambrai in November, 1917."

Professor Andrews is timekeeper and distributor of labor at the Cumberland yard. He has offered to give up his professional position and stay at the plant if assured a permanent job.

At work in the Cumberland yard also are four Protestant clergymen, W. E. Green, L. E. Darling, M. T. Darling, and R. S. Loard. Another recruit is Dr. Arthur G. Leacock, Professor of Greek at Philips-Exeter Academy. He is working in a Belfast yard for the Summer.

In the yards of the Portland Ship Ceiling Company, at Portland, Me., is a stalwart volunteer worker, William Byron Verge, a poet of note in that section. He is working as a carpenter.

"I'm enjoying my work," he said. "I like ships and I like water. When the company gave me the job of cutting loose the first and second ships launched here—the Anra and the Basscan—I appreciated the privilege."

MONTGELAS LEANS TO WORLD LEAGUE

Hertling Wrong in Assuming Allies Seek to Throttle Germany, Berlin Writer Says.

QUOTES PRESIDENT WILSON

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, July 30.—General Montgelas again takes up the question of a league of nations in the Tageblatt of Berlin, pointing out that since Viscount Grey's pamphlet on the subject the question has made considerable progress. General Montgelas says:

"Hertling spoke about it in the Reichstag, expressing the fear that such a league might throttle Germany economically. This idea is not justified, according to the utterances of responsible politicians of the enemy countries. America especially, without whose co-operation any economical war would be a blunt weapon, has officially disavowed any such intention.

"President Wilson's well-known fourteen points of Jan. 9 demanded the removal of all economical limitations and the re-establishmentof equal commercial relations for all and for the maintenance and security of the peace of the nations. [Point Three.] Further, unlimited freedom of shipping outside territorial waters, and not only in peace, as up to the present, but also in wartime, except when, after international action, a blockade is declared, [Point Two.] In a war legitimately decided upon, after international investigation, the sea could no longer be closed unless, if and after demand had been made by the other side, the whole military and economical power of the league on land and at sea should come into action against the breach of the peace.

"A few days before the German Chancellor spoke, the Austrian Minister of Foreign Affairs declared to the Viennese Workmen's Council that in the Dual Monarchy it was also desired that the establishment of relations between nations should be worked for which would make the limitation of armaments possible and decrease the danger of future wars. This is, however, a very timid attitude; if not for a league of nations, at least for an organization which is similar. Fears of an economical nature were not expressed by Burian.

"Lord Curzon, on the opposing side, took the attitude in the House of Lords that discussion of the league could well be begun during the war. He, however, considered that the admittance of Germany to the league might meet with obstacles, especially in the matter of regulating certain territorial questions. His speech contained conclusions which, unfortunately, were not given in some telegraphed versions. It is theoretically clear that if a universal court is wished for it must include all the nations. What is theoretically clear must be practically strived for.

Quotes Mount Vernon Speech.

"The American President spoke at Washington's grave on July 4. Wilson named four points for the basis of permanent peace."

General Montgelas quotes the four points in question and continues:

"It is not stated whether with the institution of the council warlike settlement would be absolutely abolished, or only postponed until an international investigation could be made. According to Grey's proposals it is, however, intended that every controversy between States shall be investigated by the league, and that the whole force of the league shall be thrown against the disturbers of right and peace.

"The second of the four points mentioned advocates that, as well as territorial, national, and political, all economical questions can only be regulated in accordance with the free acceptance by the peoples which excludes all economical pressure.

"Hertling, in spite of the twice repeated assurances—of January and July—cannot disabuse himself of the idea that States which bound themselves eternally to us by solemn promise would do it with the intention of throttling the German people. He must at least logically admit that such a far-reaching plan could be more surely carried out if no league existed. The danger would be especially great if the powers on the other side of the water finally united in a permanent enemy group.

"The apparently officially inspired utterances of the American press have already indicated that the United States has up to date opposed all efforts to erect artificial obstacles against free commerce, and would answer any proposal for the exclusion of the West from the Central European market by a special understanding about the delivery of raw material.

"It can be noted as a highly important fact that Great Britain has practically accepted Wilson's program for 'a lasting peace and free commerce in a league of nations.'

"If reports are so far not too optimistically colored then Lloyd George has made the most conciliatory of all his speeches since the beginning of the war to Americans at the front; he is supposed to have declared himself ready for an immediate peace on the basis of Wilson's four points."

"The answer to the manifesto of Feb. 18 recently received by the German Social Democrats in Austria from the Entente Socialists expresses a desire for an alliance of all countries in a league of nations which will organize international disarmament and submit all controversies between States to a juridical council, each State which offends international law to be exposed to the united force of the league. This is opposed to former utterances, for instance, the decision of the Majority Socialists of April 19, 1917, which was a development of the league idea on the line that in an emergency force must be applied.

A Beginning Made in France.

"In France a commission under the Presidency of Léon Bourgeois, Chief Delegate of the Republic at the First and Second Hague conferences, has just finished its work for an association of nations. Unfortunately, a general appeal was not made, but only a partial organization, beginning with the countries arrayed against us. From other States it will be demanded that they give the necessary 'guarantee' before they enter the league. This idea was also expressed in the French press. Many papers fear that Wilson's plans will be shattered on the difficulties of obtaining a guarantee against 'German militarism.'

"If Germany enters the league, still more, if she resorts to the initiative of founding one, as Bethmann Hollweg on Nov. 9, 1916, with the words 'to be placed at the head' wanted to see, then the best and most effective guarantee would be given. Then a league would be created, with most of the civilized nations of the world in it, which would refuse single States the decision about war and peace, putting it in the hands of the whole league which would be erected. Then there would no longer be room for so-called militarism, which must not be confused with the maintenance of the defense of the country and defense against attacks. If, however, in the beginning of the 'Society of Nations' an opposing idea in 'a Central European League in Arms' should be erected, it would be a reversion to the disastrous policy of the balance of power, all the more fateful because it would be no longer a question of European, but of world balance of power.

"From England comes a report that an association for a league of nations has been founded there, although there is no news as to the aims of this association, or whether a general appeal is planned. May such a step, in case it succeeds anywhere, but especially in Germany, find a ready echo! The fact that The Westminster Gazette, The Manchester Guardian, and The Daily News consider the plan favorably is no surprise to readers of the English press.

"Under such a peace German ships would again bring, as formerly, riches from all the corners of the earth to the home ports, in which the flags of all nations would be guests—bring greetings of kinship from the colonies to the mother country. Just as Germans, Anglo-Saxons, and Romans, so also Slovs would have access to the sea and a place on the coast. The basis of the failure of the British policy was to close the way to the ice-free seas for a hundred million Russian people. This has been through centuries one of many reasons for the permanent unrest of Europe, and has in this war avenged itself on England; it may not be repeated.

"Then the maxim holds good, equal rights for all, big or small, also for the freedom of the seas. As the Bulgarians desire access to the Aegian Sea, so the Serbians want access to the Adriatic. As Rotterdam is the pride of Holland, so Antwerp will be the pride and joy of independent Belgium, whose permanent neutrality, after the unfortunately forgotten Bismarckian proposal of May 18, 1875, is protected by a strengthened guarantee given by a League of Nations, by which the Poles, Rumanians and the Swiss will have access to the ocean under their own flags.

"No separate economical agreement will hinder the exchange of Germany's manufactured goods for the foodstuffs, clothes, and necessary luxuries from the Far East, south and west; no separate agreement will prevent other nations from receiving that which Central and Eastern Europe can offer. The duration of peaceful competition in free commerce on land and at sea will be guaranteed by an ever-increasing peace organization, which will not be erected on might but on right, which dominates might.

"Mutual distrust of Governments or peoples is the principal reason why no war party in its entirety has definitely and clearly dared to propose a similar proposition."

Montgelas concludes with the hope that all the belligerents will listen to the words spoken by the Federal President in Berne on June 6.

GUARD LABOR RECRUITING.

Department Announces Restrictions Imposed Upon Employers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—The Department of Labor today announced the conditions under which war manufacturing concerns with field forces for recruiting labor may use these forces for recruiting unskilled labor after Thursday next, Aug. 1. Representatives of a number of the chief war industries will confer on that day with officials of the Government Employment Service respecting the continued operations of their recruiting organizations.

The general restrictions announced as being applicable to the use of private recruiting forces are:

Private recruiting will be under the full control and direction of the State Director of the United States Employment Service for the State in which the recruiting is done.

No permission for the use of private recruiting forces will be granted except upon recommendation of the Director General of the Employment Service or the State Director for the State where the men are to be used. The recommendation will be given provided the men cannot be secured locally and, in the judgment of the State Director, there is serious need of additional labor.

Labor can be moved from one State to another or within a State only on the authorization of the State Director of the Employment Service for the State where the movement originates.

A report of every man moved shall be filed with the United States Employment Service in the recruiting district from which he is moved.

All men so moved will be credited on the quota required to be furnished by the recruiting district from which they are secured.

Private recruiting forces shall not make use in any way of the employment service or of any free-charging agent or agency.

Every permission is at any time subject to withdrawal or restriction by the State Director who granted it.

AUSTRIAN PREMIER UPHOLDS ALLIANCE

Hussarek Says That the Tie with Germany Is an "Affair of the Heart."

WANTS "HONORABLE PEACE"

Czernin Defends Emperor Karl's Relations with Rumania—Chamber Adopts Budget.

AMSTERDAM, July 30.—"We are ready to conclude an honorable peace as soon as our opponents renounce their hostile plans aiming at our destruction or repression," said Baron von Hussarek, the Austrian Premier, in presenting his Cabinet to the upper house of the Austrian Parliament, according to Vienna advices. He added, according to the dispatch, that, so far as the Central Powers were concerned, the war was a defensive one.

"So long as our opponents take the standpoint of one-sided dictation," he continued, "there is nothing for us but to continue the war and carry it on so vigorously that it will be shortened.

"As in war, so in peace, Austria will not stand alone. Our alliance with Germany is a real affair of the heart and will deepen under the influence of peace. There is nothing menacing in this alliance, the warlike contents of which were forced upon the Central Powers by their opponents and will cease as soon as they extend the hand of peace."

Baron von Hussarek said that the dual monarchy could remain fully confident in its army and alliances to obtain a good and honorable peace.

In the course of the debate Count Czernin, former Foreign Minister, said that the Austrian Emperor's advance to King Ferdinand of Rumania was made under his full ministerial responsibility. Count Czernin said he had learned at the Brest-Litovsk peace conference that King Ferdinand was beginning to comprehend the isolated and desperate situation of Rumania, and that he wished to enter into relations with Emperor Charles. Czernin informed Dr. von Kühlmann, at the time German Foreign Secretary, of the King's wishes. As a result, the Count said, Rumania escaped a last desperate combat and attained immediate peace.

The Chamber of Deputies adopted the budget and then adjourned for the Summer vacation.

PAINLEVE AT MALVY TRIAL.

Ex-Premier, with Others, Testifies in Behalf of Accused.

PARIS, July 30.—Several ex-officials, notably Paul Painlevé, ex-Premier and Minister of War; Albert Thomas, ex-Minister of National Manufactures, and Marcel Sembat, ex-Minister of Public Works, gave testimony this morning at the trial of Louis J. Malvy, ex-Minister of the Interior, before the Senate sitting as a high court.

They declared that Malvy had endeavored to follow the social policies unanimously approved by the Ministers.

ASK RECORD WAR VOTE.

Credit of $3,500,000,000 to be Submitted to House of Commons.

LONDON, July 30.—The biggest appropriation demanded since the beginning of the war will be submitted to the House of Commons Thursday, says the Daily Telegraph.

The vote of credit to be asked will be for £700,000,000. The previous highest was £650,000,000, voted a year ago.

WANT PAPER PRICE RAISED.

News Print Makers Tell Federal Commission Cost Has Increased.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Information designed to show a heavy increase in the cost of manufacturing newsprint paper was laid before the Federal Trade Commission today by representatives of paper companies seeking to have the commission authorize an increase retroactive to May 1 over the price of $3.10 a hundredweight agreed upon as of last April 1.

H. R. Weaver, accountant of the International Paper Company, said the award of the National War Labor Board increasing the wages of all workers in paper mills 10 cents an hour had increased manufacturing costs per ton by $3.78 in May and June and $2.68 1 nJuly, when a bonus paid the men was discontinued.

Freight rate advances, he said, increased the cost 66 cents a ton in May, $1.22 in June, and $2.41 in July, while the cost of prepared wood has increased $5.01 a cord since April.

Counsel for the manufacturers sought to place the record of previous hearings by the commission in the present record, but the American Newspaper Publishers' Association objected and the commission held that evidence should be confined to changes in the paper-making industry which have occurred since April.

P. B. Wilson, Treasurer of the Spanish River Pulp and Paper Mills, Ltd., also testified that costs in the manufacture of news print had increased greatly in May and June. He recited figures similar to those given the committee by Mr. Weaver for the International Paper Company.

In concluding the hearing Henry Davis, counsel for the Publishers' Association, submitted that the commission was without jurisdiction, under the agreement between manufacturers and publishers for it to act as arbiter, to fix any prices subsequent to April 1, which would be retroactive of the date of the application for the present hearing, filed ten days ago. His contention was taken under advisement.

WANT AMERICAS UNITED.

Pan Americans Urge All Republics to Support President's Ideals.

Two hundred citizens of the republics of South and Central America, at a meeting in the Waldorf last night, pledged the efforts of the Ibero-American Association to link up the nations of all the Americas in support of the ideals and war aims of President Wilson. The speakers said they thought all the republics ought to express at least their sympathy for the cause of the Allies.

"When the idea of a union of races and a league of nations is proposed Latin Americans cannot afford to refrain from uniting to attain the high ideals that President Wilson has set forth," said Dr. Federico Alfonso Pezet, former Minister from Peru. "We are here to follow the example of our Anglo-Saxon friends when the world is at war and when only in union there is strength. When the war is over the nations of the Americas will become more than ever before the natural field of world exploitation. But when that time comes no American nation must be alone in the race for commercial supremacy. We must be friends today so that we may be comrades tomorrow."

Other speakers were Dr. Carlos E. Restrepo, former President of Colombia; Gonzalez Flores, former President of Costa Rica; Ramon Ayala, former President of Venezuela; Senator Amodon del Solar of Peru, and Louis F. Corea, former Minister to the United States from Nicaragua.

Dr. Restrepo spoke of the association as a great step forward in the establishment of a Pan American union, the basic idea of which must be justice for all.

"President Wilson deserves high praise for codifying international law," he said. "He has substituted the Wilson Doctrine for the Monroe Doctrine. We shall follow him and ask him to lend us some of the far-seeing power with which he addressed the Mexican editors and outlined his wise policy."

is working independently of the Hughes investigation. No charges of graft or criminality are being looked into by the Senators. That falls within the province of Mr. Hughes.

There is a likelihood that the subcommittee will make a report within a week or ten days. Senator New said today that the examination of witnesses would consume only a few days. Senator Thomas of Colorado, another member, who is visiting a relative in New Jersey, is examining the huge mass of testimony already taken, and will boil it down for the consideration of the full membership.

Motors Promised to Britain.

A report was current today that the United States promised Great Britain several thousand Liberty motors in June, and several times as many in October, but then informed the British Government that the June motors could not be shipped before October, as there would be only a few thousand by that time, and these all had to go to General Pershing. This was denied by a man on the inside of the airplane situation. He said that the promise was for 300 motors in June, and that delivery of these had been delayed, but when a consequent loud protest was made Liberty motors were got together from all directions and the promise was eventually fulfilled. He said that more were promised for October, but he did not know if these would be ready, as he was not acquainted with the facts touching them.

It is understood here that the British have manufactured airplanes ready for 400 horsepower Liberty motors, and have had to store them because the motors did not arrive, whereas if they had reached England the British stood quite ready to furnish General Pershing with fully engined 150 horsepower airplanes in exchange for the heavy motors. It was also said that General Pershing would prefer this type.

"Well, there's a great deal of supposition in that," commented the same authortiy, "because General Pershing needs all kinds of airplanes. I do not know if the British had the airplanes ready for engines. I may add, however, that I have no doubt the British asked for the 400-horse-power Libertys. The Liberty motor is excellent for heavy work, and its production is coming along nicely now."

Secretary of War Baker was asked to comment on the statement made by Caproni, the Italian airplane expert, that airplanes could be built to carry 100 men.

"Nobody is safe in being incredulous about the possibilities for development in heavier-than-air-machines," answered the Secretary.

Mr. Baker also said that an engineering division under the co-ordinated control of General Kenly and John D. Ryan was working out engine types.

TO SHIP 1,000TH AIRPLANE.

Dayton Company Believes De Haviland Is Satisfactory.

DAYTON, Ohio, July 30.—The Dayton-Wright Airplane Company will ship its one-thousandth De Haviland plane tomorrow, and in honor of the event the company has declared Thursday a holiday for all employes.

Officials of the company feel certain that the Senate Committee investigation will not reveal anything derogatory to the machine as now constructed.

BIG SAVING STAMP RECEIPTS

Expected to Total $200,000,000—$58,055,000 in a Week.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Sales of War Savings and Thrift Stamps brought $58,055,000 into the Treasury last week, and broke earlier records for receipts from that source. This weekly yield is about equal to that of the entire month of June, and is largely a result of the nation-wide campaign, June 28, to obtain pledges for systematic investment in War Savings Stamps. The aggregate revenue to the Government from millions of these small savings is expected to reach $200,000,000 for July, or nearly four times the highest rate heretofore.

The War Savings Organization estimates that 34,000,000 persons are now saving systematically through purchase of Thrift or War Savings Stamps, indicating that about one-third of the nation's population are investing an average of $1.75 a week.

During the first four weeks in June weekly receipts from war savings were about $10,000,000. How they increased after the special campaign is shown by the following receipts: For week ended July 6, $24,029,000; July 13, $50,200,000; July 20, $53,630,000; July 27, $58,055,000.

TURKISH ENVOY AT BERLIN DIES

Hakky Pasha Opposed His Country's Entry Into the War.

AMSTERDAM, July 30.—Hakky Pasha, Turkish Ambassador to Germany, died last night in Berlin after a short illness, a Berlin dispatch announces today.

Hakky Pasha was appointed Ambassador to Germany in 1915. According to Salih Bey Jorgouagi, former President of the Ottoman Official News Agency, who is now in New York, and who was intimately acquainted with him, the Ambassador went to Germany after he had strongly opposed the participation of Turkey in the war against the Allies.

"Despite that fact, Hakky Pasha was a man of strong German sympathies," said Mr. Jorgouagi yesterday. "While he opposed the participation of Turkey in the war, he did believe it was to Turkey's political interest, in view of the perpetual Russian menace before the war, to maintain a decided leaning toward the German balance of power. He was a scholar and in many ways one of the most enlightened personalities in Turkish public life.

"I know personally that when he went to Berlin he there met Hali Bey, one of the leaders of the Young Turk Party, to whom he said that Turkey made a very serious mistake in entering the war on the side of Germany and that it would probably mean the ruin of Turkey in Europe. Hakky Pasha himself played no part in the formulation of the political intrigues which brought Turkey into the war, although once Turkey was in, he accepted it as a fact and trusted that it would turn out for the best."

Before the Young Turk revolution Hakky Pasha was legal adviser to the Foreign Ministry under Abdul Hamid. Following the revolution in 1908 he was appointed by the Young Turk régime as Minister of Interior. Factional disputes made him unpopular and in the following year he went to Rome as Ambassador, only to be recalled by the Young Turk Party to become Grand Vizier.

"Before going to Berlin as Ambassador he was sent there on a special mission in the first year of the war, because the then Turkish Ambassador, Mouhkar Pasha, did not have the confidence of the Government. Hakky Pasha had previously been Turkey's representative in England in the Bagdad Railroad negotiations and was acting in that capacity when the European war actually broke out, causing him to return to Constantinople."

HEARS OF TURKISH RANCOR.

Washington Would Not Be Surprised at Break with Berlin.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—No official advices regarding the reported break in relations between Turkey and Germany have reached Washington, but the Government would not be surprised if Turkey has been driven to an open rupture, as there is a well-founded background for the report.

It has been known for some months that a deep and growing feeling of dissatisfaction has existed in Turkey over the treatment of that country by the Germans. Reports that a Turkish mission recently had been trying in Switzerland to cultivate friendship with some of the allied Governments have been received here. It would be natural, officials said, for the Turkish Government to endeavor to find some new friends among the powers before breaking with its old associates.

When the present Sultan came to the throne in Constantinople a few weeks ago some very strong anti-Germans came into power. It has been a question whether these men were in a position strong enough to defy the Teutonic powers openly.

Many Turkish officials have long resented the dominating ways of the Germans, and have blamed them for the lack of food and other supplies in Turkey, as well as the reverses sustained by the Turkish arms. Germany promised assistance to the Turks in the Palestine and Mesopotamia campaigns, where the British forces have been consistently defeating the Turks. In neither case has the German pledge of aid been fulfilled and the Turks are known to be indignant as a result.

The strained relations between Turkey and Bulgaria, which recently resulted in armed conflict, according to report, have caused strong anti-German feeling in both countries. The Turks are satisfied that they did not receive fair treatment in territory when the peace with Rumania was signed, and the Bulgars have much the same feeling. Both countries are said to realize that they are being impoverished by the Germans in the effort to provide food for the Teutonic soldiers and civil population.

King Ferdinand of Bulgaria is reported to be much worried over his prospects at the peace conference at the end of the war. He is said to foresee the partitioning of the Balkans, and to realize that he is distinctly persona non grata with the allied Governments. The King is represented as fearing the dismemberment of his kingdom and as having no little difficulty in keeping under control the very strong anti-German element with which he had to deal when he decided to cast his lot with Germany. This element has lost none of its strength since Bulgaria's entrance into the war, according to information reaching the State Department, and, in fact, is more strongly pro-Ally than before.

ARCHANGEL OUSTS ALLIED ENVOYS

a civilian commission into Siberia and furnishing a small force of troops to co-operate with the Czechoslovak bands that have obtained control of large sections of the Trans-Siberian Railway.

One of the objections raised by President Wilson to placing any allied armed force of considerable size in Siberia was that it might produce resentment among the Russian people and cause them to seek an alliance with the Germans for the purpose of driving out the allied troops. The news that comes tonight of the indignities heaped on the allied embassies by the Soviet Governments indicates that the Bolsheviki are endeavoring to force the issue and produce a state of hostilities between the allied nations and the Russians before the plan for Russia's regeneration can be put into effect.

The situation, as it appears in the light of the news from Kandalaska, which has not been confirmed officially to Washington but is not doubted, is that the Germans are fearful that the plan of the allied Governments will bring about the nationalization of the Russian people and enable them to organize an army that will be a menace to the German purpose to dominate Russia. The Germans seem to have the Bolshevist leaders completely under their control, and evidence has been plentiful of late that Lenine, Trotzky, and their following are willing tools of the Kaiser's representatives in Moscow.

As far as the United States, Great Britain, France, and Japan are concerned the situation presented by the action of the Soviet Government in heaping indignities on the allied Ambassadors must be viewed with extreme seriousness. It will not be surprising if the allied Governments adopted more radical measures for dealing with the new state of affairs.

Information reached the State Department today through other sources than from the Ambassador himself to the effect that David R. Francis, the American Ambassador to Russia, would leave Vologda for Archangel. In the absence of official advices as to the Ambassador's plans it was regarded as possible that he might not consider it safe to remain at Vologda at the present time. When Ambassador Francis moved his headquarters from Petrograd to Vologda the Germans were approaching Petrograd, and he selected Vologda because of the facilities it afforded at that time for exit from Russia either via Siberia or Archangel.

Situation in Moscow Bad.

Minister Ira Nelson Morris notified the State Department from Stockholm in a dispatch received today that Swedish press reports state that wholesale arrests are taking place in Moscow, that the jails are overcrowded, and other places are being converted into prisons. The advices represent the Moscow situation as very bad, and say conditions are daily growing worse.

The Bolshevist Government was represented by the dispatch as having decided to disband the Red Guard, the Soviet military organization, and construct a new disciplined army on "old lines." The meaning of this part of the dispatch is not clear to officials unless it is that the Bolshevist political organization is in danger of being deprived of an efficient military force by reason of the lack of discipline among the Red Guards, who have become accustomed to acting largely upon their own initiative, or is enforcing its announced plan of conscription.

GERMANS AND REDS AGREE.

Have Settled Trouble Over Brest-Litovsk Treaty, It Is Said.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—The German-Russian Commission, considering the principles of the Brest-Litovsk treaty, have agreed upon the general terms of the covenant, according to Swedish press reports received today at the State Department.

LONDON, July 30.—An agreement has been signed between the German Embassy in Moscow, in the name of the Government of Finland, and the Councils Government, whereby all citizens of Russia and Finland arrested for political reasons in Finland or Russia are to be liberated, including those accused of spying or conveying contraband, says a Russian wireless communication received here tonight.

CZECHS GET BLACK SEA PORT.

Are Also Said to Have Seized Two Russian Warships There.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Capture by Czechoslovak forces of several cities in the Caucasus and a Black Sea port, where two Russian warships were seized and a steamer sunk, is reported in the Austrian semi-official newspaper Reichspost, according to information received today by the Czechoslovak National Council here.

The warships' guns were turned against the Port of Novorosisk, where they were seized, the newspaper said, but no details as to the damage done were given. Cities captured included Stavropol, Sirjebriakov, and Michelovka, while it was said that the Czechoslovaks, operating with Russian White Guards, had occupied Syzram.

While no additional information has been received, officials of the council say there is nothing improbable in the newspaper account, as many Czechoslovaks had been held prisoners by the Russians in the Caucasus and Southern Russia. They were inclined to accept the report as entirely authentic, since it appeared in a semi-official Austrian organ, which heretofore has been reluctant to admit any successes by the Czechoslovaks.

GERMANS HATED IN BALTIC PROVINCES

Esthonian Peasants, Who Rose on False Report of Allied Help, Savagely Repressed.

PETROGRAD, June 15, (Associated Press.)—Refugees from the Russian provinces occupied by Teuton troops bring reports of constantly growing hatred among the peasants for the Germans.

In the vicinity of Pskov, Esthonia, confiscation of foodstuffs by the invaders led to two uprisings by the peasants. In the latest of these uprisings the peasants had been informed by some one that American and Japanese troops were to help them. This hoped-for aid however, naturally did not materialize and the uprising met with disastrous results. A number of the peasants were executed and all the manor houses in four whole townships were razed by the Germans as an object lesson, according to word reaching Petrograd.

In the Pskov region, it is declared, the Germans have confiscated all the foodstuffs they can carry away except for a small allowance of grain for each inhabitant.

There is starvation among the working classes in Riga, on the Baltic, according to reports reaching here. Under the Germans the bread allowance has often been as low as one pound a month per person.

JEWISH LEADERS VANISH.

Great Sensation Caused in Warsaw by Supposed Secret Arrests.

STOCKHOLM, July 30—.A great sensation has been caused among the Jewish workmen in Warsaw by the sudden disappearance of nineteen members of the executive committee of the Jewish trade unions, according to Jewish newspapers of Warsaw, says the Jewish Press Bureau here. The men had been working with the Zionist and Socialist organizations.

Their disappearance, it is added, is apparently due to the mysterious arrests connected with the persecution of Jews now going on throughout Poland, Germany, and Austria.

Not True That Kerensky Is Here.

From an authoritative source it was learned yesterday that there was no truth in a report received from Chicago that Alexander Kerensky, former Russian Premier, was now in the United States. Friends of Kerensky in New York were certain last night that he was still in Paris, with no immediate intention of leaving the Continent, though they had no doubt that he would eventually come to the United States.

We Sell Dependable Merchandise at Prices Lower Than Any Other Store, but for Cash Only Accept Our Solution Of The Vital Shopping Problem Of Today Concerning The Price You Pay For Having a Charge Account.

It is a fact new to you perhaps, yet true, that this store is the only Cash House among large department stores specializing in quality merchandise.

If in the Sixty Years that your father's family has been trading with some other store, he had been paying for the same identical goods six cents less on the dollar by buying them here, he would in that time have saved on the average household expenditure of fifteen hundred dollars, the sum of $5400—equivalent to a paid up insurance policy.

Today, by depositing your household appropriation for the year with us in advance, you can add to at least a six per cent saving a four per cent interest on this money, credited from the day it is deposited in your D. A. (Depositor's Account) until it is withdrawn; which it may be, in whole or in part, at any time. Meanwhile, you shop against this amount, and Charge Yourself through our simple shopping system for the purchases you make. As many members of your family only as have their signatures registered with us may use the account. And the fact that the balance remaining to your credit is the limit to their expenditures until more money is deposited, serves as a gentle reminder to shop less extravagantly than would be the case with an open charge account.

Our Prices are ordinarily at least six per cent below others, and usually considerably more than six per cent less. So in shopping through a D. A. you actually get a bonus in addition, through the 4% earned by your deposits.

Benjamin Franklin knew the value of cash buying when he said: "He that sells on credit, asks a price for what he sells equivalent to the principal and interest of his money, for the time he is to be kept out of it; therefore he that buys upon credit, pays interest for what he buys."

AMERICA AND JAPAN PERTURB GERMANS

Seek to Sow Dissension Over the Aims of the Allies in the East.

BERATE WILSON'S POLICY

President Accused by Frankfurter Zeitung of Gross Materialism in His Motives.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, July 29.—Nothing has come of Japanese intervention in Siberia up to date, the Frankfurter Zeitung asserts, because President Wilson stated that intervention could only take place if the Bolsheviki and the Allies assisted and if Japan promised to evacuate the territory afterward. The paper says that from a democratic viewpoint these demands seemed only natural, but that in reality gross materialism and strong business instinct were concealed behind the American idealism.

President Wilson, who "persecuted Bolshevism in America with all the weapons of the law," has little sympathy for the Bolsheviki in Russia, the Zeitung says, and his assumed sympathy was only for the Russian market and to hinder Japan from gaining power in East Asia. Japan, as an East Asiatic power, is only interested in Asiatic policy, it is set forth, so that she is only interested in intervention for overthrowing the Bolsheviki and the formation of a new east front against Germany if she thus acquires power.

Alleged Aims in China.

Her military aim lies not far from Irkutsh, the Zeitung says, but although Japan would welcome territory in Asiatic Russia it is not essential to her chief interest, which is China. When two neighbors hear of a mutual menace, the paper continues, it is only natural that they form a military league, and Japan and China have heard so much of the military menace of Germany via Siberia, that their European-American friends cannot misinterpret it if they take the initiative in a Japanese-Chinese military convention.

The meaning of this pact, however, should not be overestimated, the paper says. It emphasizes the hatred of the Japanese in China, and argues that Japan merely wishes to assure herself of economic advantages there by the convention, especially by concessions in the iron ore district and control of the Chinese armaments and army, as well as the Eastern Railroad in North Manchuria, which belongs to Russia.

Thanks to the convention, the paper asserts, Japan now seems to be in a fair way to achieve her aims. It says that news of the convention awakened considerable concern throughout the world, but Washington was outraged that Japan and China had not consulted the Allies and that the feeling of distrust increased when it was learned that Japan had obtained valuable mining concessions.

The paper attaches importance to the assertion that Japan granted China a big loan and is ready to grant more, and argues that Japan is striving to control the Chinese financial machinery. America's readiness to advance the sums, the paper says, is really intervention against Japan in China, although mutual action with Japan is talked of. In any case it was thought in Washington that countermeasures were imperative, as Wilson revoked certain measures in permitting American banks to re-enter the international banking syndicate.

Denies Czechs Justification.

Events in China have shoved the "one-railed Wilson" on a second rail, the Zeitung says. This is perhaps the case in the Siberian intervention, although Americans persist that the action of the Czechoslovaks has put a new aspect on intervention. This may be the case for Japan, England, and France, but not for America, it is asserted, in view of Wilson's conditions for intervention.

The paper argues that the Czechoslovaks' action in Siberia does not warrant Wilson in changing his attitude on the question of intervention, so that if he is in favor of intervention he only changed his intention because his Bolshevist policy collapsed and because he was afraid of Germany's influence in Russia.

"The details of America's plans are unknown," it proceeds. "The Japanese Government appears to have accepted Washington's demands in spite of a strong protest by the Japanese people. We doubt if even the Tokio Cabinet favors America's plans.

"American soldiers and engineers will not be welcomed on the Asiatic side of the Pacific. In Japan it will be known that the sending of American troops to Vladivostok will prevent Japan from bossing the army of intervention in the occupied district and that American engineers in the Manchurian and Siberian districts are there for American economic reasons. But perhaps Japan considers that she can allow the Americans to take part in the undertaking in spite of the American conditions. The Japanese flag flies over Tsingtau, although British troops assisted in the capture of this German colony."

This and other articles are proof of the acute interest of Germans in Japanese intervention.

Socialist Attacks Hertling.

The change in the German Foreign Office has not solved the crisis, and there are evidences of dissatisfaction simmering beneath the suffrage situation.

The Social Democratic Reichstag member Meerfeld declares in the Rhenish Westphalian Gazette that Hertling's Government merits deep distrust and should be attacked by the Social Democratic faction. There are limits beyond which it is dangerous, says Meerfeld, and "the Government needs us now and in the future."

The Frankfurter Volksstimme considers that a fine speech by Scheidemann is insufficient, and that it is time for deeds. This is one proof of the dissatisfaction with Scheidemann and his acceptance of the Government's policy.

BOMB GERMAN RAILWAYS.

Stations at Offenburg and Baden Attacked by British Airmen.

LONDON, July 30.—The following official communication was issued this evening by the Air Ministry:

"On the night of the 28th-29th our machines attacked the railway stations at Offenburg, Rastatt, and Baden. Stuttgart and Sollingen also were attacked. Three hostile aerodromes and numerous ground targets were bombed and subjected to machine gun fire. All our machines returned.

"On the morning of the 30th inst. our squadrons successfully bombarded the railway station at Offenburg. Good results were obtained. In the course of combats three enemy machines were shot down and one other was driven down out of control. One of our machines is missing."

Bars Bathing Beach Fences.

Supreme Court Justice Benedict in Brooklyn yesterday denied a motion by Giovanni Aquino to restrain the borough authorities from interfering with him in building a fence on either side of land which he owns on the shore at West Thirty-seventh Street, Coney Island. The decision reaffirmed a previous decision that the beach at Coney Island was public property and that fences barring the people from free access to the foreshore were illegal. The decision affects all bath house proprietors who charge admission to the beaches in front of their places to people who do not use their pavilions.

GOT STOCK FROM GERMANS.

Officer Tells How Control of Chemical Companies Passed to Americans.

The defense of the American owners of stock in the Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Company of this city, the Perth Amboy chemical plant, and the Niagara Electro-Chemical Company of Niagara Falls, which are the subject of a Government inquiry to determine whether they are owned in Germany, began yesterday morning before Deputy Attorney General Alfred L. Becker, at 51 Chambers Street. James M. Gifford appeared as counsel for the chemical concerns, while Joseph H. Choate represented the Government.

Oscar R. Seitz, a lawyer, who has testified that he went to Germany a few weeks before this country declared war and succeeded in buying up a majority of the stock for the American owners, was asked by Mr. Choate to sign several letters. Mr. Seitz had testified that he left the contract, of which there were several copies, in Switzerland. The letters Seitz signed call for the delivery of these copies to representatives of the Government.

William A. Hamann, Treasurer of the Roessler & Hasslacher Company, said he was born in this country, and one of his four sons is a Lieutenant in the United States Army, while his daughter is married to an officer of the Ordnance Department. He admitted that before this country went to war the three American concerns were largely in German control, but said that on Feb. 17, 1917, the control was transferred to Americans.

"Were any officers of these companies men who would now be classed as alien enemies?" Mr. Gifford asked.

"At one time, yes, but not since the United States declared war," replied Mr. Hamann.

"Who was the alien enemy?"

"Dr. Hans Foersterling, who was a Director and at one time President of the Perth Amboy company, but he offered his resignation and it was accepted. He is no longer an officer of any of the companies. We tried to get him to take out naturalization papers, but he would never do it. When we accepted his resignation, we bought his home near the Perth Amboy plant."

Mr. Hamann explained that the price paid for his home was $50,000, and that, while the Roessler and Hasslacher interests were willing to buy the land, they did not care to pay such a big price for the house. Mr. Choate brought out the fact that Dr. Foersterling is a celebrated chemist, and that he now lives in a mansion at Janesburg, N. J., with a well-equipped chemical laboratory on his premises, and that he was formerly associated with the Deutsche Silver und Gold Scheideanstalt in Frankfort, Germany, the parent concern of the American companies.

The witness further testified that as late as March of this year the Roessler & Hasslacher Company had declared a dividend of 40 per cent., and this had been paid to the American owners of the 3,800 shares.

The investigation will be continued tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock.

MILES OF WAREHOUSES.

Government Investing $218,000,000 in Such Facilities for Army.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—The disclosure was made by the War Department today that the estimated cost of storage warehouses and other construction already erected or in course of building to facilitate the speedy handling of materials at storage points for the use of the army is $218,000,000. When these structures are completed they will provide 33,000,000 square feet of warehouse space, additional wharves and piers, and improve harbor depths at various points in the United States.

Construction is now under way at New Orleans, Boston, Brooklyn, Chicago, St. Louis, Schenectady, New Cumberland, Columbus, Charlestown, Norfolk, Philadelphia, Newport News, and Little Rock. Warehouses have been completed at Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Hoboken, Jeffersonville, Port Newark, Americus, San Antonio, Dayton, Richmond, Chicago, and Middletown, Penn.

Four million square feet of warehouse space has been provided for the storage of ordnance supplies, ammunition, and guns. Fitted into the ordnance warehouse space are seventy-five miles of trackage and 9,000 lineal feet of dock and wharf frontage. Besides barracks for 20,000 men in the Ordnance Service have been provided.

The largest of the warehouse projects is now being constructed at Brooklyn. It is estimated that, when completed, it will cost approximately $40,000,000 and provide 3,850,000 square feet of storage space. There are two great buildings, each of nine stories. Building "A" is 200 feet by 980 feet and has twenty-seven elevators, each with a capacity of 10,000 pounds. Building "B" is 206 by 980 feet and has thirty-six elevators, each with a capacity of 10,000 pounds. Both buildings are of reinforced concrete and steel construction.

There will be three piers 150 by 1,257 feet, and one pier 70 by 1,300 feet. Five slips will be provided, three of which will be 250 feet by 1,300 feet, one 145 by 1,300 feet, and one 185 by 1,300 feet. The main dock between Building A and the piers will be 260 by 1,350 feet. The three main piers will be connected with Building A by bridges at the second-story level.

BIG OUTPUT OF GRENADES

3,000,000 Hand and Rifle Bombs a Month Being Produced.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—The War Department today authorized the statement that hand grenades of four types are now being produced at the rate of 2,000,000 a month, and it was predicted by Ordnance Department officials that this rate of production will be more than doubled in the next four months. Rifle grenades are being produced at the rate of about 1,000,000 a month. This rate will be multiplied appreciably within the next six months.

Orders have been placed for more than 60,000,000 grenades of both hand and rifle type, and more than 18,000 persons are employed in various plants throughout the country engaged in making them.

Of the hand missiles under manufacture, there are two types of the so-called fragmentation grenades, which depend on the effect of explosives and the scattering of fragments; one type of phosphorus grenade, which on bursting throws a shower of burning fragments of phosphorus and a cloud of dense white smoke, and a gas grenade, which spreads a low-lying cloud of dense white suffocating gas.

ASKS BIG STEEL RESERVE.

Shipping Board Wants 1,250,000 Tons Over Actual Requirements.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Reserves of 1,250,000 tons of steel will be asked for by the Shipping Board when the conference on steel is held here by the War Industries Board next Thursday. The Shipping Board wants a million tons of this steel held as a permanent "cushion," upon which to fall back in case of emergency. The one and a quarter of a million tons will be asked for as a reserve for a three months' shipbuilding program, which will consume 250,000 tons each month.

The 750,000 tons required for three months' work must also be requested, so in all the demand will be made for about 2,000,000 tons. The Shipping Board now has a reserve of 1,080,000 tons, but wishes to keep this intact, and for this reason will ask for the standing reserve.

Needs for steel are constantly increasing with the expansion of all sorts of war work. The shipping construction is itself broadening all the time. It is estimated that the Hog Island Shipyard if running full capacity would alone ask for 30,000 tons a month.

VILLARD IS READY TO SELL POST STOCK

Option Given to Associates Has Not Yet Been Exercised, He Says.

DENIAL OF ANY FRICTION

Chief Owner of Newspaper Has Been Prominently Pacific—Opposed Our Going to War.

Regarding reports that negotiations for the sale of Oswald Garrison Villard's stock in The Evening Post were in progress, that newspaper printed the following yesterday:

"Mr. Oswald Garrison Villard, President and chief owner of The Evening Post, today authorized the following statement: 'The current reports that the ownership of The Evening Post may change are correct. I have given an option to Mr. Rollo Ogden, the editor, and to other editorial and business associates, with whom I have worked in such close co-operation for twenty-one years. As the option has not yet been exercised, it is impossible to give further details at the present time.'"

Rollo Ogden, editor of The Post, declined to say anything at present. One of the associates holding the option said that there had never been the slightest friction between Mr. Villard and those managing The Evening Post in spite of divergences of opinion in some respects between Mr. Villard and the editors of The Post. Those holding the option were unwilling to discuss their future plans.

On June 28, Mr. Villard, as President of The Nation Press, Inc., and editor of The Nation, announced a complete editorial separation from The Evening Post. It was stated that The Nation would discontinue the practice of reprinting articles from The Evening Post. This practice, it was said, had given some readers the impression that The Nation was in the nature of a weekly edition of The Evening Post.

Mr. Villard followed the traditional custom of giving complete freedom of expression to the editors of The Evening Post, and The Nation, which he edited himself and in which he expressed his own views, has followed a somewhat different line from that taken by the evening newspaper. The editorials in The Nation have been more expressive of the position of Mr. Villard, who, though his loyalty has been unquestioned, has been acknowledged to be one of the most prominent spokesmen of pacifist sentiment in this country, both before and after this country entered the war. In a recent issue The Nation referred to a speech by President Wilson declaring for force to the limit as "disappointing." The Nation also editorially expressed the belief a short time ago "that the holding of an informal peace conference would not be inopportune."

Advocated Nonresistance.

Mr. Villard was an advocate of disarmament and nonresistance long before the European conflict started in 1914, and he was active in advocating those views up to the time this country entered the war. However, he has strongly condemned the conduct of Germany. He went to Washington as a correspondent and in articles in The Post, to which he signed his initials, attacked the course of Augustus P. Gardner and other early advocates of preparedness. He was reported to be for a time a trusted counselor of President Wilson and was asserted by Colonel George Harvey to be second only to Colonel House in esteem at the White House. After President Wilson had declared for preparedness Mr. Villard expressed great disappointment and his relations with the President came to an end.

As a warm supporter of William Jennings Bryan Mr. Villard used his utmost influence to prevent Mr. Bryan's resignation as Secretary of State. After Charles Willis Thompson, in a signed article in THE NEW YORK TIMES, had stated that the position of Secretary Bryan had become untenable because of the neglect of his opinions, and that his resignation was imminent, Mr. Villard in a series of articles from Washington asserted that Mr. Bryan's relations with the Administration were excellent, and that persons on the inside ridiculed the idea that he might resign. The last of these articles appeared on the day that Mr. Bryan resigned, and Mr. Villard afterward told friends that he had been grossly deceived by a person whom he had trusted.

Later Mr. Villard became very active in trying to prevent war with Germany. He maintained a close friendship with Ambassador von Bernstorff and stated in The Post what purported to be the personal views of the German Ambassador, who was represented by Mr. Villard as using every means in his power to avert a break with this country.

All during this period Mr. Villard indicated, by allowing editorials differing from his own views to appear, that he did not claim the right of ownership as giving him power to control the editorial policy of The Post. Occasionally he wrote a letter to The Post explaining where his opinions differed from that of the newspaper. On Feb. 18, 1917, within a few weeks of the declaration of war by this country, Mr. Villard made an extreme avowal of his opinions at a public discussion. He was asked by Henry A. Wise Wood:

"I would ask you categorically whether you would resist the invasion of America?"

"I reply categorically, 'no,'" said Mr. Villard.

"Would you resist the violation of American women, in case of an invasion?" was the next question.

"I refuse to answer a hypothetical question," was the answer.

In spite of his outspokenness against war, Mr. Villard's denunciation of Germany's course made him an object of attack by German societies. On this account the group of organizations which planned a German bazaar early in 1917 struck his name from its Honorary Committee of 100.

The New Owners.

Emil M. Scholz, Secretary of The New York Evening Post Company and one of the associates holding the option referred to by Mr. Villard, has been with The Post for five years. He was previously publisher of The Pittsburgh Post and Sun, and before that had been successively associated with The Chicago Daily News, The Philadelphia Press, and The Chicago Record-Herald.

The Evening Post is the oldest New York newspaper. It was founded in 1801 by Alexander Hamilton, John Jay, and others. William Cullen Bryant was the editor in chief from 1828 to 1878, and John Bigelow and Parke Godwin were among the notable writers associated with him. Carl Schurz edited it for a short time, and was succeeded by Edwin Lawrence Godkin, one of the best known writers of his day. In 1881 a controlling interest in The Evening Post was purchased by Henry Villard, a member of the German Revolutionary Party, who had left Germany after the failure of the uprising in 1848. On his death the ownership descended to his son, Oswald Garrison Villard. Horace White was editor from 1899 to 1903. He was succeeded by Rollo Ogden.

Raid a Socialist Newspaper.

FITCHBURG, Mass., July 30.—Fifteen Federal agents raided the plant of the Finnish Socialist newspaper, Raivaaja, today. Operations in the plant were suspended nearly an hour while the officers searched the files, mailing lists, and books for evidence to support allegations of disloyalty made against the publication. The officers permitted the mailing of today's edition of the paper. No arrests were made.

WILSON STORE NOT CLOSED.

Food Board Finds That Butcher Was Only Cautioned.

The Federal Food Board issued a correction yesterday of its original announcement of July 10 that the store of Alexander Wilson, a butcher, at Madison Avenue and Forty-third Street, had been closed for one day for violation of food regulations. It was explained by the board yesterday that Wilson's case had been inadvertently classified in the records of the board in the "S" column, meaning "suspended," instead of in the "C" column, meaning "cautioned."

The Food Board's statement on the matter reads as follows:

"On July 10 the Federal Food Board announced that in the case of Alexander Wilson, a butcher of Madison Avenue and Forty-third Street, charged with selling meat at excessive prices, it had been recommended that his store be closed for one day. It apears that Mr. Wilson, after investigation, was warned that the board considered some of his prices too high. He was cautioned, but was not ordered to close his store, as was stated in some of the newspapers. The board makes this explanation in justice to Mr. Wilson."

FIND MANY DIRTY FOUNTAINS

Thirty-eight Soda Sellers Convicted and 125 Called to Court.

Agents of the Board of Health in the drive to clean up insanitary soda fountains in this city have inspected more than 800 places since last Thursday, when the campaign began. The inspectors summoned 125 proprietors to court, and obtained thirty-eight convictions.

The drive was started at the instigation of the Surgeon General's Office, complaints having been received that soldiers patronizing soda fountains were encountering insanitary conditions. Despite the fact that Magistrate McAdoo had urged that Magistrates deal severely with those found guilty of violating the Sanitary Code, the Board of Health reports that the fines imposed in these cases have amounted to only one and two dollars.

More than 165 places were inspected on Monday, and twenty-one soda fountain proprietors were ordered to appear in court. Inspector Jeremiah J. Lyons of the Food and Drug Bureau of the Health Department had seventeen offenders before Magistrate McGeehan in the Yorkville Court yesterday, charging them with violating the Sanitary Code in not properly washing their glasses. Each defendant was fined $1.

HOG ISLAND'S FIRST SHIP.

It Will Take the Water There Next Monday.

PHILADELPHIA, July 30.—Invitations for the first launching at the Hog Island shipyard Monday are being sent out by the American International Shipbuilding Corporation. The vessel, a 7,500-ton steel cargo carrier, popularly known at the yard as the Red Jacket, has been named Quistconck by Mrs. Wilson, wife of the President, who has also given a name to all the other vessels to be built at the yard.

Quistconck is of Indian origin, and is the name Hog Island was known by 237 years ago, when part of the surrounding country was inhabited by red men. It means "place for hogs," the land having been used as pasturage for live stock owned by Swedes, who settled near there, and probably before them by Indians.

The Quistconck is the first of 180 ships to be built at Hog Island. The present program calls for the launching of fifty ships in the next five months, and a total of 160 by August next year.

PUTS 10 PER CENT. TAX ON PLEASURE CARS

Pianoplayers, Graphophones, Sporting Goods, and Cameras Also Under Same Impost.

DOUBLE ADMISSION TAX

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Entering upon the consideration of war excise taxes and taxes on semi-luxuries, the House Ways and Means Committee today decided to increase the excise taxes 300 per cent, and as high as 500 per cent. The present tax of 3 per cent. on the gross sales of the manufacture of automobiles was increased to 10 per cent on pleasure cars, while the tax on commercial cars or motor trucks was fixed at 5 per cent.

Representative Kitchin, Chairman of the committee, said that there would be a good-sized tax upon the users of automobiles, arrived at by a Federal tax on the horse power of the motor. Mr. Kitchin estimated that the increased taxes on automobiles would raise about $70,000,000 in revenues, as against $32,000,000 received from these taxes at present.

Club dues and admission taxes, now 10 per cent., were doubled by the action of the committee today. This means that the dues of clubs will be taxed 20 per cent. under the new law and a theatre ticket now selling at $2 will carry a tax of 40 cents. The exemption of 5 cents on admissions to moving-pictur shows was eliminated by the committee, and there will be a tax of 1 cent on admissions to amusement where the charge does not exceed 7 cents. Representative Kitchin, in announcing the action of the committee, said:

"The committee has had under consideration today the excise taxes, such as automobiles, pianoplayers, graphophones, sporting goods, proprietary medicines, cameras, &c., and has tentatively decided to levy a tax of 10 per cent. on the gross sales of the manufacturer, producer, or importer. A distinction is made between motor trucks and other classes of automobiles. In the case of motor trucks a tax of only 5 per cent. was agreed to be levied.

"It also had under discussion a tax on admissions to theatres, operas, moving pictures, &c. The committee favored doubling the tax on admissions and dues and also to impose a 1-cent tax on all admissions where the maximum charges does not exceed 7 cents. Under existing law all moving picture shows, theatres, and other amusements whose maximum charge does not exceed 5 cents are exempt from the tax.

"The committee proposes tomorrow to take up the luxury tax suggestions of the Treasury Department. The tobacco tax schedule was postponed awaiting receipt of some data and statistics from the Treasury Department, which the committee has asked for."

The tentative increases agreed to today, compared with the present rates, are:

	Present.	New.
Automobiles	3	10
Trucks	3	5
Piano players, graphophones, phonographs and records	3	10
All sporting goods named in Sec. 600, Sub Sec. F	3	10
Perfumes, &c., named in Sec. 600; Sub Sec. G	2	10
Proprietary medicines named in Sec. 600; Sub Sec. H	2	10
Cameras	3	10

The committee did not decide upon the tax on films for moving pictures, but it is understood that the tax of 1 cent per linear foot on negatives will be abolished and a rental tax substituted.

The long list of luxury taxes recently submitted by the Treasury Department, which estimated that it would raise $2,000,000,000, will be considered by the committee tomorrow. The committee is opposed to placing a tax on wearing apparel, as recommended by the Treasury officials.

Visiting with Your Favorite Artists

"I've also been particularly interested in having you out to spend the week-end with us, so that you might hear our Ampico. Your love of music makes me feel sure that the Ampico will delight you, as it has us.

"No, the Ampico is not the accepted idea of the player piano. It is not the foot-pumped instrument, with limited musical expression. It is far more—the Ampico is a Reproducing Piano that repeats the art of great pianists, exactly as they play!

"Why, after one concert in Boston, Philip Hale, the famous critic, considered the reproduction of Buhlig's playing more beautiful in tone and bravura than the preceding performance by the pianist. In other words, when Mr. Buhlig made the record he was 'more in the vein.'

"The Ampico reproduces the pianist at his best. Since we have had our Ampico my home has been filled with pleasures I hadn't dreamed possible. When you have heard it you will not be many days without one. To you, as to us, 'Ampico' will mean musical perfection."

IN your own home you may have music such as this. Music for you, your family and your friends, that it would cost thousands to duplicate on the concert stage. To your home life the Ampico adds the perfecting touch of exquisite music.

CAPTAIN INDICTED IN RAINCOAT FRAUD

Lawyer and Promoter Are Included with A. W. Vaughan of Quartermaster's Department.

OTHER OFFICERS INVOLVED

Grand Jury Charges That Money Paid by Mnaufacturers Was to be Divided Among Them.

Two indictments, charging conspiracy to defraud the United States and the fraudulent use of the mails, were returned by the Federal Grand Jury yesterday against Captain Aubrey W. Vaughan of the Quartermaster's Department of the army; David L. Podell, a lawyer of 42 Broadway, and Felix Gouled of 1 Madison Avenue, the last named said to be interested in various enterprises. Gouled was arrested last week at the same time that seventeen manufacturers of raincoats were taken into custody, and has since been at liberty under $20,000 bail. Captain Vaughan and Podell had not been publicly mentioned in the fraud cases until the indictments were filed in the Federal District Court late yesterday afternoon.

The indictments set forth that Captain Vaughan and Gouled entered into an agreement by which Gouled was to inform raincoat manufacturers that he [Gouled] was in a position to get contracts for them to make raincoats for the War Department, Gouled to receive a certain per cent. of the money paid by the Government as a commission. As a matter of fact, the indictment continues, what Gouled and Captain Vaughan really agreed to do was to enter into an agreement by which the money which the manufacturers were to turn over to Gouled would be transferred by him to Captain Vaughan, so that the latter [Vaughan] could divide it "among divers officers of the United States acting for and in behalf of the United States in proportions to the Grand Jurors unknown."

Charges Against Podell.

The part that Podell is alleged to have played in the transactions was, in the language of the indictment, to render "certain services in the incorporation of a corporation, under the laws of New York," which corporation was to be known as the H. Rosenfield Raincoat Company, Inc., and that further he, Podell, was to "prepare certain contracts and agreements for the purpose of concealing the true nature and character of the transactions to be carried out and for the purpose of concealing the payments intended to be made to the defendant, Felix Gouled," which payments, it is further alleged, were to be for the "benefit of Aubrey W. Vaughan and divers officers of the United States." Five overt acts are charged in the first indictment, as follows:

First. That Gouled and Podell on June 4, 1918, caused a certificate of incorporation of the H. Rosenfield Raincoat Company, Inc., to be executed and signed by one Harry Rosenfield, one Charles Hollander, and one Harold De Brest.

Second. That Aubrey W. Vaughan, on May 28, 1918, visited the factory of H. Rosenfield, at Mount Vernon, N. Y., and made an inspection of that factory.

Third. That Gouled and Podell caused to be prepared a certain contract by which Gouled was to be paid 25 cents for each garment manufactured by Rosenfield or the H. Rosenfield Raincoat Company.

Fourth. That they caused to be prepared a contract that the H. Rosenfield Raincoat Company would pay to Harry Rosenfield 25 cents for each raincoat to be manufactured.

Fifth. That on May 1 Gouled caused to be prepared a contract between the defendant Felix Gouled and Martin Steinthal to pay Gouled 5 per cent. on the amount actually received from the Government by Steinthal for the manufacture of puttees.

The overt acts named in the second indictment are two in number, and both allege the mailing of certain letters, the first from Gouled to Captain Vaughan in "care of the Supply Equipment Division of the Quartermaster's Department," in Washington, and the second mailed by Podell and addressed to Gouled in this city. The contents of these letters are not made public in the indictments.

That other indictments are to follow is not denied in the Federal Building. None of the seventeen men arrested last week, all of whom are at liberty in bail ranging from $2,500 to 510,000 each, has as yet been indicted. Among these men are some of the best known raincoat manufacturers in this country. Charles L. Fuller, formerly Chief Inspector of Raincoats for the War Department in the New York District, was also arrested a few days ago, and he is known to have made a full confession. He is in the custody of the Department of Justice.

Will Plead Today.

The men indicted yesterday are expected to plead before Judge Learned Hand this morning. Neither Podell nor Captain Vaughan was arrested yesterday. The Government has assurances that all will be on hand when court convenes at 10 o'clock this morning. Ex-Assistant United States District Attorney Samuel Hirschenstein is attorney for Podell.

"My friends require no assurance from me," said Mr. Podell yesterday after his indictment was announced. "That I would not conspire with any one to defraud anybody, much less the United States Government at the present time. They know too well the many sacrifices I have made. I feel I have done nothing which any reputable member of the bar would not have done if the matter had come to him in his professional capacity. I am attending to my practice as usual and I am ready for trial tomorrow and will continue to be ready every day until the matter is disposed of."

Captain Vaughan is the first officer of the army to be named in connection with the raincoat frauds which it is alleged have cost the Government hundreds of thousands of dollars and which resulted in the shipment to the soldiers in France of thousands of worthless garments.

Judge Learned Hand, sitting in the Criminal Branch of the Federal District Court, was informed yesterday by Assistant United States District Attorney Charles W. Atwater that within the past few months thefts from army transports while at docks in this city have so increased that the War Department has issued special orders regarding them. The pilfering of delicacies intended for members of the American Expeditionary Forces abroad, Judge Hand was told, according to a compilation made by Major Whipple of the army, aggregate a loss to the Government of property worth more than $100,000. If the prosecution of the offenders in the civil courts does not prove efficacious in putting a stop to the thefts, he was further informed, the War Department would be compelled to resort to court-martial proceedings.

This explanation was made to Judge Hand when Salvatore Benario, Filipo Sano, Antonio Rizzo, and Castanzo Mano, stevedores employed at the army transport piers at the foot of West Fifty-seventh Street, pleaded guilty to indictments charging them with stealing chocolate and cigars intended for the soldiers overseas. As the four defendants were in jail for some time awaiting arraignment, Judge Hand sentenced them to serve terms of twenty days imprisonment.

LEWIS TELLS MORE OF BOLO PACHA HERE

Sought Favor of Mme. Barrientos, Opera Star—Sent Her the Address of Mrs. Hearst.

The following statement was issued yesterday from the office of Attorney General Merton E. Lewis, who for some time has been investigating German propaganda activities here:

"A side light on the activities of Bolo Pacha in America is revealed in his social attentions to Mme. Maria Barrientos, the famous Spanish soprano of the Metropolitan Opera. When Attorney General Lewis undertook the investigation of Bolo Pacha at the request of the French Government he sought to retrace every step taken by the French adventurer while in this country. It was soon discovered that Bolo met Mme. Barrientos in New York and had shown her various attentions. Accordingly, when Mme. Barrientos arrived on the Steamship Antonio Lopez on her return from Spain Jan. 18 last she was met at quarantine by representatives of Attorney General Lewis. They requested the privilege of examining her private papers for the purpose of securing evidence of Bolo's activities. She cheerfully granted the permission sought and appeared later for examination before Deputy Attorney General Alfred L. Becker.

"When Bolo came to America in February, 1916, he brought with him a letter of introduction to Mme. Barrientos from a mutual friend in Barcelona. On the day of his arrival, the 22d of February, he at once forwarded the letter of introduction, accompanied by a magnificent bouquet of flowers to the Metropolitan Opera House. In response Mme. Barrientos invited him to tea, where he met the wife of an American diplomat. One or two other meetings followed.

"Bolo's purpose in seeking the acquaintanceship of Mme. Barrientos appears to have been purely social. His attentions to her, consisting of flowers, professions of homage to the illustrious artist, and invitations to dine, were not very well received. According to her testimony, her woman's intuition soon began to tell her that he was not quite what he pretended to be. She stated that she found no reason to suspect that he was guilty of any disloyalty to France. Knowing her to be warmheartedly pro-ally, he always professed like sentiments. She disliked him, however, and after the first few meetings she refused to see him. Bolo wrote Mme. Barrientos, on the stationery of the Plaza Hotel, an interesting letter which, translated, read as follows:

The Plaza, New York,
Thursday morning.

Dear Madame: The address of the wife of my friend is Mrs. Millicent Hearst, 137 Riverside Drive. Do not fail to look me up after your voyage to Paris.

I shall arrange for you the appearance of certain articles for your behalf which will precede your arrival at Buenos Aires. While you would have no need of them, your immense talents placing you above all other voices heard today, still being unable to do anything else that would be agreeable to you, I can only offer what is in my power, and I do so with all my heart.

Permit me to place at your feet the homage of a great admiration.

BOLO PACHA.

The irony of Bolo's offer to procure publicity for Mme. Barrientos in Buenos Aires lies in the fact that it was proved on the trial of Bolo that he married there a French singer named Mme. Soumailles, and after a few weeks or months, deserted her. On Bolo's trial she appeared to confront him and prove him a bigamist. Bolo's only answer was: "Ah, but it was such a small matter—and it was so long ago."

ACCUSES ENEMY SPIES HERE

Brother of Girl Condemned in Austria Names Two to Authorities.

An investigation to determine whether or not Miss Milada Jaruskova, the American girl now under sentence of death as a spy in Vienna, was betrayed by enemy spies in this country, was begun yesterday by Deputy Attorney General Alfred L. Becker. Slavomir Jaruskova Kratochvil, a brother of the condemned woman, conferred with Mr. Becker and charged that two men, both living in New York and prominent in certain Teutonic circles, were the men who had supplied the information to the enemy which led to the arrest of his sister and her subsequent sentence to death. One of these men is the editor of a newspaper printed in a foreign language, while the other has for years been prominent as an advertising agent, his activities being confined to papers printed in foreign languages.

The editor was examined by Mr. Becker yesterday afternoon. He denied that he had ever transmitted any information to the Austrian authorities. The other man was not questioned yesterday but will be today as will also eight other persons whose names were given to Mr. Becker by Kratochvil.

"I am an American citizen and, while my name is not mentioned in the newspaper articles this morning, there is no doubt but that I am one of the men referred to by Kratochvil. I am innocent," said the editor when he appeared before Mr. Becker.

"The investigation will prove whether you are or not," Mr. Becker replied. "Until the contrary is proved you certainly will be considered as innocent. I may inform you that Kratochvil has given us the names of eight persons who he says will corroborate his charges. We are going to question all of those persons."

More of the testimony given by George Sylvester Viereck, the confessed agent of the German propaganda, who ran the pro-German weekly known as the The Fatherland for the Germans, was given out yesterday by Mr. Becker. The testimony made public had to do with the purchase of The Evening Mail by the Kaiser.

In the course of his examination of Viereck Mr. Becker asked the witness if there had been any jealousy between Dr. William Bayard Hale, the former editorial manager of the German Information Service, and Dr. Edward A. Rumely, who was placed in charge of The Mail as publisher by the Germans.

"Naturally," Viereck answered.

"Was Dr. Hale peeved because Rumely was put in charge of the paper instead of himself?" Mr. Becker asked.

"I do not think that Dr. Hale approved of the purchase of The Mail any more than I did. I thought it was in effect the buying of a dying evening newspaper. My idea was to obtain control of an important newspaper in each of the thirty leading cities of the country," Viereck answered.

"Did you figure out how much it would cost to get control of a morning newspaper in each of the thirty leading cities of this country?"

"Suppose that it cost $30,000,000 or even $50,000,000," replied Vierick, "it would have saved them the war. America would never have entered the war. We could have saved them from that."

United States Marshal James M. Power of Brooklyn raided the office of a Finnish Socialist publishing company at 4,013 Eighth Avenue, Brooklyn, yesterday. Several thousand copies of a newspaper called the Raviaago were seized. The paper is printed in Finnish. A large number of books, also published in the Finnish language, were also seized.

CAPTAIN'S WIFE HELD.

Mrs. Sires Said to Have Approved Lusitania Sinking.

GREENVILLE, S. C., July 30.—Mrs. Elsie V. Sires, wife of Captain Edward B. Sires, 306th Sanitary Train, 81st Division, formerly stationed at Camp Sevier, was held for trial in the Federal District Court today, charged with violation of the espionage law. She was released on $1,000 bond.

Mrs. Sires was born in Germany and married Captain Sires in the Philippines. Witnesses testified Mrs. Sires said the Germans had a right to sink the Lusitania and accounts of German atrocities were lies.

EHRET SEEKS HIS ESTATE.

Reported to be Returning from Germany to Attempt Recovery.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—George Ehret, the New York brewer, whose estate, estimated to be worth $40,000,000, was taken over recently by Alien Property Custodian Palmer, was reported today to be returning from Germany to institute proceedings for the recovery of the property.

The case is like that of Mrs. Adolphus Busch, widow of the St. Louis multimillionaire brewer, who is seeking recovery of her estate which was seized while she was in Germany.

Ehret went to Germany before the United States entered the war, and his friends say that the trip was made necessary by his declining health. His property was seized by the Government on the ground of his German residence, as residence and not citizenship is the determining factor in such cases.

WASHINGTON IS ITS HERO.

Percy MacKaye's New Play to be Produced by Arthur Hopkins.

A new play by Percy MacKaye, entitled "Washington, the Man Who Made Us," is announced for early Fall production here by Arthur Hopkins. The play, which is Mr. MacKaye's first long contribution to the local stage in a number of years, is said to be the first piece ever produced having George Washington as its central figure. In addition to its Revolutionary scenes, the play will show many scenes of the present day as parallels.

The piece calls for novel staging, there being fourteen transitions from the period of Washington to the present, and vice versa. The play is written in prose and is in sixteen actions. The scenery and costumes will be designed by Robert Edmond Jones.

NEW THEATRICAL ALLIANCE.

Klaw & Erlanger, Dillingham, Ziegfeld Join in Productions.

Klaw and Erlanger, Charles B. Dillingham, and Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., yesterday announced their formation of a new alliance which will embark upon the production of plays and the management of stars on a large scale. The first player to pass under their direction is Raymond Hitchcock, who has been an independent producer for the last two seasons. Hitchcock has bound himself to the new firm for five years, and, with his production of "Hitchy-Koo," will come under their direction on Sept. 2.

"Hitchy-Koo" will end its engagement at the Globe on Saturday, and the piece will be restaged by Ned Wayburn before it takes to the road. It will be seen first in Boston.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"Maytime," now at the Broadhurst, will be transferred to the Lyric Theatre next Monday night.

"Oh, Lady! Lady!" will end its run at the Casino Theatre a week from Saturday. The piece will be seen next in Boston.

Next Sunday night's free performance for soldiers and sailors will be "The Kiss Burglar," at the Eltinge.

Elizabeth Risdon has been engaged for the company which will support Otis Skinner next season.

The Camp Upton military revue, "Yip, Yip, Yaphank," will be given a preliminary performance at the open-air Rosemary Theatre, near Huntington, L. I., two days prior to its opening at the Century on Aug. 19. The performance will be for charity.

MYSTERY IN WAIXEL CASE.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 30.—A telegram signed "X. Z.," sent to the Chicago police from New York today, deepened the mystery surrounding the death of a Mrs. Julia R. Waixel, a Chicago woman, whose body was sent here last week from Stamford, Conn., and buried.

The police are trailing possible clues that would establish murder. She was 49 years old and a cousin of A. M. Snydecker, head of Snydecker & Co., bankers, of this city.

According to the reports in the hands of the police, she had been in Stamford with a daughter, Gertrude E. Waixel, who has been convalescing for weeks from a serious illness. The mother is said to have become worried and her mind was temporarily unbalanced. She was then committed to a sanitarium, where it was reported she died from melancholia.

The body was embalmed by the Lyman Hoyt Undertaking Company of Stamford, according to the papers received here, and was accompanied by the death certificate, showing melancholia as the cause of death.

The mystery centres around the anonymous telegram, which reads as follows:

"Suspect may be foul play in the death of Mrs. Julia Waixel. Body shipped Saturday or Sunday. Recommend proper identification of body and autopsy before burial."

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., July 30.—Mrs. Julia R. Waixel died at Stamford Hall Sanitarium here on July 26 of melancholia. She was committed to the sanitarium on June 14 and her condition grew steadily worse. Mrs. Waixel's mental breakdown was said here to be due to the illness of her daughter, who is receiving treatment in a New Jersey sanitarium.

The proprietor of the Stamford Hall Sanitarium said tonight that report that Mrs. Waixel met with foul play or died an unnatural death was untrue. The death certificate bears out his statement. Melancholia is given as the cause of death. The case was not one that required investigation by the Coroner.

Mrs. H. L. Waterous of 507 West 112th Street, New York, a friend of Mrs. Waixel, was notified of her critical condition and arrived at the sanitarium ten minutes before Mrs. Waixel's death.

GAS RATE UP IN CHICAGO.

People's Company Allowed to Make an Increase of 27 1-2 Per Cent.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 30.—The People's Gas Company of Chicago received permission today from the State Public Utilities Commission to increase its gas rates approximately 27½ per cent.

The increase, which will be effective Aug. 1 and will remain in force for one year, was granted by the vote of a divided commission. It was allowed on the ground that the company was operating at a loss, and it is probable that the commission's opinion will contain a clause which will provide for a refund if a later investigation shows that the temporary rate is too high.

It is estimated that the increase in rate will net the company $4,500,000 additional revenue annually.

To Insure Delivery

An order enforced by the War Industries Board for the conservation of newsprint renders impossible the return of unsold copies of all newspapers. Newsdealers therefore base their supplies on actual orders.

To prevent lapse of delivery of The New York Times to readers and loss to newsdealers from left-over supplies, it is necessary to order the paper in advance.

Small Enough for One Passenger
Large Enough for Four

More women than ever before are driving cars this year. And more women than ever are driving Franklins.

It isn't an accident. It's the natural result of the far-sighted Franklin design, which produced a car easy to handle, easy to ride in, and dependable.

Women everywhere are finding in the Franklin Brougham a car that fits every feminine need—an enclosed type suitable for four passengers, yet designed to obviate that "lost" feeling when the driver is the only occupant.

Distinction in design, good taste in interior appointments, convenience in seating arrangement—the Franklin Brougham combines these qualities with quick responsiveness and ease of handling that mean safety and comfort to the woman driver.

For safety and comfort are direct results of Scientific Light Weight and Flexible Construction—the principles that also explain why the Franklin is the most economical fine car, with its consistent delivery of

20 miles to the gallon of gasoline—instead of 10
10,000 miles to the set of tires—instead of 5,000

NEW IDEAS IN TURKEY.

While the report that Turkey had broken her connection with Germany is certainly an anticipation, and perhaps a too credulous anticipation, there is no room for doubt that Turkey shares the dissatisfaction of the other minor partners in the Germanic alliance. As in Austria and Bulgaria, there are in Turkey leaders who are beginning to doubt whether it is any better to be swallowed up in all but name by Germany than to take their chances on an accommodation with the Entente, and report has it that the accession of the new Sultan may have brought to places of higher influence some of these men who are dissatisfied with the turning over of the Ottoman Empire to the German Generals by Enver, Talaat, and Djemal.

The treaty of Bucharest, which stirred vast resentment in Bulgaria, did not satisfy Turkey much better. Turkey has a better claim to the Dobrudja than Bulgaria has, for the largest element in the mixed races of that coast province is Turkish, and Turkey put in an energetic demand for the whole district. The German compromise which gave part of the district to Bulgaria and kept the rest, for the time, under a condominium of the four allies satisfied nobody. Meanwhile there was the frontier dispute between Turkey and Bulgaria over the strip of contested territory near Adrianople, which, according to a recent report, led to an actual armed clash of frontier guards.

Turkish ambition, however, went far beyond the Balkan peninsula. The attempt of Crimean Tartars to exercise self-determination for their own benefit was hailed by Turkey as a chance to restore the Crimea to the Ottoman fold, and the separatist agitation among the Tartars of Transcaucasia served to increase the dreams of a Greater Turkey which was to approach somewhat the frontiers of centuries ago. The Republic of the Caucasus was formed last Winter, when the Russian armies were going to pieces, as a defensive league of Armenians, Georgians, and Mohammedans, with an executive in which the three races were represented. The Georgians have apparently been dispirited by defeats; the Armenians are still fighting, though the fortunes of the campaign appear to be going against them, but the Mohammedans soon deserted their Christian allies and set up a separate Government, which began to negotiate with the Turks. This is what a Constantinople paper means when it says that "the "newly organized Republic of the "Caucasus is turning toward us."

Pan Turanianism, which was fostered by the Germans after Pan Islamism failed to unite Mohammedans of the world in a holy war under the Iron Cross, has apparently broken bounds. The Turks now claim not only the Dobrudja and districts in Thrace, not only the Crimea and the Caucasus, but Egypt. Egypt is out of reach, there are conflicting claims in the Balkans, and the Germans undoubtedly want the Caucasus themselves. It may be noted that they have seized most of the Russian Black Sea fleet — the ubiquitous Czechoslovaks managed to get a couple of vessels—and that with this reinforcement they could probably keep the Turkish Navy bottled up in the Bosporus in case of trouble.

In other words, Turkey, like Bulgaria, whose Czar has just started for a long visit "in foreign lands" to restore his health after some manifestations of popular dissatisfaction with the course of the war, is aggrieved at not getting more of the spoils. It may be that our Government is right in thinking that either or both of these nations may eventually become so dissatisfied as to change sides. But what are the Allies going to offer Turkey, if she decides that the Germans are not giving her enough? Are they going to restore Mesopotamia and Palestine, to both of which the British have promised recognition in a separate national existence? Are they going to give up Egypt? Are they going to turn on the King of the Hedjaz and try to drive him back under the Sultan's rule?

Are they going to abandon the Armenians, the Syrians, and the Greeks to more years of massacre and outrage? If this is really a war for the freedom of peoples, the Allies must stand by Mr. Lloyd George's declaration of last January that Armenia, Arabia, Palestine, Syria, and Mesopotamia are entitled to a recognition of their separate national conditions. Nor must the Greeks be forgotten. They are scattered more than the other Christian races, along the coasts and in the interior, but we now know that they have suffered persecution like that of the Armenians, and liberals all through the allied nations will not want to see that sort of thing permitted forever.

If Turkey changes sides because she is dissatisfied with her share of the conquests of the German alliance, she must surely hope for something more. At the very least she would insist on the status quo ante. And if the Allies bought off Turkey by giving back Palestine and Mesopotamia and by sacrificing the Armenians, the Syrians, and the Greeks on the basis of promises of good behavior such as Turkey has been breaking for the last half century, it would be equivalent to admitting that we could not win the war. There is no reason to believe that any of the allied capitals would be willing to buy a separate peace with Turkey at that price; Pan German and Pan Turanian will have to settle their own conflicts of ambition.

A SANE GERMAN.

Captain von Beerfelde, who got into trouble for circulating the Lichnowsky memoirs, is trying to get into trouble again. He petitions the Reichstag to "prosecute ruthlessly" the leaders of Germany in 1914, "for "they were guilty of the most criminal "forgery and the most abominable "swindle. They are traitors and "criminals."

These things are perfectly true. There is chapter and verse of document and proof for them. Most of the world outside of Germany knows them to be true. Captain von Beerfelde makes only the mistake of including Bethmann Hollweg apparently among the principals, and demands his arrest. The Chancellor was hardly more than a footman on the imperial carriage. Besides, he was too mild and pigeon-livered both as to Belgium, at the beginning of the war, and recently as to a strictly military decision. Behind his back, and without his knowledge, the execution of the conspiracy, long sedulously prepared, was agreed upon. Swindlers, forgers, criminals, traitors, these are terms too milky for the Potsdam gangsters of July.

Will it be believed that, for the expression of so obviously a sane, commonplace, almost axiomatic opinion, Captain von Beerfelde is called a dangerous lunatic, and the editor of Die Warheit, Truth, would have the Government lock the Captain up for telling the truth?

There is at least one sane German in Germany.

FEDERAL TAX PROPOSALS.

Earlier appearances that the House Committee on Ways and Means was hopelessly wedded to its unsound and unpopular original tax proposals are giving way to signs of sanity and moderation. The committee has not yet seen its way to distinguish between excess profits and war profits. It adheres to its original plan of measuring the excess profits tax by invested capital, but it has increased the exemption, and moderated the maximum tax. Public utilities whose rates are fixed by regulation are to be made a special exception to the minimum of 10 per cent. on net income of corporations with capital exceeding $200,000, and there is pending a proposal that the maximum shall not exceed 60 per cent. of the net income. The occupational tax on salaries in excess of $6,000 is repealed, and corporations and partnerships are put upon an equality. The income supertax schedule is still unsettled, but the normal tax is likely to be 10 per cent. Miscellaneous and luxury taxes are next on the schedule.

The procedure is still leisurely considering the President's urgency for prompt action and adjournment of politics, so that business would have opportunity to adjust itself to its tax burdens. The House prefers to postpone the bill until after the elections, lest the unpopularity of the levy should affect Representatives' personal fortunes. It is announced that the Ways and Means Committee proposes to increase the tax on inherited estates by half. That piles the increases of Federal income and inheritance taxes upon the State taxes of the same sort, and approaches confiscation in cases where the death of more than one in a family duplicates the levy.

No one would object even to that if it were necessary, but the taxlayers carefully avoid other subjects of taxation. For example, the United States Chamber of Commerce suggests "heavy taxes upon a few articles of widespread consumption." The Chamber does not fear the unpopularity of such a universal tax, as Representatives do, and seems to rank popularity below productivity as a tax merit. Another tax suggested by those who would pay it is a tax on sales. Other countries have it. This country has had it in other years. The trouble with a tax of such wide incidence, and so easy to collect, is that it is not original with the House. In 1862, also, merchants proposed a sales tax to Congress. The Times said of it: "Among the numerous propositions "for a scheme of finance or taxation "which shall produce a revenue equal "to the greatly increased expenditures "of Government we have seen none "that appears to accomplish this end "so fully, and to which so few objec"tions can be urged, as a uniform tax "upon transfers or sales of merchan"dise." The merchants of that year formally drafted and proposed a bill, which that Congress passed only in a much reduced form. A broader sales tax was passed by the next Congress, and was collected until 1870. It will be interesting to remark to what extent tax history will repeat itself now.

The House prefers to harass wealth rather than to raise revenue, esteeming that a sure road to popularity. Wealth does not dare to say a word in defense, lest a worse thing should happen to it. But trade is as free in objecting to new taxes as in proposing revival of old taxes. An example is the proposal to levy an excess tax on undistributed profits. In many cases undistributed profits are not in cash or distributable form. In times like these great additions to plant are necessary if production is to be maintained, and production is as necessary as taxes. In fact, production is more necessary than taxes, for tax deficits can be made good at one time or another and in one way or another, but there is no remedy for deficiency in production. The trade view is that it would be better to make allowance for investment and depreciation rather than to tax with discrimination against investment in the means of production. There is no objection to excess profits taxes if the production necessary to profits is not hindered. But there can be little increase of production without increase of plant, and increase of plant is made expensive if there is a discriminating tax on undistributed profits.

HINTZE BEGINS.

Admiral von Hintze's first performance as German Minister of Foreign Affairs "greatly pleases the Pan Germans," and will tickle everybody with the smallest sense of humor. The occasion was a banquet to that noble exile, Abbas Hilmi II., formerly Khédive of Egypt, whom the Minister saluted "as the rightful "ruler of Egypt, to whom that coun"try owed its prosperity." There is nothing better than that in "Alice in Wonderland." How the fellaheen would thrive if the Germans could bring about his restoration! He has the natural hatred of an Oriental ruler to honest British administration. That hatred was embittered by Lord Kitchener's conveyance to the State of the management of the fat Egyptian religious trusts, where the Khédive's well-known scrupulous honesty and absence of avarice had had full swing. It was not the English, but a native tribunal that punished the dishonesty of the Khédive's agents in the administration of the property of Prince Seifeddin, a member of the Khédival family. How could such a man, a regular moneyleech, the ruin of his relatives and his friends, get along with Kitchener and Cromer? He became the representative of the enemies of British occupation, a strange prop of the Egyptian Nationalists, a focus of foreign intrigue.

He was deposed for more than cause. It is a curious piece of mingled gaucherie and impudence to trot out this discredited and corrupt personage as a friend of freedom. Admiral von Hintze "praised the fidel"ity which Abbas had shown to the "cause of the Central Empires and "their allies." That will please the Young Turks, as Abbas has long been supposed to have his eye on the Caliphate, was in close relations with the religious and political chiefs of the Hedjaz, and is said to have promised the Germans to put the Holy Cities in their hands. A fine promise! At any rate, he is a good deal safer in Berlin than in Constantinople. The last time he was there he got a couple of revolver shots in his cheek.

This friend of freedom used to be, and may be still, a great friend of another patriot, Mr. Joseph Caillaux, sometime Chairman of the Crédit Foncier Egyptien. Bolo Pacha said he got money from Abbas. Possibly Caillaux's interest in Egyptian freedom will be brought out at his trial.

Admiral von Hintze's praise of Abbas is fitly paired with his telegram to the German-Irish Society sympathizing with "the struggle for freedom of brave Ireland." One would like to have a look at the bumps of those Pan Germans who pretend a German interest in Irish, Indian, and Egyptian, or any freedom. As Vorwärts says, all this stuff is "so much cant," and "the Indians, Egyptians "and Irish know full well that Ger"many has no blood to shed for their "freedom at home." In short, Messieurs the Liberators should begin the liberation at home, right in Germany.

WE MUST REDOUBLE OUR EFFORTS.

"When Congress reconvenes," said Secretary Baker on July 23, "I shall "present a plan which will involve "increased appropriations, modifica"tions of the draft ages, and some"what larger mobilization of our mil"itary forces." What Mr. Baker meant by "somewhat larger mobilization of our military forces" was elusive at the time, but in commenting upon General Foch's victory in what may be called the second battle of the Marne the Secretary of War leaves nothing to conjecture:

> It is fortunate that our people are accepting this success with a true measure of its significance. It is, of course, a cause for congratulation and rejoicing, but would by no means justify any relaxation of our efforts. It means that we must redouble our efforts.

Our troops under the direction, if not the command, of French officers are winning encomiums from them for such gallantry as is shown by veteran French regiments. This is high praise, for the American forces engaged in the Rheims-Soissons salient are regulars, marines, and national guardsmen, none of whom could have been called veterans in the technical sense when they went into battle against the Germans. Some of the regulars and guardsmen had seen service on the Mexican border, and perhaps in the case of the regulars in Chihuahua with General Pershing; and it must be understood that there was a good deal of half-trained material in the ranks when these troops disembarked in France. To acquit themselves as well as seasoned French soldiers in contact with specially trained German units was a performance of which the American people may justly be proud.

After six months of war, what may not be expected of American troops in the shock of battle? Exultation, however, is not in order. Overconfidence must be guarded against. The fact is, America has just begun to fight. Her soldiers have given the enemy only a touch of their quality. There will be reverses as well as successes, periods of gloom as well as periods of elation; and not until there are 2,000,000 American fighting men in the line, and more in reserve, can the Allies count with confidence upon a decisive military offensive against a resourceful enemy, whom they must on no account despise. Ambassador Sharp said, in a speech at a dinner given in honor of High Commissioner Andre Tardieu in Paris on Monday night:

> American soldiers could not help being brave after such examples of magnificent courage displayed by the French troops. The first million is here. Another million will follow, and as many millions as are necessary to bring the cause of democracy to victorious peace.

Ambassador Sharp was not indulging in rhetoric to grace an occasion. He spoke the thought of his countrymen, who are resolved to see the war through to a triumphant finish. When Secretary Baker intimates that there is a danger in excess of jubilation because American soldiers have fought so splendidly at Château-Thierry and elsewhere in the salient where General Foch has turned the tables upon the overconfident Germans, and when Mr. Baker says that "we must redouble our efforts," clearly his meaning is that no time must be lost in raising the millions that are to reinforce our fighting soldiers in France and insure the early victory that will save incalculable numbers of men and vast treasure. Secretary Baker, of course, speaks for President Wilson, who has read the hearts of the American people.

RELATIONS WITH MEXICO.

Recent news from Mexico indicates growing appreciation there of our Government's friendship and its desire to help the Mexican people. Bandits who cross the boundary and attack ranches in Texas are now pursued and punished by President Carranza's army. Last week General Peraldi and his forces rescued from a party of these outlaws two Americans whom they were holding for ransom. Six of the bandits, their leader, Felipe Musquiz, included, were put to death. Some months ago there was formal protest against the pursuit of such marauders by our soldiers in Mexican territory, although the national troops were allowing them to escape. The new director of the Government daily paper, Luis Rojas, appointed by the President, is known to be heartily in sympathy with the United States and other foes of Germany. Carranza has created a commission to consider the claims of Americans and other foreign investors who suffered losses during eight years of revolution. For a long time to come Mexico will not be able to pay what the commission will find to be justly due, but this step that has been taken shows that the claims are not to be ignored.

Owing to our Government's protest against very heavy new taxes and other burdens imposed on oil lands by decree in February, there have been negotiations at the Mexican capital, with an agreement for modification of the terms. The changes include reduction of the proposed land tax by 40 per cent. There is gratitude in Mexico for the lifting of our embargo on exports of foodstuffs and other needed products. When our farmers were urged last year to increase their grain acreage they were told that the Government intended to supply binding twine at cost of production. Negotiations by the Food Administration with the Mexican Government led to an agreement for the purchase of 500,000 bales of Yucatan's sisal at 16 cents a pound, the shipment price then being 19¼ cents. Sisal is the raw material of the greater part of the twine used by our grain growers. Imports for the year preceding the war were about $18,000,000. For the quantity recently engaged we are to pay $30,000,000. This will promote friendship south of the boundary.

The Carranza Government must contend with many difficulties and complications. In almost every State it is menaced by hostile local leaders. It does not fully control even the State in which the capital is situated. Continually it must guard against Zapata, Felix Diaz, Villa, and others who have considerable support. Villa is now active again in the north. Cabral and Medina crossed the border last week to start a new revolutionary movement. Revenue is greatly needed, especially for the army which must be used against outlaws and those who provoke revolt. Our Government and the American people want to help these southern neighbors, and will see with pleasure the indications that their friendly attitude is known and appreciated in Mexico.

TWO CONGRESSMEN.

Students of omens and superstitions are now turning to this precious entry in the Congressional Directory autobiography of the more famous of the two Texas Congressmen-at-large:

> Jeff: McLemore, Democrat, of Houston, was born on a farm * * * on Friday, March 13, in a storm.

Mr. McLemore was first elected in 1914. He "was renominated in the Democratic primaries," his autobiography tells us, "on July 22, 1916, "without making any sort of a cam"paign or spending money, and was "re-elected at the ensuing November "election by a practically unanimous "vote."

Mr. McLemore's name is only too familiar. His was the resolution of cowardice and surrender, asking the President to warn American citizens against traveling on armed ships of belligerents. This week he was a candidate in the Democratic primaries for Representative in Congress of the Seventh Texas District. He was beaten in every county. He was third, and a limping third at that. Thus the Lone Star Democrats of his vicinage passed judgment on that would-be relinquishment of American rights on the seas. Mr. McLemore goes out politically, as he came into the world, "in a storm."

The Democrats of the Seventh Texas District have done well. Straight, steady, and continuous American loyalty should be required of every Representative. In the Eighteenth District of this State Mr. Frederick C. Tanner is to be a candidate for the Republican nomination on the ground, the sufficient ground, that the present Republican Representative, Mr. George B. Francis, wabbled and truckled as to the declaration of war with Germany, voted for war solely to avert "malicious attacks" on his constituents, largely German and "overwhelmingly in favor of peace," and would have voted against war if his vote could have changed the result. Shall New York be less exacting than Texas?

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Did Anybody Mention the Marines?

For the excellent reason—among other excellent reasons—that they cannot help themselves, the war correspondents of The Times and other American papers submit with such grace as they can command to the regulations imposed upon them by the military censorship. They refrain from giving the names of places and of persons, both when they can see that the enemy might possibly derive some advantage from the disclosure of those names over here and when they think that the censor would have sharper eyes for such dangers than themselves. How much they chafe, however, under restrictions the utility of which they can comprehend no more than do the generality of people is constantly shown by their often successful efforts to convey the information everybody wants without bringing into action the censor's ever-ready pencil.

There was a notable achievement of this sort in one of The Times dispatches yesterday, for nobody even a little familiar with American history could have doubted who made the magnificent rush across the Ourcq after reading: "One has heard for many years of the fighting qualities of the American unit which led the charge. It has added greatly to its glory. One is not now permitted to name this unit, but the story will get back home, for it cannot die."

That was safe prophecy, but why the censor regarded it as less informative thus to describe the unit in question than it would have been to designate it plainly—that is a mystery indeed.

The large and expensive organization conducted by Mr. Creel labors industriously, and no doubt sincerely and with such wisdom as it possesses, at the task of increasing our interest in and enthusiasm for the war as conducted by the Administration. But what could conduce more to the accomplishment of those desirable purposes than letting us know exactly Who Is Who on the several battlefields? After a fight is over it cannot have many secrets for the Germans, and that it should have any for the home folk is explicable only on the theory that the censors regard censoring as an end in itself, instead of being merely a means to ends quite other than the censorship's own magnification.

Two Letters Sent to Two Mothers.

That Emperor William is in more than a few respects unlike Abraham Lincoln does not need much proving to many people at this late day. There was, therefore, nothing of the surprising in the dissimilarity between the letter sent by the German monarch to a woman whose nine sons have been killed in this war while fighting for him and the one which the American President wrote to a mother whose five sons had fallen in the war to save the Union. But these documents, as printed yesterday in parallel columns, while not particularly informative, were beautifully illustrative of essential differences between the two men, between their mental attitudes, and between the relation in which each saw himself standing with respect to the sacrifices imposed by war on the inhabitants of their respective countries.

The Kaiser expressed his recognition of the mother's loss, and thought to assuage her grief by sending her his photograph, "with frame and autographed signature." A noble and a precious gift! But, before viewing it with laughter or scorn, it is well to remember that the recipient may have viewed it exactly as did the giver. If she believes, as she presumably does, in the divine right of Kings, it may be that she was appreciably comforted in her bereavement, and at any rate it can safely be assumed that the Kaiser honestly thought she would be.

Lincoln, naturally, did not send his photograph to the mother who had lost five sons, and he admitted that no words of his could mitigate her sorrow. All he felt that he could do was to thank her in behalf of the Republic her sons had died to save, and to remind her of the pride she had a right to feel who had "laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom."

So speaks the representative of autocracy, and so the exponent of democracy! Each of the letters is a characteristic product of the country in which it originated, as of the man who wrote it. Today the two exemplify the causes for which so many men are dying on both sides of the line between the Central Powers and their confederated opponents.

They Acted After Their Kind.

Before retiring from the town of Château-Thierry, the Germans, as always in such circumstances, took pains to destroy not only everything that could be of military value to the incoming forces, but enormous quantities of private property to which no such value by any possibility could be ascribed. Many of the houses in Château-Thierry had been for generations the homes of people with taste as well as wealth, and in them were the decorations and furnishings that such folk gather around them in the long course of years. Some of these things the Germans stole and sent to the Fatherland, as is their custom, the rest they hacked to pieces for no imaginable end other than that of causing pain and irreparable loss to the owners.

And again, as in previous cases now almost innumerable, they were not content with destruction—they also defiled the houses in ways which, fortunately for them, cannot be described. The reason for this culminating outrage can be found in the works by authorities on pathological psychology, but for others they must remain equally mysterious and detestable.

"Huns" is a name too good for men like these. The followers of Attila were equally ferocious, but it is not charged against them that they had the characteristics observed by Captain Lemuel Gulliver when he studied the habits of the Yahoos. And the fine houses of Château-Thierry were not occupied, it must be remembered, by rough German soldiers, but by the flower of German militarism, the high officers. Whatever was done there was done by them or by their command, and as perfect discipline from the military point of view was preserved, neither the outrages nor the abominations can be ascribed to "the criminals who are to be found among every people."

Keep This Home Open.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The most valuable asset a city has is its children. We are endeavoring to conserve child life by taking some of the anaemic, undernourished little ones to the country for two weeks of fresh air and sea bathing. We have a well-equipped children's country home fitted to care for sixty children at a time at Greens Farms, Conn. Thus far we have raised enough money to carry the work on until about Aug. 1. If we do not succeed in raising $2,000 we will be obliged to close our doors at the very hottest part of the season, when the children most require our care.

Perhaps some of your readers would be glad of this opportunity to contribute to this fund. By so doing they would have the happiness of extending those advantages which they seek for their own children to the little ones whose mothers are helpless to aid them.

The Two Letters.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your paralleling of the Kaiser's letter with Lincoln's in this morning's Times constitutes one of the most vivid and effective war documents that has appeared in print. It sums up in minimum compass the contrast between the autocratic and the democratic spirit. No modus vivendi is conceivable between the respective ideals of the officials who put forth and the peoples who applauded those two letters. I fervently hope that the paralleled documents will be circulated widely.

WHEN FRANCE SHALL SMILE AGAIN.

The dismal clouds that hung like shrouds
Shall melt away in a new-born day,
When France shall smile again.
And the blinding tears that through long years
Were shed in bitter pain
Shall find reward in the broken sword,
When France shall smile again.

For we look ahead, as we look above,
Where the God of Peace shall reign
And Hate shall die in the arms of Love
When France shall smile again.

The war's alarms to the open arms
Of bounteous Hope shall yield,
With plenty rife, once more to life
Shall waken the stricken field.
And that spirit fine, which was all divine,
That battled with might and main,
Shall still hold sway when the world is gay
And France shall smile again.

For we look ahead, as we look above,
Where the God of Peace shall reign,
And Hate shall die in the arms of Love
When France shall smile again.

GREAT BRITAIN'S DAY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

August 4 will be the fourth anniversary of Great Britain's entry into the war. Let us commemorate this day as one of the most vitally important in the history of the world, for on that day on England's ultimatum hung the fate of all civilization—and eventually the downfall of the German Empire. Is it not America's privilege on this momentous occasion to demonstrate by some public ovation the recognition due the mother country for all she has suffered and endured?

Think of the great strategical movement of the British Navy in the first three weeks of the war which not only saved our nation but all nations from that menace called Prussian militarism.

In the beginning of August, 1914, the British Army consisted of 700,000 men. On Aug. 8 Lord Kitchener called for 100,000 volunteers, and in less than a fortnight this number had enlisted. The fifth week of the war 175,000 men had enrolled—30,000 in a single day, and by July 31, 1915, 2,000,000 men had offered their services to their country. On May 25, 1916, King George announced that 5,041,000 had enrolled voluntarily in the army and navy. It was not until some months later, after England had lost almost a million men, that she found it necessary to resort to conscription.

The first expeditionary forces sent to France in mid-August, 1914, consisted of 160,000 men, and these took part in the famous retreat and subsequent battle of the Marne, with decisive effect.

Oxford and Cambridge gave thousands of their undergraduates the first year of the war. Thousands of these young men, who represented the flower of England, shed their blood in France. That was part of the price that England paid in helping to stem the invasion of the world, for in that first "small, contemptible little army," which did such superbly efficient work, she lost nearly every officer and man.

It was stated in the House of Commons on Jan. 14, 1918, by the Minister of the National Service that in the "provision of men for the armed forces of the Crown." the Empire had contributed 7,500,000 men.

Britain has fought on as many as seventeen fronts. Her troops have been to the fore in Belgium, France, Serbia, Greece, Russia, Palestine, Mesopotamia, China, and East and Southwest Africa, and these are only the principal theatres of the war. Had it not been for her timely aid in massing her troops at these various fronts and thus supporting the helpless and the smaller nations, exhausted by internal dissensions, they would have been wiped out of existence, and Germany would have been the conqueror of the world!

Many times it has been stated that England has spared her home army by putting her colonial regiments in the foreground at the front. As a matter of fact, to save the men of her provinces and colonies, comparatively small in number, they were distributed throughout the regular army and given full credit and glory for all their achievements.

At the present time there are 5,000,000 British women working for their country in its hour of need. Thousands are employed in Government work and others in making munitions, who never had worked in their lives before. They are making shells, fuses, and trench warfare supplies and have contributed 1,450 mechanics to the Royal Flying Corps. Volumes could be written eulogizing the wonderful spirit of England and her provinces. The magnificent fortitude with which her men and women have borne the great sacrifices they have been called upon to make has shown the world that England has dared all and will never know defeat.

A SLAV LEGION FOR RUSSIA.

A Suggestion That 25,000 Young Czechs be Sent from America.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Although a naturalized American citizen, I am a Czech and have lived for many years in Russia, where I traveled extensively and spent much time in the principal cities, including Vladivostok. I speak the Russian language and believe that I have a fair understanding of the Russian people themselves.

As I read daily of the successes of my countrymen, the Czechoslovaks, in Vladivostok, I am more than ever convinced that the greatest aid that could possibly be rendered to Russia from the Asiatic side would be for the American Government to form a legion of 25,000 loyal Slavs living in America and send them to Vladivostok by way of San Francisco.

While it is not generally known, the Slavs in America speak a language which every Russian understands, and the Slavic people in the United States are fully awake to the peril of the Bolsheviki in Russia and are eagerly awaiting the call to combat this terrible and spreading evil. A legion of 25,000 loyal Slavs can spread the greatest propaganda for America and her Allies that has ever been attempted upon Russian soil. In other words, they can explain to the millions of uneducated Russians exactly what America and her allies can do to save them from Bolshevism.

There are more than 500,000 Czechs alone in the United States, and there are surely half a million people of other Slavic nationalities. From these it would be a very easy task to form a legion of 25,000 young men, each one of whom would be loyal to America and her allies.

I am connected with many Slavic organizations and groups in America, and these all accept this idea with greatest enthusiasm. The Czech papers throughout the country are also eagerly awaiting the opportunity to support such a movement.

OTTOKAR BARTIK.
New York, July 26, 1918.

A Name for Our Soldiers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"The Origin of Yankee," as descanted on by F. R. Sturgis, has sent me to my favorite authority, Walsh's "Handbook of Literary Curiosities," and therein I find as brief and comprehensive treatment of the subject as one could wish, viz:

> A term of dubious etymology and varied uses. The derivation accepted as most plausible by leading authorities makes it a slight corruption of the word "Yengeese," applied to the English by the Northern Indian tribes to whom they first became known—a meritorious aboriginal attempt to pronounce "English." In Europe the word Yankee means an American from any portion of the United States; in the South it means an inhabitant of the Northern States, and in the North it retains its original specific application to the inhabitants of the New England States.

To me that is "the last word" on the subject, and it obviously puts "Yankee" out of the running as a covering term for our men "over there." It would set up such a wrangling over its proper applicability as might threaten civil war.

My guess is that our boys, with the aid, perhaps, of their allied friends, will hit upon an appropriate appellation. It is not for the stay-at-home to furnish the suggestion. We can be fanciful, as witness "Usonians," but the dubbing that will stick must come out of rubbing in the thick * * * of the fighting.

NATION TAKES OVER UNSKILLED LABOR

All Employers Must Now Hire That Class of Workers Through Government.

START WITHOUT FRICTION

Boards Similar to Those Used in the Draft to be Established Throughout the State.

Plans for the State enforcement of the regulations governing Federal control of unskilled labor, effective today, were discussed yesterday at a meeting of employers, manufacturers' representatives, and labor men held at the office of the New York State Employment Board, 250 Fifth Avenue. Henry D. Sayer, State Director for the United States Employment Bureau of the Department of Labor, presided.

Mr. Sayer, outlining the working of the new regulations, reminded his audience that beginning today the Government takes over all unskilled labor, and that henceforth individual employers shall be prohibited from employing unskilled workmen except through Federal agencies. Mr. Sayer reassured the business men that for the present only labor needed in war work would be affected, and that large corporations maintaining their own employment bureaus would not be molested immediately, but would have to conform to rules which would be mailed soon.

In order that the new scheme of employment will be mutually convenient and without friction to employers and prospective employes, Mr. Sayer said the Government had decided to provide plenty of places where the men could be requisitioned. These offices, he said, are to be called District Community Boards and will consist of a Chairman, who is to be a Federal employe, and a representative each for employers and labor. The city and State will be charted and boards will be placed to serve each section, after the system in use in the draft.

The boards will have full control and will determine all laboring questions in their respective districts. Mr. Sayer cited an example in this connection, declaring that should a call come for 750 men, and the district board in the locality had only 500 men registered, the remaining 250 would be drawn in quotas from boards in the vicinity. Supervising the work of the local boards will be the Advisory Council, vested with appellate powers, which will deal with appeals from the subordinate bodies, final decision being obtainable from Secretary Wilson.

The Advisory Council for New York, appointed from Washington, is composed of Mr. Sayer, Chairman; Louis B. Schram of this city, and J. F. Hutchins of Rochester, for the employers, and James P. Holland, President of the State Federation of Labor, and Thomas B. Gaffney, Central Federated Union, of Syracuse, for labor.

Mr. Sayer said that the men must be prepared to make many sacrifices in order to win the war, for if the war wasn't won, the nation might as well scrap all labor and everything else. He suggested that one way to avoid friction was through the organization of local boards, which had been decided upon as the best way to deal with the situation. At this point Mark A. Daly, speaking for the 1,600 members of the State Associated Manufacturers and Merchants, said he thought the merchants should have representation on the Advisory Council. Mr. Sayer, following a motion of the meeting, said he would recommend such a move to Washington, thereby increasing the council's membership to seven.

Continuing, Mr. Sayer said that the personnel of the district boards would be left to the members of the Advisory Council, and said that in making up the board members should be found who were acceptable to all industries in the board's district. Emphasizing the importance of careful selection of the board members, Sayer introduced Hutchins as one who had made a study of that phase of the regulations.

"Go home," said Mr. Hutchins, "and call meetings at once of the representatives of the employers of labor. Get down to business at once and call upon everybody to come in. Then pick the best available men to serve on the boards. The business men should coöperate, for the man who stands in the way of winning this war is going to get bumped. There are three ways the Government can discipline the slacker. One is to cut off his fuel, another to stop his transportation, and the third to cut out his power. It is up to employers to do their utmost at this critical time."

Louis B. Schram, discussing the plans, called attention to the work of the Regional Conversional Committees of the War Labor Board, the duties of which are to make labor effective. The present regulations, beginning today, he pointed out, will distribute it.

"The Government needs today," he said, "400,000 laborers to carry on the work it has mapped out. Everybody must be prepared to make great sacrifices. The splendid young men who are doing the fighting have made the greatest sacrifice of all. Those at home must do their part."

Employers with agencies other than those that require a fee for their service can take out permits to continue until the Governments plan is completed and in good working order.

"The use of fee-taking agencies, however, is to be stopped at once," said Mr. Sayer. "The permits will be issued for thirty days and may be renewed in the discretion of the Advisory Council. But all this will be done away with as soon as practicable. Employers may continue to advertise for unskilled labor, but no mention of wage rates must be made and the advertising must be submitted to the advertiser's district board before publication. Laborers must not be taken from one State to another, and employers wishing to transport labor must get a permit from the State Labor Director. These permits will not be given out readily, for the stealing of labor must cease."

LOWERS OIL LAND TAX.

Mexico to Announce Changes in Decree Which Caused Protest.

MEXICO CITY, July 30. — All laws and decrees pertaining to oil land leases, from the decree of Feb. 19 to that of July 8, inclusive, will be published by the Mexican Government on Aug. 1. These, with the modifications agreed upon at a Cabinet meeting held July 27, will constitute the new oil lands law. The law will become effective on publication.

Modifications of the decree of Feb. 19, imposing heavier taxes upon the holders of oil land leases, were agreed upon at the meeting on July 27 after negotiations had been carried on with Nelson Rhoades, Jr., and James R. Garfield, Jr., representing foreign interests. The details of these modifications are unknown, with the exception of one providing for a tax of three pesos per hectare on oil lands instead of five pesos. The fact that the new laws will become effective upon publication on Aug. 1 is taken as an indication that Mr. Rhoades and Mr. Garfield had authority from the foreign interests to agree to the new regulations. It was recently reported that they would confer with the representatives of foreign interests at San Antonio, Texas, before they would agree to accept the modifications to the decree of Feb. 19, which has been the subject of a protest by the United States Government.

ALICE WILSON WILL WED IN WHITE HOUSE

FAMILIES ONLY TO ATTEND

Bridegroom Is to Go to Japan in a Year as a Missionary—His Father Is to Officiate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—There is to be another White House wedding, the third in the Wilson Administration, and the count does not include the wedding of President Wilson and Mrs. Norman Galt, which took place at Mrs. Galt's residence in Washington. Announcement was made from the Executive Offices tonight that Miss Alice Wilson of Baltimore, the President's niece, and the Rev. Isaac Stuart McElroy, Jr., would be married at the White House on Aug. 7.

On Sunday the President, Mrs. Wilson, and Miss Margaret Wilson motored from Washington to Baltimore to pay a visit to the President's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Wilson, and at that time saw Miss Alice Wilson and her fiancé. In the announcement from the Executive Offices tonight it was stated that Mr. McElroy would remain in this country for about a year, and then go to Japan to engage in missionary work.

The formal announcement follows:

"Miss Alice Wilson of Baltimore will be married to the Rev. Isaac Stuart McElroy, Jr., of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., at the White House, Washington, Wednesday evening, Aug. 7. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. I. S. McElroy, D. D., pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Columbus, Ga., the father of the bridegroom. Only members of the immediate family will be present. No cards will be issued.

"Miss Wilson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Wilson of Baltimore and a niece of President Woodrow Wilson. The Rev. Mr. McElroy is pastor of the Presbyterian Church at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., where he expects to remain for about twelve months prior to sailing for Japan as a missionary."

MISS LUCKHURST A BRIDE.

Daughter of Capt. Allen Luckhurst Weds Ensign Eliot W. Low.

The wedding of Miss Ada Gwendoline Luckhurst, daughter of Captain and Mrs. Allan Luckhurst of Little Neck, L. I., to Ensign Elliot W. Low, U. S. N., of the battleship Michigan, was solemnized at 8 o'clock last night in the Apostolic Catholic Church, 417 West Fifty-seventh Street.

Miss Gladys Luckhurst, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Donald Low, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. The bride wore duchess brocaded satin, and her father, Captain Luckhurst, for the last fifteen years marine superintendent of the Atlantic Transport, Red Star, and American Steamship Lines in New York, gave her in marriage.

The bride is a grand-daughter of Matthew Potter, former Mayor and Justice of the ancient seaport of Dover, England.

Following the wedding a reception was held at the Hotel Imperial. It was a war wedding as the bridegroom is in active service.

Blanchard-Campbell.

Miss Helen Schuyler Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Schuyler Campbell of 57 Carnegie Avenue, East Orange, N. J., was married at noon yesterday to Sergeant Frederick Clinton Blanchard, U. S. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Blanchard of Evergreen Place, East Orange. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents by the Rev. Edgar M. Compton, pastor of the Sanford Street Methodist Episcopal Church, that city, assisted by the Rev. Dr. George F. Dickinson of Orange. The bride was attended by Miss Ruth Blanchard, sister of the bridegroom, as maid of honor, and by Miss Marion T. Bird of Philadelphia as bridesmaid. Miss Mollie Beldon of Montclair was flower girl and Harry Schuyler Campbell, Jr., brother of the bride, was best man. The ushers were Captain William Crabb, U. S. A., and August C. Beldon of Montclair.

Miss Bagg Wed to Arthur Bullard.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Miss Ethel Napher Bagg and Arthur Bullard were married this afternoon at In the Woods, the country home of Mr. and Mrs. David Fairchild, which Mrs. Herbert Hoover has leased for the season. The bride's mother, Mrs. L. S. Bagg, is now in Rome, Italy. Mr. Bullard, who has recently returned from Russia, where he was connected with the Committee on Public Information, expects to return to Russia shortly.

Miss McAlpin to Wed Lieut. Barton

Mr. and Mrs. George L. McAlpin of 9 East Ninetieth Street have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Flora B. McAlpin, to Lieutenant Charles P. Barton, Jr., U. S. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pierce Barton of Louisville, Ky. Lieutenant Barton is stationed at Camp Hancock, Ga.

Wed to Lieut. S. Van B. Nichols.

Miss Virginia C. Ward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Lee Ward, who reside at Euclid Hall, Eighty-sixth Street and Broadway, and Lieutenant Spencer Van B. Nichols, U. S. N., were married yesterday at noon in the Church of St. Mary the Virgin. A reception and breakfast followed at the home of the bride's parents.

JAPANESE SHIP ON REEFS.

Passengers on Canada Maru Rescued Without Loss of Life.

A PACIFIC PORT, July 30.—Wireless reports received here late today said that all of the passengers of the Japanese liner Canada Maru, which went ashore on reefs in a dense fog early this morning, had been taken off. There was no loss of life.

The Canada Maru, a vessel of 5,760 tons gross, grounded with force, and water began pouring into two of her holds.

The number of passengers is not known here. On receipt of news of the disaster, Canadian and American naval patrol and life-saving vessels were dispatched to the scene. A wireless message said the vessel's position was serious. The cargo is a silk shipment valued at $2,000,000. The vessel was incoming from Japanese ports.

JOHN D. TO GIVE AN OUTING.

Sunday School Children and Parents to be His Guests at Beach.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., July 30.—The first annual outing of the John D. Rockefeller Club of Pocantico Hills will be held tomorrow at Oakland Beach on the Sound. Mr. Rockefeller has issued an invitation to the Sunday school children of the Protestant and Catholic Churches with their parents to be his guests, and they are going to the last man, woman, and child. Business is going to be suspended and the village is to be locked up and the key handed over to the Town Constable.

Mr. Rockefeller said tonight that he would be one of the party. The picnickers are to go over in five of his big trucks, and he is going to ride with them. They are to assemble at the Pocantico Hills Railroad Station at 7 in the morning and they will leave Oakland at 5 on the return trip. All are to bring their lunches and bathing suits.

It was said that Mr. Rockefeller was looking forward to a jolly day's outing with his neighbors, and that he had a lot of new stories to entertain them with.

The Rev. J. Homer Nelson and the Rev. Father Heany will be in Mr. Rockefeller's party.

GEN. BELL SUCCEEDS MANN.

Leaves Upton to Become Commander of Eastern Department of Army.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP UPTON, N. Y., July 30.—Major Gen. J. Franklin Bell announced tonight that he has been made commander of the Department of the East, to succeed Brig. Gen. William A. Mann, who retires tomorrow. Within a few days General Bell will remove to Governor's Island. His successor as commander of this post has not been announced.

General Bell established this cantonment last Summer and organized and trained the 77th Division, which was the first National Army unit to be sent abroad. The 77th left here in March in command of Brig. Gen. Evan M. Johnson.

General Bell has never given up his desire for active service at the front. When he was relieved of the command of the 77th Division he said:

"I was and still am very anxious to participate in the war in Europe, but after consultation with the Chief of Staff I recognized at once that the War Department's action in relieving me from duty with the 77th Division had been inspired solely by what it considered would be in the best interests of our operations abroad. Though I must accept the inevitable with resignation, I have not lost all hope of having some part, however modest, in the fighting. While there's life there's hope, you know."

"OBJECTOR" GETS 20 YEARS.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP DIX, Wrightstown, N. J., July 30.—Major Gen. Hugh L. Scott, cantonment commander, today reduced the sentence of Private Earl S. Robinson of 10 West Ninety-third Street, New York City, from life imprisonment to twenty years at hard labor after he had been convicted by court martial for refusal to obey military orders. Robinson based his objection to serving in the army on a theological idea of his own creation. He was drafted in Monmouth County after it had been ruled that farm labor would not be exempted from military duty.

His trial followed a reviewing of his case by the President's special board, which, at a session here, decided that the prisoner's pretensions were insincere. Robinson refused to obey orders, submit to physical examination or wear a uniform.

LACK SCHOOL TEACHERS.

Columbia Educator Says Problem Is Serious—Urges Higher Pay.

A meeting of supervisors and superintendents of schools who are taking a Summer course at Columbia was held last night in the Horace Mann School at the university. The chief speaker was Dr. George D. Strayer, Professor of Educational Administration in Columbia University and President of the National Educational Association. About 1,500 attended.

He spoke of shortage of teachers, falling off in enrollment in normal schools, and tendency to shorten courses and lower standards. He said one reason for the shortage was that normal schools were not training enough teachers, and that many who were trained did not remain long at teaching. Dr. Strayer made a plea for better salaries for teachers.

He dwelt upon the need for better teachers, and said that 5,000,000 American boys and girls were being taught by teachers who have only a high school education. He spoke also of the inefficiency of teachers in rural schools.

OUTING FOR SICK SOLDIERS.

Convalescents Taken on the Yacht Surf to West Point.

One hundred and twenty convalescent American soldiers from Army Hospital 1 went to West Point yesterday on the yacht Surf as guests of the Mayor's Committee of National Defense. This was the first of the regular tri-weekly trips which the yacht will make with convalescent soldiers from New York hospitals. Dr. John A. Harriss, a member of the Executive Committee of the Mayor's Committee, has donated the use of the boat and its upkeep.

Only patients who had recovered sufficiently to walk were taken on the first cruise, but it is planned to take hospital cases on subsequent trips, and cots have been provided for them.

At West Point the yacht stopped for an hour, but on account of the rain no soldiers went ashore. Luncheon was served by members of the Women's Motor Corps. The Surf reached New York at 9 o'clock.

Franklin Simon School Graduation.

The graduation exercises of the Franklin Simon School, continuation class of 1918, were held in Franklin Hall in the store Monday night. An address was made by Franklin Simon, and diplomas and class pins were presented by General Manager David Cronbach. The program included songs by Misses Jess Wright, Dorothy Barlow, Martha Orwasher, and Esther Mantell. There was a one-act playlet "The Watchword Spirits," for junior classes, written by Anna Howell Wilcox, supervisor of continuation classes.

Directs Chaplains to Pray for France

PARIS, July 30.—Mgr. James N. Connolly, Vicar General of the American forces in France, has directed a letter to the Catholic chaplains in the American Army asking them to join in prayers next Sunday for France and her allies. Recently the French Cardinals requested the Bishops in France to have Sunday observed as a day of public prayer for the Allies.

CUBA WANTS MORE FOR 1919 SUGAR CROP

DISAGREE AT FIRST MEETING

International Committee Opposes Increase of a Cent a Pound to Consumer—Call Another Conference.

The Cuban Mission sent to the United States to negotiate the sale of the 1919 sugar crop met the International Sugar Committee yesterday in preliminary conferences upon the price. The members of the mission appointed by President Menocal are Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, Cuban Minister to the United tates; Robert B. Hawley, and Manuel Rionda, representing the Cuban planters.

"It was decided at the conference to make public the official statement of the Cuban Government, with the further statement that the International Sugar Committee recognized the need of meeting the increased cost of production in Cuba, shown by the brief to amount to more than half a cent a pound," said Chairman George M. Rolph. "The prospective increased cost in Cuba for producing the crop of 1919, however, as outlined by the Cuban Mission, would mean the addition to the price of sugar in the United States of a full cent a pound, based on the previous Cuban contracts now in effect.

"On account of the divergent views of the members of the Cuban Mission and those of the members of the International Sugar Committee upon the price, it was decided to refer the question to both Governments in the hope that an early and mutually satisfactory adjustment might be made. A meeting for this purpose will be held in Washington next week, at which representatives of both Governments will be present.

"This course was agreeable to the Cuban Mission which, following the precedent of last year, again placed itself at the disposal of the United States for the consideration of such fair prices as would meet the needs of Cuba, both as to prospective costs and as to the desired stimulation of its sugar industry."

Mr. Rolph, at the request of the Cuban Mission, made public the brief presented by the Cuban Government to the International Sugar Committee. This brief reviewed the conditions of production in Cuba and asserted that it was the desire of the Cuban Government "to cooperate with the United States and the allied powers, of which Cuba is a signal and integral part, in such manner that the fullest quota of sugar it is possible for Cuba to supply shall be produced and on a basis that shall be fair to producer and consumer alike, and to this necessary end Cuba engages to put forth her utmost strength."

Increased Production Costs.

The brief continued that "the investment for production is on a scale of 4,000,000 tons, and its capital value $1,000,000,000. It said that all tools, supplies, and other materials used by the industry had to be imported into Cuba and it added that in all these essential importations there is not an article, with scarcely an exception, whose primary cost is not three or four times the normal price. Coal sold for $20 a ton, as against $5.50; bags as high as 65 cents, as against 15 cents; and the ocean freight, on practically every article in use, is quadrupled."

In addition to increased cost of materials, the report says, the cost of labor has risen so that the "total expenditure is three times the price paid under normal conditions." It is pointed out also that the estimates of cost now allow for materials bought before a rise in price, and that the estimates consider only actual costs to the planters. The brief continues:

"With whatever advantages the planter had in the past year with $4.60 as the basic price of his product, a large majority enter the new year with less cash than in the beginning of the year just closing. We accompany this report with statements of such plantations, mainly in the western provinces, that have liquidated their year's business to date. In the aggregate these estates show an average increase of cost of production and a relative output of one year with the other:

	Cost in Cents. (Per Lb.)	Total Output, (Bags.)

Increased cost, .5250 cents per pound.

"One of the notable influences affecting the value of sugar arises from the loss of 2,500,000 tons heretofore provided by other countries for export, of which the world is deprived; besides, countries which have heretofore produced their own requirements must draw on exporting countries.

"In the emergency, Cuba is the main, and sometimes the sole, dependence for shipments to Western Europe, as well as to England and to the United States. If these are to be considered, as they must be, and the movement of sugar were free, the price today would probably be doubled.

Ask Cent a Pound More.

"A quarter or a half cent, or even a cent, would not be so much considered by the consumer as the possibility of a deprivation of his wants. The question of price will at once establish the difference between a scarcity and an abundance of supplies. If this question needs to be argued, as to whether we will have sufficient supplies on a basis of fair remuneration to the producer, or whether we shall be without, then we are obliged to remind you that the buying power of the great majority of consumers today is distinctly more than when the market for this product, and all other products, was at its lowest ebb.

"The question is presented. 'What shall be done to sustain and to stimulate the production of sugar?' Cuba alone of all the exporting countries is capable of largely increasing her output. The island's present production cannot be maintained, nor could it be considered, on the basis of $4.60. There are hosts of farmers asking for figures that the Cuban Government, in keeping with its purpose, could not entertain. There are many others who insist upon 6 cents as the minimum.

"In reviewing the figures which we have set out and the present state of labor and cost of material, we offer as our conclusion the price which we feel will meet the requirements of the owners and operators of plantation sugar houses and estates, that of $5.60 free on board north ports of Cuba and $5.55 free on board south ports. The figures are based on prices current for material and labor employed in our recent campaign, while every assurance is offered that both will be higher and, in the instance of labor, much higher, in the coming year. While sugar, the cheapest product in general use today, is being discussed it ought to be stated that its advance to the consumer is only a moiety of the advances that are witnessed in a hundred articles."

Disband Sugar Syndicate.

Members of the $100,000,000 sugar syndicate, organized in February at the request of the International Sugar Committee and the Food Administration to finance the Cuban sugar crop, have received notification that their assistance is not required any more. Although the syndicate members will not be called upon to furnish any more money, the syndicate will remain in existence until Sept. 3, when the last of the outstanding ninety-day paper matures. To date the total of drafts drawn and notes issued under the $100,000,000 revolving credit, has amounted to approximately $16,000,000.

The syndicate managers are Charles H. Sabin, President of the Guaranty Trust Company; Eugene V. R. Thayer, President of the Chase National Bank, and William A. Simonson, an executive manager of the National City Bank. Of the $100,000,000 the New York institutions participated in about $60,000,000, while the Chicago banks agreed to provide $10,000,000. The profits of the banks participating have ranged from about 8 to 8¼ per cent.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 30.—Señor Pelayo Garcia, head of two large sugar companies in Cuba, said here tonight that Cuba's sugar crop this year would be more than 3,500,000 tons.

RELAX BAN ON RELATIVES.

Sisters of Soldiers May Go Over with Y. M. C. A. or Red Cross.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—The ban against granting passports to relatives of officers and men of the American Expeditionary Forces to go to France has been modified, under an order issued today by General March, Chief of Staff. This has been done on representations made by responsible heads of the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A. and other allied bodies who are doing war work in France, that they are unable to obtain a sufficient number of women workers. General March's order shows that the conditions on which sisters of soldiers will be permitted to go abroad as workers will be as follows:

"First—The sisters must be duly accredited members of one of the regular authorized organizations.

"Second—Each must be particularly qualified by training for the position she is to fill.

"Third—That she is sent to France as a worker and not as a relative.

"Fourth—That she will make no efforts to visit her relatives in France whether sick or well.

"Fifth—That the organization to which she belongs will make itself responsible for returning her to America in case she violates these rules.

"Sixth—That if she marries an officer or a soldier in the American Expeditionary Forces after her arrival she will automatically be sent back to the United States by the organization in which she is serving."

An agreement has been reached with the heads of the organizations affected to submit to the headquarters of the A. E. F. in France, for approval, lists showing the numbers they recommend being sent, and those actually sent will, therefore, be based upon the calls of the heads of these societies in France.

CHANGES PULLMAN RULE.

Through Reservations May Be Engaged for Long Journeys.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Travelers making long trips involving change of cars may engage Pullman reservations for the entire journey at the starting point, according to instructions issued today by the Railroad Administration modifying former regulations requiring the application of the traveler in person at the office where the reservation is made. Payment for the reservations will be required in advance, and telegraph wires will be used for reservation messages ordinarily without cost to the traveler. This rule is to be effective within a few days.

A committee of baggagemen from all parts of the country today met with Railroad Administration officials to work out uniform baggage rules and practices.

Uniform passenger mileage books will be issued about Aug. 15. Delay in planning details prevented their being placed on sale Aug. 1, as had been planned.

ABOLISH REVENUE BADGES.

Hereafter Inspectors Will Carry Credentials to be Shown on Demand.

Beginning tomorrow Internal Revenue deputies will no longer flash gold badges in the faces of citizens whose places of business they visit for the purpose of making inspections of stocks and papers. Instead, each deputy will have a commission, which must be shown upon demand. Mark Eisner, Collector of Internal Revenue for the Third District, with headquarters at 1,150 Broadway, gave out this statement yesterday:

> From and after Aug. 1, 1918, no badges are authorized to be worn by Internal Revenue officers, and any person presuming to act under the authority of a metal badge as a United States revenue officer should be treated as an impostor. Revenue officers will carry, instead of badges, pocket commissions, which must be shown upon demand, and no other credentials should be recognized.

Deputy William Berker of the First District, Brooklyn, said that the dispensing with the use of the badge would be followed in all revenue districts, as the change had been directed by Commissioner Daniel C. Roper in Washington. Collector Edwards of the Second or Wall Street District will today furnish his field force with the new pocket commissions. It was said Commissioner Roper had been led to eliminate the badge as a token of authority as it was found that persons no longer connected with the revenue service were making use of the badges illegally.

WANT MORE BAEDEKERS.

Defense Society Makes New Appeal to Fill Soldiers' Needs.

More than 500 Baedekers for the use of American officers in France have been received through the American Defense Society's appeal for the books, said William Guggenheim of the organization yesterday in issuing a second appeal. Thousands of letters have been received announcing that the writers had sent their books directly to relatives or friends in France.

"The Government needs thousands of these books," said Mr. Guggenheim, "and no one must think that because the Baedeker bears an old date that it will not be serviceable. The maps which they contain will undoubtedly be of great service, even though the text be not up to date. Guidebooks are especially needed of France, Italy, Russia, Greece, Austria, and Germany, particularly the latter."

Gifts of the tourist handbook should be addressed to the society at 44 East Twenty-third Street, which will forward them to the proper authorities in Washington.

VAIL SEES BURLESON.

Is Satisfied Telephone Interests Will Be Fairly Treated.

Theodore N. Vail, President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, returned to New York yesterday from Washington, where he went Monday to confer with Postmaster General Burleson in regard to the governmental control of the telegraph service. He said:

"I am satisfied after my conference with the Postmaster General that it is his intention to maintain the wire service at the highest possible efficiency, conserve and protect the property that it may be returned to the owners in as good condition as received, and to pay a compensation for its use that will be just and fair.

"Until more, and the fullest, consideration can be given to questions, everything will continue as in the past."

LIGHTNING FIRES BALLOON.

Navy Airship Destroyed Over Ambrose Channel—No One Hurt.

A naval observation balloon was struck by lightning as it was being towed through the Ambrose Channel yesterday, and was completely destroyed by flames. The balloon was on its way to one of the naval stations along the coast, and the observers were on the tugboat. No one was in the basket.

Two weeks ago another naval observation balloon was struck by lightning during a storm over Gravesend Bay and destroyed in similar manner, but no one was injured. The balloons are usually towed at a height of 600 feet and two men ride in the basket as observers. They descend when a storm begins.

Rev. E. J. Tierney Dies in Rectory.

The Rev. Edward Joseph Tierney, pastor of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church at Rosebank, S. I., died suddenly at the church rectory yesterday afternoon from heart disease. He was in his forty-ninth year. Father Tierney was born in New Rochelle, and was graduated from St. Francis Xavier's College in West Sixteenth Street, this city. In May, 1896, he was ordained a priest at Rome, following his graduation from the American College there. Then he became assistant pastor of the Church of the Holy Name, in West Ninety-sixth Street, and several years later was appointed pastor. In 1916 he was transferred to Staten Island as the pastor of the largest Catholic church on the south shore.

CHAS. HENRY HART, ART EXPERT, DEAD

"FOUND" GILBERT STUART

His Study of His Work Brought Painter Posthumous Fame—Assailed Popular Artistic Idols.

Charles Henry Hart, a noted art expert and authority on historical portraiture, whose "discovery" of Gilbert Stuart's work years ago brought that artist posthumous fame, died on Monday night at his home, 970 Park Avenue, from a complication of diseases, in his seventy-first year. He had been ill for about six months. Shortly before the outbreak of the European war Mr. Hart commenced the gathering of material for "A Life of Gilbert Stuart," and he was at work on this when illness overtook him.

Mr. Hart is survived by his wife, who was Miss Anita Beatriz Arabe, daughter of the late Muriel Everton of New Orleans and Alfonso Gonzales y Arabe, a member of an old Spanish family. They were married in 1912. His first wife, who was Miss Armine Nixon, a great-granddaughter of Robert Morris of revolutionary fame, died in 1897.

Born in Philadelphia, where he lived for many years, Mr. Hart was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1869. In November of the previous year he had been admitted to the Bar in Pennsylvania, and, although he had written critically since 1885, he did not give up the practice of law to devote his time wholly to art until 1894, when he broke his leg and suffered other injuries in a railroad accident in the suburbs of Philadelphia.

Since his recovery from the accident he had devoted his entire time to literature, writing principally upon art and historical subjects. From 1882 until 1902 he was Director of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. He was Chairman of the Committee on Retrospective American Art at the Chicago Exposition in 1893.

Mr. Hart was perhaps best known to New Yorkers by reason of the fact that some years ago he denied the authenticity of two of the Gilbert Stuart portraits in the Metropolitan Museum of Art. The portraits in question were those of Don Josef de Jaudenes y Nebet, first Spanish Minister to the United States, and of Don Matilde Stoughton de Jaudenes. Mr. Clark offered his evidence direct to Sir Caspar Purdon Clarke, then Director of the Museum, going into great detail. The controversy that followed lasted for a long time and developed international proportions.

About twenty-five years ago the expert became interested in the work of Gilbert Stuart, and making a close study of the painter's work arrived at the conclusion that it was of the first value, and that Stuart was pre-eminent as a colorist, and that his place, judged by the highest canons of art, was unquestionably among the few masters of portraiture. At this time Stuarts were selling for as low as $400. Recently the price has been in the vicinity of $25,000.

He had a liking for assailing popular artistic idols, and in 1907 published his "Frauds in Historical Portraiture." Five years later he upset the prevailing notion that Benjamin West was a Quaker. In 1911, in his "Memoirs of the Life and Works of Jean Antoine Houdon, Sculptor of Voltaire and Washington," he reopened the controversy as to whether it was the body of John Paul Jones that was discovered in Paris on April 14, 1905, by General Horace Porter, then Ambassador to France. One chapter of the book was devoted to Mr. Hart's denial of the authenticity of General Porter's discovery. The subject finds a place because the identification was based, in important particulars, on extraordinary coincidences in measurements of the skull and busts of Jones by Houdon.

It was against this verification that Mr. Hart directed his protest. The first of the busts was made in 1781 and the second in 1784, eight years before Jones's death. His body was escorted by a squadron of United States warships, and was given sepulture in Bancroft Hall, Annapolis, Md., with great ceremony in April, 1906.

MRS. E. FRANCIS HYDE DEAD.

Once Noted Horsewomen Was Prominent in New York Society for Years.

Mrs. E. Francis Hyde, who had been prominent socially in this city for many years and once a noted horsewoman, died yesterday at her home, 36 West Fifty-eighth Street, in her seventy-fifth year. Mrs. Hyde had been ill since January, when she fell downstairs in her home, suffering severe injuries. Her husband is a Vice President of the Central Union Trust Company. He was summoned from his office when Mrs. Hyde's illness suddenly became critical yesterday, but she was dead when he reached home.

Mrs. Hyde was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Albert N. Brown of this city. Her uncle was the late Justice Henry Hilton. She was a patron of the Philharmonic Society and for years had subscribed for parterre Box 33 of the Metropolitan Opera House. In 1891, when the Russian composer, Tschaikowski, was in this country, Mrs. Hyde gave a reception for him. Besides her husband Mrs. Hyde is survived by her brother, Charles Hilton Brown, a lawyer of this city.

EARL OF LICHFIELD DEAD.

Body Found on His Estate—Death Probably Accidental.

LONDON, July 30.—Thomas Francis Anson, the third Earl of Lichfield, Director of the National Provincial Bank of England and of the Bank of Australasia, was found dead today in the grounds of his estate at Shugborough Park, Stafford, with a gunshot wound in the head. He was born in 1856.

The Coroner's jury rendered a verdict that the Earl came to his death through an accident. He was engaged in duck shooting at the time of his death.

Lord Lichfield, the third Earl of his line, was one of the largest land owners in Staffordshire. He was married in 1878 to Lady Mildred Coke, daughter of the Earl of Leicester, and has three sons, the eldest, Viscount Anson, now being at the front with the London Rifles. A brother, William Anson, lives near San Angelo, Texas, owning one of the largest ranches in the State. Lord Lichfield succeeded to the Earldom of Lichfield in 1892.

Waldemer Otis.

Waldemer Otis, formerly in the grain and elevator business in Cleveland, Ohio, as a member of the firm of Otis & Son, died on Sunday at his home, 390 Washington Avenue, Brooklyn, in his seventy-third year. He was a lineal descendant of John Otis, who settled in Massachusetts in 1630. Mr. Otis was graduated from Dartmouth College and the Harvard Law School, but never engaged in active law practice. Twice he was nominated by the Democrats as their candidate for Mayor of Cleveland, and he was a delegate to the National Democratic Convention, which nominated Tilden for President in 1876. In 1886 he moved from Ohio to Brooklyn. His marriage with Lillie Livingston Wiley occurred in 1884.

William H. Herriman Dies in Rome.

William H. Herriman, whose death in Rome, Italy, has been announced, was long a resident of Brooklyn. He was born ninety years ago in a house near the Battery and years ago went to Rome because of his wife's failing health. He was associated with many New York charities and in 1910 gave $100,000 to the Brooklyn Children's Aid Society and furnished the Brooklyn Hospital with its dispensary building in memory of his wife.

FATE OF WORLD'S SERIES WILL BE DECIDED AT COUNCIL TO BE HELD SATURDAY

STRONG OPPOSITION TO WORLD'S SERIES

National League Will Meet Here Saturday to Discuss Baseball Classic.

SAY INTEREST IS LACKING

Short Season Robs Event of Much Glamour and Pomp—Club Owners Disagree on Question.

While President John K. Tener of the National League is not in favor of playing a world's series with the American League this season, he is willing to abide by the decision of the club owners of the organization, and has called a meeting in this city on next Saturday at 10 o'clock. Many of the National League men do not favor the series this year because they fear that with the season closing five weeks ahead of time the baseball classic would lose much of its former prestige. President B. B. Johnson of the American League has already said that the series should be played during the last ten days of next month. It looks as if there would be a disagreement on the subject among his club owners.

President Tener, Secretary John A. Heydler, and H. N. Hempstead, owner of the Giants, talked the matter over at headquarters yesterday. After the conference they announced that they would abide by the opinion of the majority of the club owners when they come together here Saturday. Chairman August Herrmann of the National Commission is in favor of playing the series, but he believes that the players of the winning clubs in each league could secure a further extension of time from the draft boards after Sept. 1 to play the series. Other baseball men doubt the advisability of asking this favor from the Government.

Of the National League men, President Weeghman of the Chicago Cubs, who now lead the Giants in the pennant race by three games, is in favor of the series, probably because he is convinced that the Cubs will take the flag. However, Manager McGraw seems to have shown more foresight in securing additional players than any of the other managers, and it is not unlikely that the Giants will be able to pass the Cubs during the present stay at the Polo Grounds. The Cubs and the Giants play a series here beginning tomorrow, and the result of these games will have an important bearing on the result.

President Hempstead said yesterday that Pitcher Fred Toney, purchased from Cincinnati, had signed his New York contract. Manager McGraw expects to use the pitcher against the Cubs here within the next few days and will drive his players at top speed in order to win the all important series.

Owner H. H. Frazee of the Boston Red Sox is in favor of the series, and it is pretty certain that his club will win the flag in the younger organization. Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pittsburgh Club, is not in favor of halting the season before the time limit of Sept. 1 in order to play the world's series with the American League, and this attitude may be taken by all the other National League club owners.

It is believed that when Sept. 1 arrives the make-up of the clubs will be somewhat different than they are now, as many of the players are anxious to leave the game and get places in essential occupations before that date. The very fact that the series would probably be played by clubs which were inferior in ability to the world series clubs of the past is the reason that the National League owners do not favor the event this year. They doubt whether the public would display the same interest that has been showin in other seasons.

President Charles Comiskey, owner of the world's champion White Sox, is opposed to President Johnson's suggestion to close the season on Aug. 20 and play the world's series. He is anxious for the Western clubs to have the benefit of the late August games scheduled here in the East. Clark Griffith, manager of the Washington Club, is also opposed to Johnson's plan because Washington just now is coming along at a fast pace and may be able to give Boston a hard rub for the pennant if the race goes through until Sept. 1. As the Yankees are practically out of the race, they have no strong opinion in the matter one way or the other.

Now that the National League has called a meeting to decide the question the American League will also call a meeting this week, but it looks very much as if Johnson's plan would meet with much opposition. The only club owners who stand back of Johnson are Dunn of Cleveland and Frazee of Boston, while Navin of Detroit says he will abide by the attitude of the majority.

Much of the glamour and pomp which has attended the world series contest of the past would undoubtedly be missing in the event if it were played during the last ten days of next month. Baseball fans have been so accustomed to the 154-game schedule races that any curtailment naturally detracts interest from the winning clubs.

NET SEASON NEARS CLIMAX.

Surprises Promised for National Tournament at Forest Hills.

With the tennis season approaching the fixtures of the year, every effort is now being made by the United States National Lawn Tennis Association to assure the success of these events. Thus far the tournament season has been of greater interest than even the most optimistic forecasts would have indicated earlier in the year, and, further, the tournament play has raised a large sum with which to purchase athletic equipment for the soldiers and sailors, both here and abroad, and it is to provide additional funds for this purpose that the national association officials are seeking to make the coming tournaments of wide interest.

It has long been established in tennis circles that the big tournaments of the year were Seabright, Newport, Southampton, and then the nationals. This year the Newport event will not be held, but in its place will be the national doubles championship at the Longwood Cricket Club at Boston, which was first instituted last year. The tournament then was not particularly successful, but the same might be said for others of the big tournaments of 1917. This season it is hoped that the national doubles event will take the place to which such an event is naturally entitled.

Just how much of a tournament will be held at Seabright is something of a question even now, with the scheduled date of starting only a few days away. There are a number of players available for the tournament, many of them stars of established reputation, as well as some of the youngsters who have been making a name for themselves this season, but the difficulty seems to be that there are not enough men at the Seabright Tennis and Cricket Club to run the event.

In the case of the national doubles, Southampton, and the nationals, however, there is every indication that there will be a wealth of keen tennis play. Just at present several plans are under consideration which may insure a number of stars at the tournaments. Announcements are not forthcoming of the details, but it is assured that there will be a surprise in store for the tennis public when the arrangements are completed.

The re-entry of Ichiya Kumagae into tennis in this country has done much to liven interest in the sport, and it is predicted by many that now is the time when the famous assertion by George Brown of Boston may come true. He said several years ago that the national championship would before a great while go to some one from the Far East. Just after his statement Kumagae came to this country and by his wonderful performance gave real foundation for the statement.

Kumagae may not have easy sailing in the coming tournament play, for there are still a number of high ranking players in this country, and some of them may find it possible to compete for the national championship.

MILLS TO JOIN MOHAWKS.

Scholastic Track Star Has Made Fast Time in Sprints.

R. A. Mills, Jr., former scholastic champion sprinter, who, after leaving school attended the University of Michigan for a year, has joined the Mohawk A. C. This announcement was made yesterday by the officials of the Bronx club. It is expected that Mills will greatly strengthen the Mohawk club's track team, particularly in the sprints, for he is capable of running the furlong in 0:22 and the century in even time.

Ed Foley, one of the club's star sprinters and captain of the track team, has probably been lost to the team for the remainder of the outdoor season because of illness.

YANKS ARE ROUTED BY GEORGIA PEACH

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., July 30.—Until Tyrus Cobb was injected into the struggle between the Yanks and Tigers at Navin Field this afternoon it appeared that both clubs had lost their scoring formula. Ty came in during the sixth inning and as a pinch hitter slapped out a double that broke the scoreless deadlock. He came up again in the eighth inning to add a triple which scored another run. The score was 3 to 0.

The Yanks had no Ty Cobb in the game or on the bench and they never showed any signs of having a scoring receipt. Bernie Boland, who is as effective against the Yanks now as Harry Coveleskie was in the old days, set the New Yorkers down with four hits and they were innings apart. Boland retired the side runless in the third inning with the bases filled and in the seventh with two on bases. But in neither instance did the scoring opportunity develop until two were out. In the ninth Pratt doubled to left centre with nobody out but he got no further than second base.

Slim Love pitched seven innings for the Yanks and in six of the frames he did not allow the home team a hit. The first safe drive off the lanky southpaw was a single by Bobby Jones in the sixth inning and this started the Tigers on their scoring way. Love went out in the eighth inning to let John Hummel try for his first hit as an American leaguer and Hank Robinson pitched the eighth inning. The Tigers got half of their six hits, also their final run, while Hank was doing the flinging for Huggins.

Ping Bodie's fly chasing was the prominent fetature of the battle. Ping operated in centre field today with Lamar in left and he had to do considerable sprinting to cover his patrol. Ping did not have an easy chance but managed to corral four drives. In the fourth inning he ran toward right field for a one hand catch of Jones's line drive.

The Tigers were runless and hitless for five innings. In the sixth they broke loose. Jones greeted Love with a single and advanced to third when Veach hit to the bleachers for two bases a fast return by Bodie keeping Jones at third. Cobb, who had not figured in the series up to this time, came out with his three bats swinging and notified Umpire Nallin that he would hit for Harper. Hit was right. Ty nailed the first ball Love pitched to him and looped it to left, the ball settling just inside the foul line for a double. Jones and Veach galloped in on the hit, but Ty was left at second.

This was all the scoring that the game produced until Ty came up to the plate again. The Yanks reserves had been rushed into the battle before this time and Hank Robinson was pitching. Jones who had started the previous rally, started another with a single to right field and moved along to second on Veach's single to left. Vitt sent each runner up a base with a sacrifice and Cobb appeared again. This time Tyrus unleashed a triple but not until after Jones had dashed in from third base for an easy out, apparently under the impression that Cobb was going to work the squeeze play. This out left Veach on second and he counted on Ty's triple to left. Cobb was left on third base when Walker fouled to Hannah.

HAWAIIANS TO SWIM HERE.

They Will Compete in Big Pelham Bay Carnival.

Plans for an extensive swimming carnival for the benefit of the sailors in training at Pelham Bay Naval Training Station were completed yesterday by Frederick W. Rubien, Secretary Treasurer of the A. A. U. and President of the Metropolitan Association. The meet will be conducted on Aug. 10 at East Chester Bay. The Pelham Bay station fronts on this stretch of water, and it is expected that the sports will be witnessed by the majority of the embryo sailors in the camp.

Mr. Rubien announced yesterday that he had been in telephonic communication with the three Hawaiian swimmers, Duke Kahanamoku, Clarence Lane, and Harold Kruger, who are now at Springfield, Mass. The Hawaiian trio assured the local A. A. U. head that they would participate in the meet. One of their competitions will be an exhibition of the Chinese triple-oar, a novel event in American waters, in which the three swimmers compete with arms locked. This event will be held over a course of 25 yards.

A varied program has been arranged with the end in view of bringing together the leading natators in the district. The contest of chief interest will be the half-mile national A. A. U. swimming championship. Another event is a 110-yard handicap swim, and there is to be a 110-yard invitation race in which Kahanamoku and Lane will compete against the best swimmers of this district. Leo Giebel of the New York A. C., former scholastic champion, has already entered for this swim, and it is expected that before the entries close other leading local swimmers will enter.

For enlisted men of both branches of the service there will be a 220-yard swim and a 440-yard relay swim between four-men teams. A great number of this district's natators are now in the service, but many who are at local camps and naval stations hope to secure leaves of absence so that they can participate in the races.

A trio of events has been set aside for the sailors of Pelham Bay Naval Training Station. They are: 110-yard breast stroke swim, 440-yard swim, and 440-yard inter-regiment relay swim.

The course will be marked off by floats or barges placed at the proper distances by the officials of Pelham Bay Naval Training Station under the supervision of the A. A. U. officials.

CHICAGO, July 30.—Charles A. Dean, President of the National Amateur Athletic Union, and Fred L. Steers, Chairman of the Central Registration Committee of the Amateur Athletic Union, tonight began an investigation of charges that three Hawaiian swimming stars had "padded" their $950 expense account on a recent twelve-day tour of five cities in the Middle West.

Charges were lodged against Duke Kahanamoku, Clarence Lane, and Harold Kruger. If the charges are substantiated, the swimmers will be barred from competition.

Wins Grand Circuit Event After Seven Heats.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, July 30.—Three of the four races on the program of the second day's Grand Circuit Meeting went in straight heats to favorites, but the first event on the card, the 2:17 trot, went seven heats before John Spencer, who at one time sold for $5 in a ticket worth $100, gained the verdict. Squier, the driver, was withdrawn at the end of the fifth heat, by the judges, and C. A. Valentine was substituted. He won the next two heats and the race. The judges awarded him $100 for driving the race and held judgment on Squier's case in abeyance until later in the week.

June Red, winner every time out this season, kept up her good work by defeating a large field of 2:12 trotters in the Sand Stake, purse $5,000. In the final heat she made a skip five feet from the wire, but the heat was awarded to her from the onrushing Royal Knight.

The Problem was a prohibitive favorite in the 2:11 pace, and was barred in the betting. He won as he pleased for Driver Murphy. Chestnut Peteer lowered his record to 2:05¼ in the first heat of the 2:16 trot for three-year-olds, with Miss Divorcee second. The other miles were in good time, too, considering the high wind that blew up the back stretch.

RAIN HALTS NET TOURNEY.

Only Three Matches Played in Metropolitan Championship.

Only three matches were played yesterday in the Metropolitan tennis championship at the Crescent Athletic Club at Bay Ridge, a heavy downpour of rain cutting short the scheduled competitions. Those who won their way to advanced positions in the tournament were Dr. William Rosenbaum, Elliott Binzen, both of these men gaining the verdict in second round encounters, and Seiichiro Kashio, who won a third round contest.

Dr. Rosenbaum proved to be an easy victor over the young Brooklyn star, Cecil Donaldson, who was able to take only one game in the first set and two in the second. Rosenbaum was playing in fine form, but Donaldson gave only a faint indication of his usual prowess on the courts. He was undsteady both off the ground and overhead, and errors mounted up heavily against him.

There was a better match when Binzen triumphed over Roy Richey. The former Fordham star, who is now in training at Pelham Bay, was never in serious danger, but he could not afford to take chances against the determined attack which Richey waged. The score in favor of Binzen was 6—2, 6—3. Kashio, the Japanese star, defeated J. B. Hughes, another of the Pelham Bay sailors, at 6—1, 6—1. The victor is now in the round before the semi-finals, in which he will meet E. G. Burrows, who won his advance position on Monday.

Dr. Rosenbaum and Vincent Richards, the latter the national boys' champion, started a third round match, but it was halted by the rain when Richards was leading his veteran opponent at 3—2 in the first set.

Cleveland Signs Two Veterans.

CLEVELAND, July 30.—The Cleveland American League Club today signed Pitcher George McQuillan of the Columbus American Association club and Outfielder Bob Bescher of Louisville for the rest of the season. McQuillan formerly played with the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh Nationals and Bescher with the Cincinnati and New York Nationals.

VICTORY EASY FOR TIPPITY WITCHET

Sanford's $20,500 Gelding Breezes In by Six Lengths at Empire City.

Tippity Witchet, one of the most sensational two-year-olds of 1917, came back to the races yesterday at Empire City and scored so easily over a cheap field that he may prove a thorn in the three-year-old division when he meets his legitimate opportunity at Saratoga. John Sanford gave $20,500 for the son of Broomstick-Lady Frivoles late last Fall after he had beaten older horses in Maryland. His trainer, W. J. Young, has had great patience in preparing Tippity Witchet, and tried him out yesterday in the first race, in which he was opposed only by selling platers. Tippity Witchet is a gelding and will have to race frequently this Fall if he is going to yield an adequate return for the money invested, as in future most of the big turf events will be closed to geldings.

With only 100 pounds to carry, Tippity Witchet was a prohibitive favorite, closing at 1 to 4, though on account of it being his first appearance there were many who wagered on the chances of the shifty African Arrow to beat the Sanford crack. The difference in class between Tippity Witchet and his opponents was noticeable from the start, and the son of Broomstick simply breezed through the mile to achieve victory by six lengths in the fast time of 1:39. Sande, who rode African Arrow, had to do his best to save the place from the Nevada Stock Farm's Tombolo, a 30 to 1 shot.

That most of the good two-year-olds have taken part in the exodus to Saratoga was evident by the appearance of only three youngsters for the Wakefield Handicap, a $3,000 stake, for which nearly 100 were handicapped. The Kentucky Stable provided the favorite in Chasseur, an imported son of Light Brigade. Until the turn into the stretch it looked as though A. H. Morris's Translate would give the public choice a hard tussle, but when Sande let Chasseur down, he came away to win easily by five lengths. The time of 1:06 3-5 is the fastest for the event since James R. Keene's Footpad won in 1908.

There was a close finish in the May-November Farm Handicap between the three-year-old Hamilton A., owned by Colonel W. E. Applegate, and old Top o' th' Morning. The latter came from behind and though he got his nose in front fifty yards from the wire, Hamiltin A. outgamed him and received the verdict.

There were a few drops of rain during the running of the Wakefield Handicap and a few minutes later a terrific electric storm broke, which delayed the running of the other races and turned the track into a sea of mud.

The summaries:

DANGER IN JAVELIN THROW.

Injury to Norman Will Lead to More Strict Observation of Rules.

The Metropolitan Association officials, it is said, will enforce more stringent observation of the rules for javelin-throwing events in the future, as a result of the accident to Gerald Norman at the junior championships last week. It is planned to hold this competition with even greater care for the spectators afield than is shown in the shot-put and other weight-throwing and field events, in which accidents seldom occur. The local A. A. U. officials may inaugurate a new system with regard to javelin throwing by athletes which will eliminate all danger of a recurrence of the accident which befell Norman.

BOUTS FOR JERSEY CLUBS.

Three Star Attractions Offered to Boxing Fans.

A series of attractive bouts will be held within the next few days at New Jersey clubs. The first of these is scheduled for tomorrow night in Newark, where Mike Neuman, manager of the old Long Acre A. C. of this city, will open the National Sporting Club of Newark at the Orpheum Theatre. Neuman has arranged a bout between Harry Greb, late of Pittsburgh, but now of Uncle Sam's navy, and Johnny Howard, the Bayonne, N. J., middleweight.

At the Jersey City Baseball Park Friday night Frankie Burns, Jersey City's veteran contender for bantamweight honors, will box Pal Moore, a sturdy lad from New Orleans, in the principal bout of eight rounds. This contest is attracting unusual attention. Burns recently outpointed the recognized champion, Pete Herman, in a bout at the ball park, while Moore has gained a decision over Johnny Ertle, who for a time claimed the title following a bout with Kid Williams, in which the St. Paul lad was fouled.

The Armory A. A. of Jersey City will be the scene of the third important bout at its weekly show next Monday night. Joe Jeannette, the veteran colored heavyweight of Hoboken, will oppose Battling Levinsky for eight rounds. Jeannette, despite his long years of service in the ring, is still capable of giving an interesting exhibition, as he demonstrated recently against Kid Norfolk. Levinsky, through his work in a shipyard, is keeping in perfect physical condition and has shown in recent bouts that he has lost none of his cleverness.

WAR COSTS BRITAIN $25,000 A MINUTE

Credit Unimpaired Despite Huge Outlay, While Germany Cannot Pay Interest.

LONDON, July 30, (via Ottawa.)—The war is costing the people of Great Britain $34,920,000 a ady, or $1,435,000 every hour, or nearly $25,000 a minute, according to a statement prepared by the Imperial authorities, which says:

"After four years of exhausting war, Britain's credit is still unimpaired. Her 'silver bullets' are being turned out by the hundred millions, and every one is finding its billet. Her people are cheerfully bearing the ever-increasing strain which has been placed upon their shoulders, and will spare no effort in blood or treasure till victory is assured.

"Britain's national debt was increased during the war from $3,225,000,000 to $39,900,000,000, or in excess of twelve times over, and yet she is paying all—and much more than all—her debt charges out of current taxation, while the new taxation raised by Germany is not enough to pay the interest accumulated upon her war debt.

"Before the war the people of Britain paid taxes amounting to approximately $1,000,000,000 a year; today they are paying taxes of $3,270,000,000 annually. In spite of this, Great Britain raised her third war loan of $5,000,000,000—a sum equal to nearly half her entire national income in 1914.

"Great Britain is now spending $9,305,000,000 a year on her army, her navy, her air services and her munitions factories and supplies, but, despite this colossal financial burden, she has advanced loans to her allies amounting in the aggregate to $8,160,000,000."

To Discuss Steel Exports.

Announcement was made yesterday of a meeting of firms interested in steel exports to be held tomorrow at the Law Institute to exchange views on the present export situation. Ways and means are to be discussed in regard to presenting opinions to the War Industries Board and the War Trade Board as to a policy to be followed during the war period. Among the firms and corporations to be represented are the American International Steel Corporation, the American Steel Export Company, Gaston, Williams & Wigmore, W. R. Grace & Co., Arkell & Douglas, the W. J. Crouch Company, the Liberty Steel Products Company, Henry W. Peabody & Co., and Rownson, Drew & Clydesdale, Incorporated.

Chicago & Alton Shows Deficit.

The annual report of the Chicago & Alton Railroad Company for the calendar year 1917, published yesterday, shows a deficit for the year of $47,092, as compared with a net income for 1916 of $315,643. This total loss in earnings of $362,735 in the year was due principally to increases in taxation and fixed charges, as the gross revenues were increased from $17,781,279 to $20,525,689, and net revenues from railroad operations showed a slight increase, being $5,391,712, instead of $5,283,026. The non-operating income, however, fell off, and the road's gross income was $60,810 less than in the previous year.

Third Avenue Railroad Report.

The report of earnings of the Third Avenue Railway system for June and for twelve months ended June 30 shows for the month gross operating revenues of $870,350, a drop of $67,507, and for the year gross operating revenues of $10,234,484, an increase of $1,261,836. Net revenues for the month amounted to $200,293, an increase of $119,746, and for the year to $2,898,620, an increase of $1,213,812. The deficit of income below fixed charges for the month amounted to $91,852, a decrease in the deficiency of $135,728, and for the year the deficit was $457,296, which was $1,165,030 smaller than in 1916.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

William R. Compton Company and Halsey, Stuart & Co. are offering jointly $2,500,000 of Louisiana Port Commission Serial 5s at prices ranging from 101.26 to 102.64, according to maturity, to yield about 4.85 per cent.

A. B. Leach & Co., Inc., are offering $3,500,000 of the Hydraulic Pressed Steel Company first mortgage and collateral trust 7 per cent. gold notes, due July 1, 1921.

R. L. Day & Co. of Boston are offering $1,581,000 of West End Street Railway six-year 7 per cent. bonds at 102.45, to yield approximately 6½ per cent.

The Public Utilities Committee of the National War Savings Committee and the Minute Men of America are holding a rally in City Hall Park, today, at noon.

The Committee on Securities of the New York Stock Exchange rules that on July 31 first mortgage 4s of the Kansas City & Pacific R. R. Company will be quoted ex the Feb. 1 coupon, but must carry the Aug. 1 and subsequent coupons.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Net declines from a fraction to more than a point were registered in prices at the close of the market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Final prices were substantially higher than the low levels of the session, but the closing tone was nervous and unsettled. After holding steady and dull during the greater part of the session, a heavy selling movement, initiating in steel common, developed suddenly in midafternoon, and prices dropped rapidly throughout the list, the average loss being about two points before the bottom was reached.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Quiet and Irregular—Surprisingly Good Showing by Steel Corporation.

With a very small accession in business the stock market moved irregularly through most of yesterday's session and closed with the principal active issues slightly lower. About the only diversion during the day in brokerage offices was the selling of Steel common, which took place in the final hour, breaking the price to 106⅝, with a recovery of a full point setting in immediately afterwards. It appeared that a calculated effort was being made to bring out other selling orders on the suspicion raised by the break that the corporation's quarterly earnings statement would be disappointing, but the figures, when they were made public shortly after the close, exceeded all but the most optimistic predictions.

Some of the rails were fractionally higher, and the public utility issues profited by the decision of Charles E. Hughes, as referee, holding the present 80-cent rate for gas confiscatory in the case of the Brooklyn Union Gas Company. General Motors slumped 4⅝ on relatively small offerings, and where no supporting orders were put in for pools prices generally worked lower.

The war news was less of a factor in shaping sentiment yesterday than for a fortnight past. It appears that the German defense is being strengthened, and future operations on the salient held by the Crown Prince promise to be less spectacular. Traders are waiting for evidence that the public is again ready to take stocks, and in the meantime are buying and selling to catch temporary turns rather than in an endeavor to readjust quotations to the changing political situation.

The quarterly statement of the United States Steel Corporation never fails to awaken widespread interest, and yesterday's report was eagerly awaited because of the conjecture as to the amount which the management would see fit to set aside for taxes. Net earnings before deductions for the war taxes were easily the largest of any three months in the corporation's history, running to more than $150,000,000, of which the tremendous sum of $90,000,000 was set apart for taxes. The balance was about two and one-half times dividend requirements, and the action of the board in continuing the old regular and extra payments of $4.25 a share caused no surprise.

With more than $500,000,000 already in the Treasury Department's hands from the sale of War Savings Stamps, revenue from this source is becoming an important item in Government finances. At the present rate of selling it appears likely that substantially all of the $2,000,000,000 authorized will be placed with investors before the expiration of the offer.

GOOD TONE IN LONDON.

The Scarcity of Money Is Disappearing Gradually.

LONDON, July 30.—The money scarcity is gradually disappearing and discounts today were firm.

The Stock Exchange showed a good tone. Gilt-edge securities were firmly maintained, despite large sales of war bonds. A sharp improvement in the lire helped Italian bonds. The strongest features of the market were oils, engineering shares, and Russians. Argentines and Brazilians were easy. Chartered Company shares were active but lower, there being mixed feelings regarding the results which will accrue from the Rhodesian land decision.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, July 30.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes 61 francs 85 centimes for cash. Exchange on London 27 francs 16 centimes. Five per cent. loan 88 francs 70 centimes.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Rates for Call Loans Fluctuate from 5 to 6%—Time Money Unchanged.

Rates for call loans ranged yesterday from 5 to 6 per cent., with most renewals made at 5 per cent. The closing quotation was 5½ per cent. The Money Committee held its regular weekly meeting yesterday, but had no special announcement to make. The time money market was unchanged, with the supply of funds limited to a small volume available almost exclusively for sixty-day transactions.

MORE LORILLARD STOCK.

Tobacco Concern to Issue $6,062,240 Additional Common.

Directors of the P. Lorillard Company, a large tobacco concern, have voted to issue $6,062,240 common stock at par to provide additional working capital. A letter sent to stockholders yesterday notified them of the opportunity of subscribing to an amount equal to one-third of their present holdings. Stockholders of record Aug. 9 may subscribe.

The management said in the letter that business in the first six months of the fiscal year had established a new high record. The sales were in excess of those for the full year of 1912, while net income was in proportion. The stock issue, which will be made from shares previously authorized, has been approved by the Capital Issues Committee.

M., K. & T. EARNS A SURPLUS

More Than Overcomes the Deficit Reported in 1916.

The annual report of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad Company, issued by the receivers, covering the calendar year 1917, shows that during the year the road, which in 1916 had shown a deficit, earned a surplus over all fixed charges of $1,379,573. The deficit for the previous year amounted to $1,134,634.

The gross operating revenues for 1917 amounted to $43,344,150, as against $36,733,682, and net operating revenues to $10,198,039, an increase of $2,894,758, as compared with 1916. Owing to an increase of $192,448 in outside income, the gross income topped the increased fixed charges and taxes by $1,379,573. The road now has a profit and loss surplus shown on its books of $5,744,374.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

The Steel Dividend.

The size of the Steel Corporation's earnings in the June quarter showed that Wall Street's advance opinion in regard to the dividend on the common stock was established on a firm foundation. The Directors' decision to declare 4¼ per cent., all told, could hardly be considered anything but conservative when the balance available for the common stock was equal to nearly 8 per cent. after making a heavy reservation for war taxes and writing off an allowance for "the estimated proportion of extraordinary cost of facilities installed by reason of war requirements and conditions."

Break Near Market's Close.

The sharp drive against Steel common on the Stock Exchange during the last hour of trading was hard to explain. It carried the price down 2 points from the highest level of the day, and worked considerable unsettlement in other quarters. The usual rumors went around the brokerage offices that a large bear operator had started the selling movement by putting out 10,000 shares of Steel, which supplied the cue for other seekers of profits on the short side to sell some stock. The break was similar to the sudden decline which occurred a few days before the last German drive began, and was effective because of the relatively few buying orders in the market.

Gas Stocks Rise Quickly.

Brooklyn Union Gas and Consolidated Gas shares responded quickly to the announcement of the decision by Charles E. Hughes, as referee, that the proposed compensatory rate for gas should be allowed. The former rose 3⅛ and the latter 1⅛ points. It was the first substantial upward impulse that the stocks had had in many weeks.

Mr. Vail on Government Control

Theodore N. Vail, President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, was quoted by Dow, Jones & Co., yesterday as saying: "I am satisfied that the Government intends to do the utmost to maintain the service, conserve the property for the owner and pay just compensation in a full sense." He did not attach any importance to the selling of the company's stock which reached a new low record for many years at 91¼.

Mr. Forgan on Money Rates.

James B. Forgan, the venerable Chairman of the Board of Directors of the First National Bank of Chicago, a banker whose remarks always command attention, is quoted as saying: "Our Directors believe we can make enough money by lending funds at 6 per cent. The public is entitled to protection against an increase in rates if they can be maintained at present levels. There is a large reservoir of credit to be tapped by way of rediscounts before any advance in rates is necessary."

Certificate Subscriptions.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago and Reserve Banks in other districts do not hesitate to announce the totals of their subscriptions to Treasury certificates of indebtedness, but the officers of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York have refused to make public the figures. The refusal is based on instructions from one of the Assistant Secretaries of the Treasury. The Chicago Reserve Bank has announced that on Monday the banks in its district had oversubscribed their $70,000,000 quota by nearly $6,000,000. Subscription books closed yesterday. In some quarters it is felt that the New York banks and the public are entitled to information regarding the New York District's subscriptions, and that there is no good reason why secrecy should be observed. In the past the practice has been for the Treasury Department to make public the totals long after the closing of subscription books and at a time when the totals were of little value and of only scant interest.

Federal Land Bank Bonds.

Opinion among New York bankers appears to be divided in respect to the soundness of the suggestion of the Farm Mortgage Bankers' Association that the Federal Farm Loan act be amended by the elimination of the tax-exemption features of the Land Bank bonds. It is pointed out, however, that in the opinion of ex-Justice Charles E. Hughes and other prominent lawyers the tax-exemption privileges accorded to holders of outstanding bonds cannot be denied or curtailed by Congress. On the other hand, Congress may amend the Farm Loan act and provide that all future issues of Federal Land Bank bonds be taxable. Inquiry among bond houses shows that the Land Bank bonds recently sold were placed in relatively small units, and that they were not purchased by "multi-millionaire tax slackers," as suggested by the Farm Mortgage Bankers' Association.

Reserve Board Vacancies.

Bankers are keenly interested in the filling of the two vacancies on the Federal Reserve Board, the places of Frederic A. Delano, who recently resigned to accept a commission in the army, and of Paul M. Warburg, whose term expires on Aug. 9. If the bankers had the appointing power they would unquestionably request Mr. Warburg to continue in office. Their attitude toward him has been made known to President Wilson, and an announcement from the White House is expected soon. The suggestion was advanced yesterday by a well-known banker that in the event Mr. Warburg was not reappointed, or in the event he declined to serve, the President should offer the place to A. Barton Hepburn, Chairman of the Advisory Board of the Chase National Bank. Mr. Hepburn is both a student of banking and a practical banker. He has written a great deal on banking and economic subjects, and he has held a number of important positions, having served as Superintendent of Banks of the State of New York and Controller of Currency of the United States. Mr. Hepburn was Chairman of the Currency Commission of the American Bankers' Association, and aided the framers of the Federal Reserve act by his suggestions and advice.

An Income Tax Problem.

Two Wall Street men yesterday, speaking independently, expressed the same opinion—that the greatest collection problem in relation to the income tax set the Bureau of Internal Revenue next year will be that of reaching the thousands of skilled workmen, riveters in the shipyards, steelmakers, machinists, &c., who are now, and for a year past have been making much more money than the majority of the "professional classes," but who in many cases, owing to shifting jobs and addresses, have not been reachable by the tax collector.

The Ship Operating Problem.

The flying visit of Chairman Hurley and Commissioner Donald of the Shipping Board to New York on Monday caused a small revival in local shipping circles of hopes for the solution of the long-vexed question of the commissions to be paid operating firms for handling Government tonnage for Government account. Nothing definite could be learned in relation to the Commissioners' visit, but various rumors were in circulation, purporting to give the terms of a new proposal by the Shipping Board in this case. It was also rumored that the visit had some connection with proposals for increases in ocean freight rates.

Cotton Goes Up Again.

The sharp rise in cotton prices on the local market yesterday gave point to the observations of various local cotton men on the marketing and distribution of the new crop. Some of them are of the opinion that domestic transportation, either coastwise or by rail, by Winter and next Spring will present relatively greater difficulties than overseas transportation, and that cotton, consequently, will be as scarce in New York as anywhere.

STEEL CORPORATION EARNS $153,273,641

Income for the Quarter Is the Greatest Ever Recorded in the Industry.

$90,716,250 FOR WAR TAXES

$46,925,150 Available for Dividends, Including $7.99 Per Share on the Common.

The United States Steel Corporation reported yesterday that net earnings, before allowing for Federal war taxes, amounted to $153,273,641 in the quarter ended June 30, the greatest income for a single quarter ever scored by the major unit in the steel industry. After setting aside $90,716,250 for the war income and excess profits taxes, a balance remained amounting to $62,557,391, which was $5,595,967 more than was earned in the first quarter of the year. The balance in both periods was calculated after allowing for operating expenses, ordinary repairs, and maintenance and interest on bonds of subsidiary concerns.

The portion of income available for dividends was $46,925,150. After deducting the preferred stock dividend, the remainder of $40,620,231 was equal to $7.99 per share of comon stock, at the annual rate of $31.96 per share. In the first half of the year the total available for dividends on the junior stock issue was $15.19 per share.

The Directors voted the usual quarterly dividend of 1¼ per cent. and 3 per cent. extra, the same amount declared in each quarter for more than a year. The dividends will be paid Sept. 28 to stockholders of record Aug. 30, and the regular preferred stock distribution of 1¾ per cent. will be paid out Aug. 30 to stock owners on the books Aug. 5.

Another Advance to Workers.

For the seventh time since Jan. 1, 1916, the employes were voted a share yesterday in the extraordinary profits of the corporation by an increase of wages. The increase, which applies chiefly to day laborers, will amount to 10 per cent., and will go into operation tomorrow. As the increases have been laid one on top of another, the latest will make the total advance since the beginning of 1916 approximately 98 per cent. for day labor. The addition to the wage account was estimated in the steel trade yesterday as $25,000,000 or more per year, while $45,000,000 was added to the payroll on April 15 last, when a 15 per cent. increase was granted to nearly all the workers in the steel plants. Day labor will receive about $4 per day with the latest addition, compared with slightly more than $2 per day in the last quarter of 1915.

Elbert H. Gary, Chairman, announced the wage advance in this statement:

> The Finance Committee of the United States Steel Corporation, after due consideration, has unanimously voted to increase the wage rates of day labor at the manufacturing plants about 10 per cent., to become effective Aug. 1 proximo. Other wage rates will be equitably adjusted except in cases where advances have been made recently. Coal mining companies are not included. Their employes heretofore received similar advances.

The tremendous earnings were received in the financial district with considerable surprise, as it had been thought that fixed prices for steel products would be rather sharply reflected in the net income account. The ability of the corporation to exceed its previous high record quarter by nearly $9,000,000—this being the June quarter of last year with net before taxes amounting to $144,498,076—was looked upon in the Wall Street community as proof that the giant combination had not received such high prices prior to the price-fixing action by the Government as had been believed in many quarters.

Of the $90,716,250 reserved for the war taxes, the statement of earnings showed that $58,716,250 had been reserved as the tax allowance for the June quarter on the basis of the existing revenue law while $32,000,000 was charged against the first six months of the year as a cover against developments under the new revenue law. For the full half-year $122,301,448 has been put aside from a net income of $241,820,263 to meet the war imposts. The tax reservation, therefore, is slightly in excess of 50 per cent. of the earnings.

The salient items of the quarterly statement, with comparisons, are presented in this table:

Earnings by months showed only moderate fluctuations, although the best of the three, May with $21,494,204, was about $5,000,000 less than was reported for March. The statement showed, however, that if an extraordinary amount had not been charged to the tax account, the monthly net revenue would have been much larger. The tax allowance made for the June quarter specifically was equal to about 38 per cent of the full net income.

Judge Gary declined to state what percentages of earnings to expected taxes had been held in mind by the auditing department when the special alllowance for the half year was calculated.

"We reserved what we thought might be necessary when the revenue law was prepared," he said, "although we do not know, of course, what the excess profits taxes will actually prove to be."

COTTON PRICES UP 53 TO 75 POINTS

Anxiety of the Shorts Causes a Rapid Rise in the Market.

Anxiety on the part of a big short interest, which grew rapidly by what it fed on, put the local cotton market up rather sharply yesterday morning. As is usually the case when there is a big short interest in the market, once it became unbalanced the advance in prices became progressively more rapid, and increased until the active months were from 60 to 80 points above Monday night's close. At this level, however, most of the short contracts were covered, and thereafter the list slid back somewhat, closing steady at net advances of from 53 to 75 points.

Opening prices were practically unchanged from Monday's close, the advances being of only 1 to 3 points except in August, the only bid for which was 30 points lower, but which immediately jumped far up the scale as the entire list went forward. It quickly became evident that enough selling had been done in the past few days, without breaking the market, to leave it in a highly unstable position. The first half-hour's advance was sufficient to uncover several substantial stop-loss orders on the short side, with a corresponding effect upon prices.

It was all over within an hour, however. The higher levels sufficed to bring out new contracts from the South to some extent, and also induced liquidation on the long side from local speculators. These influences combined, as soon as the most urgent demands from shorts had been satisfied, to bring about a reaction of about 30 points, which was almost as sudden as the advance. From then until the close it was an ordinary quiet midsummer session, with no distinguishing features, and a notable falling off in business in the afternoon. Despite the small volume of business, fluctuations did not extend 10 points either side of the final close from about 11 o'clock on. The market is considered now to be in an easier technical position, but business waits on the Government report due Thursday.

GAS GOING TO $1.25 IN OUTER BROOKLYN

Borough Gas Co. Gets Decision from Referee Chas. E. Hughes Allowing 30-Cent Advance.

ALL REGULATIONS ANNULLED

May Open the Way for Other Gas Companies to Raise Existing Rates.

After litigation lasting more than two years the Brooklyn Borough Gas Company obtained a decision yesterday denying jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission over its rates for gas. It now has the power, which will be immediately exercised, to increase the rate from 95 cents to $1.25. The opinion in the case was written by Charles E. Hughes, as referee, and has the effect of a court decision. It is important because it shows the way for other gas companies to obtain higher prices if they can prove their frequent statement that the maximum statutory rate of 80 cents is confiscatory.

When the Legislature fixed the rate at 80 cents the Borough company was excepted from its provisions and was permitted to charge $1. This was because the territory it serves, Coney Island, Flatbush, and Gravesend, was sparsely populated, and because much of the business fell off in the Winter months. On a complaint of excessive charging the Public Service Commission inquired into the company's affairs and ordered it to reduce the rate to 95 cents. Then the Legislature amended the 80-cent law so as to include the Borough company within its provisions.

Thereupon the company began proceedings on the ground that the eighty-cent rate was confiscatory, and Mr. Hughes was named to make the inquiry in the company's financial affairs, to examine witnesses, and to prepare an opinion. His opinion, filed with County Clerk Schneider yesterday, said in effect that the statutory rate was "palpably confiscatory," that the company was entitled to judgment restraining its enforcement, that the Public Service Commission has no power to fix a rate in excess of the statutory maximum, and that, therefore, it was without jurisdiction. Concerning the rate of 75 cents charged to the city the company has no relief, because it would not reduce its total profits, and because it is not required to sell the gas at this rate unless it desires to.

The Borough Company is a small one. Its capital stock is $750,000, and its bonded indebtedness is $1,000,000. It was organized in 1898, and it has paid no dividends since 1914. Until then it paid 6 per cent. Referee Hughes fixed the value of the company's plant at $1,670,492.54, and stated that its operating revenues last year were $445,361.21; its operating expenses, including depreciation, taxes, and uncollectable bills, were $393,351.69.

No comment was made by the Public Service Commission on the matter for the reason that there had not been sufficient time to study the opinion, but it was unofficially said that if the company makes the rate $1.25 and a complaint against it is filed with the commission, the commission will have ample jurisdiction to proceed with an inquiry to ascertain whether or not the charge is necessary to yiel da fair return on the investment.

But this view was not entertained by former Public Service Commissioner Edward M. Bassett, the company's counsel, who holds that the commission has no power to increase a rate above the statutory maximum, and that it likewise lacks the power to force the company, in the face of Referee Hughes's opinion, to decrease the rate to the statutory 80-cent rate.

Therefore it is alleged the commission is without any ratemaking power at all so far as this company is concerned. The decision removes from the jurisdiction of the commission the Bronx Gas and Electric Company, which wants to increase its rate for gas to $1.50, and all other gas companies seeking permission to charge more for their product. All they can do in seeking relief is to follow the example of the Borough Company, or induce the Legislature to amend the law empowering the commission to increase rates as well as to reduce them.

EGGS.—The trade is quiet and selective, and, while there is still a fair call for the limited offerings of strictly fine to fancy goods at fully sustained prices, the accumulations of average good medium and lower grades are burdensome and urgently offered at easy prices. The full range of values is without material change, but the market is decidedly weak on grades below fine. Nearby white eggs are scarce and favoring the seller, with some further advance, and dealers are having difficulty in supplying their needs with strictly fancy qualities. The Hydraulic Pressed Steel Company
First Mortgage & Collateral Trust 7% Gold Notes

Dated July 1, 1918 Due July 1, 1921

Principal and semi-annual interest payable in New York and Cleveland. Redeemable at the option of the Company at any time upon thirty days' notice at 101 during the first year, and at 100½ thereafter. Coupon Notes in denominations of $1,000 and $500 with privilege of registration as to principal only. Company will pay the normal Federal Income Tax not exceeding 2%.

Trustee: The Guardian Savings & Trust Company, Cleveland, Ohio

The following information is summarized from a letter signed by J. H. Foster, Esq., President of the Company:

Purpose of Issue Proceeds from the sale of these notes will be used to retire $1,800,000 One-Year 7% Notes due October 15, 1918 (which were issued in part payment for all of the Common Stock of The Canton Sheet Steel Company) and for plant extensions and additional working capital.

Properties and Business The Company was established in 1907, its business being the fabrication of heavy steel stampings. The Company in 1917 purchased The Cleveland Welding & Manufacturing Company and also control of The Canton Sheet Steel Company. The three plants cover a total acreage of 119 acres. The Company is one of the most important producers of manufactured steel products in the country. Of the Company's present entire output, about 70% represents standard products which are being utilized for Government purposes. The remaining 30% constitutes war material, mainly shell forgings.

Security These notes are secured by first mortgage on all the property now owned or hereafter acquired by The Hydraulic Pressed Steel Company and The Cleveland Welding & Manufacturing Company; and by pledge of all the outstanding Common Stock of The Canton Sheet Steel Company.

Assets As shown in the report of Messrs. Ernst & Ernst as of May 31, 1918, and after giving effect to the proceeds from these notes, as reported by the Company, total assets excluding good will, patents, etc., amount to $12,055,495; current assets $7,730,750 against current liabilities of $3,312,570; leaving net current assets of $4,418,180.

Earnings Earnings for the calendar year 1917 applicable to interest charges were $1,702,377, or almost seven times the total annual interest charges on this issue.

Sinking Fund The indenture provides that the Company shall set aside annually with the Trustee 25% of its net earnings after providing for interest, taxes and preferred dividend requirements. Of this amount two-fifths may be represented by investment in permanent improvements to the property owned and controlled by the Company; the balance, three-fifths, will be used for the retiring of these notes.

General The management of the Company and its subsidiaries will continue to be vested in the same men who have brought the properties up to their present high state of efficiency. All the properties are in good physical condition, and a large equity over and above the notes has been definitely established. The earning capacity, far in excess of interest requirements, is on a sound and dependable basis.

Properties have been examined and appraised by Messrs. George W. Goethals & Company, Inc., Engineers, of New York; books and accounts have been audited by Messrs. Ernst & Ernst; and all legal proceedings in connection with the issuance of these notes have been under the supervision of Messrs. Tolles, Hogsett, Ginn & Morley, Attorneys, of Cleveland, Ohio.

THE RIGHT TIME TO INVEST
Usually it isn't a question of "what to buy," it's "when to buy." More investors have been unsuccessful because they did not know "when to buy" than "what to buy." This important question is answered by the Babson Service.

MEDALS PRESENTED TO CITY FIRE HEROES

Mayor Compliments the Entire Department as He Pins Badges on Honor Men.

THREE NOW SERVE IN ARMY

Efficiency Medals Given to Each Member of Hook and Ladder Company.

Mayor Hylan presented medals at noon yesterday to the firemen who risked their lives during the last year in rescuing persons from death in burning buildings. The presentation occurred on the City Hall steps and before pinning the medals on the men Mayor Hylan said:

"It gives me great pleasure to present to you men the medals of honor which have been awarded you after a most searching examination and a study made of the many acts of heroism which were performed by members of the Fire Department during the last year.

"There are peace heroes as well as war heroes, and you men who are assembled here this morning represent the heroes of the civic population. You have risked your all in the performance of your duty. This valor on your part, you may be sure, is appreciated by the citizens of this city.

"You heroes of the blue uniform, I wish to congratulate you on behalf of the people of this city and to assure you that your work is appreciated by your fellow-citizens. I wish to congratulate the officers and men of the Fire Department for the splendid efficiency and heroic service which they have rendered this community during the last trying Winter."

Mayor Hylan complimented the three medal firemen, Rudolph Weisel, J. G. Wedemeyer, and Patrick R. O'Connor, who are in the army service.

Led by Fire Chief Kenlon and the Fire Department band, escorted by the honor men of previous years and 100 firemen from the different companies, the medal men drew up in front of the City Hall at noon. The honor men were introduced to the Mayor by Fire Commissioner Thomas J. Drennan, who told the Mayor of the acts for which the men were rewarded. The Mayor pinned the medal on each man's coat, congratulating him on his bravery.

Patrick R. O'Connor of Hook and Ladder Company 14, who received the James Gordon Bennett Medal and the Department Medal, appeared in army uniform. The other awards went to the following:

The Hugh Bonner and Department Medal to George P. Fowler, Hook and Ladder Company 14; Trevor-Warren Medal and Department Medal to George J. Nelson, Hook and Ladder Company 14; William L. Strong Medal to Battalion Chief Richard J. Marshall; Henry P. Wertheim Medal to Harry F. Gray, Hook and Ladder Company 12; The Brooklyn Citizen Medal to Captain George J. Klein, Hook and Ladder Company 105; Thomas E. Crimmins Medal to Frederick B. Brosnan, Hook and Ladder Company 105; Stephenson Medal to Captain Timothy W. Crowley, Engine Company 31; Administration Medal to Deputy Chief Thomas F. Dougherty, and the College Efficiency Medal to each member of Hook and Ladder Company 8.

The specific acts that caused the Board of Merit to make the awards were recited in THE TIMES last Sunday.

NEGOTIATE FOR CITY PLANT.

Government May Take Over Staten Island Garbage Facilities.

The committee of city officials which is considering a proposal for Government control of the municipal garbage plant on Staten Island conferred yesterday in the Municipal Building with William Wallace Means, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture. Mr. Means came here to familiarize himself with the proposal that the Federal authorities operate the plant for the war.

Others at the conference were the bondholders and receivers of the Metropolitan By-Products Company and representatives of the Cobwell Corporation, builders of the plant. Mr. Means received assurances that city officials and all other interests concerned were prepared to co-operate in any plan to help the city or the Government. Although it was said that it would cost $50,000 to improve the plant so that it would not be a nuisance, assurances were given that the Government was ready to assume that expense.

After the conference the Corporation Counsel said he thought the Government would take over the plant. Mr. Means assigned two assistants from his department to go over the plant with the special committee. These men will make thorough inspection of the plant and its possibilities in saving waste materials.

Judge Garvin in the Federal Court in Brooklyn has signed an order authorizing the city to operate the garbage plant for thirty days. Corporation Counsel William P. Burr said it was probable that at the expiration of that period the Government would take control.

ALEXANDER DUJAT INDICTED.

Queens County Clerk Charged with Having Two Wives.

Alexander Dujat, of Corona, County Clerk of Queens, was indicted yesterday on a charge of bigamy. He was waiting at the County Clerk's office in Jamaica and accompanied by his counsel, Frank X. Sullivan, went before County Judge Humphrey where he pleaded not guilty and gave $1,500 bail.

The witnesses before the Grand Jury were Mrs. Matilda Veronica Clifford Dujat, who says she is the mother of Alexander Dujat, Jr., 12 years old, who she says is the son of the County Clerk; Ida and James B. Wilson of New York, said to be witnesses to the marriage alleged to have been performed on May 15, 1906; the Rev. Mathew Wilson says he performed the ceremony, and the Rev. George Caruana, Pastor of St. Leo's Roman Catholic Church of Corona who performed a marriage between Dujat and Miss Edna Marie Young on June 27, 1917.

The present County Clerk was for years a blacksmith in Corona. About eight years ago Joseph Cassidy nominated him for Alderman and he was elected by a big majority. Three years ago he was elected County Clerk by one of the biggest majorities ever given to a candidate in Queens. He was considered sure of re-election until the woman who now accused him caused a notice of their alleged marriage to be printed in a Brooklyn newspaper a week ago.

Dealings in Gray Goods.

There was a little less activity yesterday in the local gray goods market, though business is still on a fairly large scale. Second hand holders are beginning to sell at somewhat lower prices than they were asking before Government prices were named, and the general trend of business in these quarters is toward a lower basis. But buyers must still go to second hands for deliveries which the mills cannot give, and business of this sort is said to be sufficient to keep prices pretty close to their present levels for a time. Thirty-eight and one-half inch 64-60s and 60-48s were in good demand from first hands at Government prices. The most active sheetings were 31-inch 5s, 36-inch 5s, and 36-inch 5.50s.

With the tendency toward staple articles of practical utility becoming more pronounced every day, novelties in wash goods for next Spring are being shown only in very moderate quantities. There is some business being placed, but orders have not been in as great volume as they are normally at this time of the year. With prices at their present high levels, buyers are not inclined to tie up large sums of money in other than staple goods. In these, demand is said to be exceeding past years and is more than sufficient to offset the falling off in novelties.

Inquiries for Spring Underwear.

Underwear manufacturers report that they are receiving a great many inquiries for Spring merchandise. As yet, however, there is no certainty as to when it will be possible to open Spring lines. Though Government demands are pretty well taken care of for the present, until the price situation in yarns is cleared by definite Government action it is said to be impossible to put prices on future goods. But buyers are anxious to obtain supplies, and, where limited offerings have been possible, sellers have experienced no difficulties whatever in disposing of the goods.

New Separate Skirts Liked.

A great array of attractive models in separate skirts for women has been created for next Fall, and buyers are showing their appreciation of the new offerings by placing some very substantial orders. All skirts for the coming season are longer than they were last year, some reaching down as far as the ankles. This is especially true of the more dressy models, which are frequently quite elaborately draped and drawn in around the feet almost in hobble skirt fashion. There is a keen demand for simple tailored models suitable for business or for walking.

Hem Knit Top Half Hose Selling.

Local selling agents for manufacturers of hem knit top half hose for men report that, in practically every instance where they have sold a customer a trial order of this new type of sock, further business has resulted. This new weave is most successful in the better grades of goods. Silk lines to retail for from 75 cents to $1 and cotton mercerized to sell for from 35 to 50 cents a pair are mentioned as those most actively sought. In colors, cordovan figures more extensively than any other. Black and white, however, are wanted more than all the other colors combined.

Women's Trench Coats Sought.

With so many women wearing uniforms, various types of "trench coats" for women are in exceptionally good demand. Retailers everywhere want at least a few of these garments, and some are taking them in quite large quantities. The most popular types of "trench coats" are smart duplications of the American Army officer's knee-length overcoat. They are made of a soft but strong cotton fabric, usually in khaki color. They are full belted and double-breasted and have large patch pockets. An inner sleeve buckles or draws in around the wrist for protection in cold weather. Good material and workmanship are wanted in all cases.

Buying Two-Material Dresses.

The combination of two materials in women's dresses, which gained such a widespread following last Spring and Summer, is proving to be one of the best selling features for next Fall also. In the business so far placed with local dress manufacturers, two-material frocks are reported to figure more extensively than any others. The serge and satin combination is wanted a great deal in smart semi-tailored street and afternoon dresses, while that of wool jersey and serge is sought in many attractive models for more formal afternoon wear. On these latter garments, embroidery is extensively used for trimming.

Leather Quiet but Firm.

Just at present the leather market in this city is rather quiet. The reduced hide schedules recently announced by the Government are not expected to have more than a slight effect on shoe and leather prices. Though the trade believes that before long the Government will also establish maximum prices on leathers, the market is holding firm, and a renewal of activity is predicted for the near future. Domestic calfskin is the most active leather at present, and in many quarters it is said that the supply is less than the demand. Colored kid has been well sought all season and is still selling in good quantities.

Vestees with Valenciennes Lace.

Orders already placed with local neckwear manufacturers would indicate that the coming Fall season is to be one of the best on record for plain and fancy vestees for women. Valenciennes lace is used on these little garments a great deal and seems to be wanted by buyers from all sections. One fancy vestee seen was fashioned of flesh-colored satin and had insets of Valenciennes lace. There were bands of French knot hand embroidery in white wool down the front and around the collar in a dainty design. Georgette was used on this model for edgings.

BIG TOBACCO PURCHASE.

A Year's Supply of Wrappers for This Country and Canada.

After purchasing 33,000 bales of wrapper tobacco, valued at $14,000,000, Henry M. Duys of the Sumatra Purchasing Company of this city arrived in San Francisco this week. The duty on this tobacco will be about $10,000,000, according to the company's announcement. This is said to be the largest single purchase of tobacco ever consummated.

The tobacco will arrive in New York City shortly, and will be distributed among all the cigar manufacturers of the United States and Canada. It will cover about 3,300,000,000 cigars, or nearly one-half of a year's total cigar production in the two countries.

Special licenses were issued by the War Trade Board to cover this importation, as a large quantity of the cigars to be made out of this tobacco will be sent to our soldiers in France. A great many manufacturers would have been unable to complete their Government orders if this shipment had not been arranged for.

Before the war, Sumatra and Java tobacco was always bought at auction in Amsterdam, Holland, but last year and this season it was purchased direct from the planters in the Dutch East Indies. On account of the scarcity of shipping facilities, this enormous transaction was brought to a successful conclusion only after the greatest difficulties and considerable delay.

TRADE ACCEPTANCES.
There has been lately much discussion as to the advisability of Trade Acceptances. Whether they are a benefit or not, the fact remains they have not as yet come into general use, and many concerns hesitate to ask customers for them.
This means that at present the most convenient method of keeping capital liquid is Cash on Outstanding Accounts.

SUBWAY DISPUTE WILL NOT HAMPER OPENING

Union Head Says Movement of Trains in "H" Will Not Be Disturbed.

In order to adjust differences which have arisen in connection with the proposed transfer of station agents to guard service on the new subway H-system to be placed in operation tomorrow, members of the Brotherhood of Interborough Rapid Transit Employes met last night at 156 East Forty-second Street. It was brought out that 300 more guards will be needed at once for the operation of this new trunk line of the dual subway system.

In view of the labor shortage and rulings of several of the local boards that ticket agents and ticket choppers were not in the essential class, the Interborough Rapid Transit Company decided to transfer about 350 stationmen to the train division. Considerable dissatisfaction has developed.

The principal point raised in the controversy centred upon the question of seniority in service between stationmen and trainmen. Seniority, it was pointed out, carries with it increased pay and more desirable runs, as a reward for longer service. The proposed transfer, therefor, of both agents and ticket choppers to the guard branch brought both of these matters to an issue, since different wage scales prevail in the various divisions of the service.

It was said last night that even if the station men refused to become subway guards there were enough gate men available on the elevated lines to meet the labor shortage. Gate men and agents on the various Interborough lines are being replaced by women as fast as vacancies occur. Women employes of the company now number about 300.

The decision last night means that if the station men assigned to go on trains refuse and the companyles them out, the trainmen—that is, the guards, conductors, and motormen being classed separately—will go with them. President Phelan said it would not be a strike, but the men simply would go in other industries. He said any of them could get jobs elsewhere, and were ready to do it if need be. The men said the opening of the "H" subway would not be hampered.

Deals for Two Valuable Seventh Avenue and Broadway Business Corners.

A valuable corner just north of Times Square figured in the deal for the forty-six lots in the Grand Boulevard and Concourse section of the Bronx, which was reported sold on Monday. Mrs. Emma G. Badgeley sold to the Hasco Building Company, Lorne A. Scott, President, the two-story business building known as the Arbour Casino, at the northwest corner of Seventh Avenue and Fifty-second Street, on a plot 74.4 by 75.5. Mr. Scott's company gave in exchange the forty-six lots comprising the greater portion of the blocks bounded by the Grand Boulevard and Concourse, Valentine Avenue, 196th and 197th Streets. The property begins at 196th Street, where the frontage is 250 feet, extending along Valentine Avenue 375 feet, the northerly line measuring 307.6 feet. The tract has been held at $200,000.

As soon as building conditions warrant the Seventh Avenue corner, which has been held at $400,000, will be improved with a business structure for the occupancy of the automobile and kindred industries, which have long since established a trade centre in that neighborhood. The site adjoins the Adelphi apartment house and the large plot owned by the Amos F. Eno Estate, running through the block from Broadway to Seventh Avenue.

Broadway Corner Sold.

In the Lincoln Square section another valuable corner passed into new ownership yesterday. The Broadway and Sixty-seventh Street Corporation, Jacob Hirsh, President, sold the property at the northwest corner of Broadway and Sixty-seventh Street, known as 1,981 to 1,987 Broadway and 123 to 127 West Sixty-seventh Street, and covering a plot 84.9 by 131.8½.

The Broadway frontage is improved with four old four-story business buildings and the Sixty-seventh Street frontage with three four-story brownstone dwellings. The selling company held the property at $350,000. Maurice Wertheim negotiated the transaction.

Deals for Tenements.

James H. Cruikshank purchased from Margaret A. Jackson, 423 East Eighteenth Street, a five-story tenement with two stores on a lot 25 by 92, assessed by the city at $15,000. Harry Sugarman was the broker.

Another tenement house sold through Harry Sugarman was the five-story structure at 4 West 115th Street, on a lot 20 by 100, adjoining the southwest corner of Fifth Avenue. This property was bought by M. Zausner from Walter and Sidney H. Solomon.

Staten Island.

John Cunningham purchased through W. S. E. Hall, from Mrs. M. L. Deppe, a cottage on West Street, West New Brighton, for occupancy.

Queens Borough Sales.

M. Hamann sold to A. Loewe, the dwelling and plot 37 by 100 feet on the west side of Lincoln Avenue, 337 feet north of Orchard Avenue, Richmond Hill.

A. Hopfer sold to G. J. Conway, the dwelling at 1,386 Madison Street, Glendale.

E. A. Johnson sold to J. Scott a plot 25 by 225 feet on the west side of Congress Avenue, twenty-six feet south of Bayside Avenue, Flushing.

Brooklyn.

Pincus Shapiro bought from J. Helm the one-family cottage at 1,464 Fifty-first Street, on a plot 40 by 100 feet. I. Salzberg was the broker.

Interesting Westchester Acreage Deal Closed.

Fish & Marvin have closed a transaction involving over 300 acres of land and requiring nearly two years of litigation. One of the properties was owned by Nathan Straus, Jr., and H. Grant Straus, and comprised 142.5 acres at the corner of Lincoln Avenue and King Street, opposite the 200-acre estate recently sold by Henry Steers to Alfred Jaretski of the firm of Sullivan & Cromwell. The other property was owned by George Clarke and is at the corner of Union Avenue and West Street, north of the Mamaroneck and Harrison Stations. It comprises approximately the same amount of land. Mr. Clarke is part owner of Clarke City, and is connected with the Gulf Pulp and Paper Company.

The transaction was particularly interesting by reason of a complication which developed with respect to a small plot of a half acre in the Clarke property. It appeared that in the will of Caleb Purdy, filed in 1794, certain reservations were made regarding the use of the plot as a burying ground, and that for many years it had been used as a burial place for members of the Purdy family. Mr. Clarke is said to have expended a large sum of money in removing the bodies, and brought a petition suit to get a clear title to the land. This suit was decided against Mr. Clarke, who appealed to the Appellate Division, where the case was decided in his favor. The land involved in the entire deal was valued at approximately $300,000.

Georgian Buys Blackton Home at Oyster Bay.

F. D. M. Strachan, a Georgia lumber dealer, has purchased from J. Stuart Blackton, for occupancy, his beautiful country estate at Oyster Bay, L. I. The property contains about sixty acres of developed land, a residence, casino, and boathouse with a long dock extending out into Cold Spring Harbor. Mr. Strachan has taken possession of the property. L'Ecluse, Washburn & Co. were the brokers in the sale. The estate, with the improvements which have been made since it was originally acquired by Mr. Blackton, represents an investment of close to $500,000. It adjoins the large estates of W. Emlen Roosevelt and Louis C. Tiffany.

Commercial Leases.

L. Tanenbaum, Strauss & Co. rented in conjunction with the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company, the entire building at 8 Second Street to L. Rosenbaum, Inc., for a long term of years.

White-Goodman leased in the Holworthy Chambers, 152 Madison Avenue, corner of Thirty-second Street, a store, to Dominic Cerando for a term of years.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Pressure remains moderately low in the Atlantic and Gulf States, and there were showers over this entire area, and also in the lower lake region, the Ohio Valley, and Tennessee. Over the remainder of the country the weather was fair, except in Western Texas, New Mexico, and Arizona, where there were scattered thunder showers.

Pressure is again falling throughout the West, accompanied by more warm weather, Miles City, Mon., and Salt Lake City, Utah, reporting temperatures of 102 and 100 degrees, respectively, on Tuesday. Over the eastern half of the country temperatures are lower and below the seasonal average.

Showers will continue Wednesday and Thursday in the South Atlantic and East Gulf States, and on Wednesday in the eastern portions of New England and the Middle Atlantic States. With these exceptions the weather will be fair Wednesday and Thursday east of the Mississippi River, and moderately low temperatures will continue Wednesday in the Atlantic States, but they will be higher in the interior districts, and on Thursday temperatures will again be rising in the interior of the Atlantic States.

Winds for Wednesday and Thursday along the North Atlantic Coast will be moderate west and northwest, with fair weather; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate north, showers Wednesday, fair Thursday; South Atlantic Coast, moderate and mostly south, occasional thunder showers.

FORECASTS TODAY AND THURSDAY.

Eastern New York—Partly cloudy Wednesday, showers in the southeastern portion. Thursday fair, warmer in the interior.

Southern New England—Showers Wednesday. Thursday fair, warmer in the interior.

New Jersey—Showers Wednesday, followed by fair in the afternoon. Thursday fair, warmer in the interior.

Western New York—Partly cloudy Wednesday. Thursday fair and warmer.

Eastern Pennsylvania — Partly cloudy Wednesday, showers in the morning in the southeastern portion. Thursday fair and warmer.

Northern New England—Local showers Wednesday. Thursday fair, warmer in the interior.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	1917.	1918.		1917.	1918.

OLD PARTIES FUSE TO BEAT SOCIALISTS

TO DEFEAT MEYER LONDON

Sullivan and La Guardia to be Returned—Brooklyn Organizations Designate Candidates.

Fusion between Democrats and Republicans, directed against Socialist candidates for Congress in four districts where the Socialists have shown strength in other years, became effective through action of the Executive Committee of the Republican County Committee yesterday. The Tammany Executive Committee took the initiative in the matter some days ago.

The four districts involved are the Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, and Twentieth. The principal object is the defeat of Meyer London, Socialist, in the Twelfth, and Morris Hillquit in the Twentieth. In the Twelfth and Thirteenth the Republicans have voted to indorse the Democratic candidates. In the Fourteenth and Twentieth the Democrats will indorse the Republican candidates. In each instance the candidates will run in the primaries of both parties. It is not likely that fusion will extend to other districts.

The line of action was first suggested by the National Security League. President Wilson in letters and public utterances has given impetus to Democratic action in compliance with the suggestion, while Elihu Root in speeches has urged the wisdom of this plan on Republican audiences in the interest of 100 per cent. Americanism in the House of Representatives.

In the Twelfth District the Democrats have not yet designated their candidate, but, whoever the Democratic candidate is, the Republicans will support him. In the Thirteenth the Republicans have given their indorsement to Christopher D. Sullivan, who, before he became a Congressman, was a State Senator. In the Fourteenth the Republican candidate, Congressman Fiorello H. La Guardia, now a Captain in the Italian Aviation Corps, fighting on the Italian front, has received Democratic indorsement, as has Isaac Siegel, present Republican incumbent from the Twentieth District.

The Twelfth and Thirteenth Districts include much of the east side, where Socialist candidates have developed strength in other years. Meyer London, a Socialist, now represents the Twelfth District in Congress. The Fourteenth District is largely south of Fourteenth Street, and takes in part of the east side, although on the west side it runs through to the North River. The Twentieth is on the East River, and takes in Harlem's Little Italy.

Here is the vote of the three leading parties in the four districts:

District.	Dem.	Rep.	Soc.
Twelfth	5,763	968	6,103
Fourteenth	6,915	7,272	2,536
Twentieth	3,907	4,542	4,129

Meyer London was the Socialist candidate in the Twelfth; in the Thirteenth the Socialists ran a woman, Hilda G. Claessens; in the Fourteenth William I. Sockheim made the fight for the Socialists. In the Twentieth Morris Hillquit, the Socialist leader, was the nominee.

It was learned last night that Martin G. Ansorge probably would be designated by the Republicans in the Twenty-first District. Anthony J. Griffin, the Democratic Congressman from the Bronx, who at the special election won in the Twenty-second District, it was said last night, would be re-designated by the Democratic organization in the Bronx.

The Executive Committee of the Republican County Committee, at its meeting yesterday, designated for the three Supreme Court nominations A. Parker Nevis, a lawyer, who has been active in the Young Republican Club, and Nathan L. Ottinger, who is serving under an appointment from Governor Whitman received after Justice Francis M. Scott of the Supreme Cour retired. The Executive Committee voted to indorse Justice Victor J. Dowling, Democrat, whose term will expire on Dec. 31.

The Republicans would like to have in return Democratic fusion on Justice Ottinger, but it is not likely that the Demcrats will agree, as any candidates they name are all but sure to be elected. Senator Robert F. Wagner will be one of the Democratic nominees. The nomination for the third vacancy, it was said last night, lies between former Senator J. Godfrey Saxe or a candidate from the Bronx.

The Executive Committee of both the Republican and the Democratic organizations in Brooklyn were in conference yesterday for the selection of designees for Congress, State Senate, and Assembly nominations. Here are the selections made:

Democratic candidates for Congress nominations—Third District, Francis P. Bent; Fourth, Thomas H. Cullen, at present State Senator; Fifth, John B. Johnston; Sixth, Franklin Taylor, Bernard W. Vause or Joseph V. Gallagher; Seventh, James T. Maher, present incumbent; Eighth, William E. Cleary, present incumbent; Ninth, David J. O'Connell; Tenth, George W. Martin or Frank Wasserman.

Republican candidates for Congress nominations—Third District, no selection; Fourth, Ralph W. Bowman; Fifth, George A. Green; Sixth, Frederick W. Rowe, present incumbent; Seventh, John Morgan; Eighth, Allison S. Adams; Ninth, Oscar W. Sw[illegible]ent incumbent; Tenth, Reuben H. Haskell, present incumbent.

The Democratic designations for Senate—Fourth District, Kenneth S. Sutherland, present Assemblyman; Fifth, Daniel J. Farrell; Sixth, Seventh, and Eighth, no choice; Ninth, Charles E. Russell; Tenth, Jeremiah F. Toomey, present Assemblyman; Eleventh, Daniel J. Carroll, present incumbent.

Republican designations for Senate—Fourth District, Samuel Green; Fifth, no choice; Sixth, Charles F. Murphy, present incumbent; Seventh, Charles E. Lockwood, present incumbent; Eighth, Alva W. Burlingame, present incumbent; Ninth, Robert F. Lawson, present incumbent; Tenth, no choice; Eleventh, former Senator E. C. Wagner.

Democratic Assembly designations—First District, John Griffin; Second, no choice; Third, Frank J. Taylor, present incumbent; Fourth, Peter A. McArdle, present incumbent; Fifth and Sixth, no choice; Seventh, John J. Kelly; Eighth, Edward J. Flanagan; Ninth, Fred S. Burr, present incumbent; Tenth and Eleventh, no choice; Twelfth, Albert J. Link, present incumbent; Thirteenth, Morgan T. Donnelly, present incumbent; Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth, no choice; Seventeenth, Thomas F. McGrath; Eighteenth, no choice; Nineteenth, Benjamin Klingman, present incumbent; Twentieth, George Braun; Twenty-first, Twenty-second, Twenty-third, no choice.

The Republicans have not yet picked their candidates for Assembly nominations.

Whitman Candidate for Attorney General Expects Indorsement.

Senator Charles B. Newton of Livingston County, who is the candidate for Attorney General on the Whitman primary ticket, came to this city yesterday and attended a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Republican County Committee. It was stated at Whitman headquarters in the Hotel Manhattan that in all probability Senator Newton would receive an indorsement from the committee. After the meeting it was said that no announcement would be made until today.

Senator Newton, who was unopposed until the designation of Deputy Attorney General Alfred L. Becker as a candidate for Attorney General on the ticket headed by Attorney General Merton E. Lewis, succeeded in finding a campaign manager. William A. Bondy of the Fifteenth Assembly District, who has a law office at 149 Broadway, undertook this work for Senator Newton. Mr. Bondy conducted the successful campaign of George V. Mullan for Supreme Court Justice.

The Whitman campaign managers are making considerable headway in the work of obtaining signatures for Whitman designating petitions. In Westchester, which is regarded as the enemy's country by the Governor's friends, 5,000 signatures have already been obtained, it was announced last night. In far off St. Lawrence, 2,000 signatures to Whitman petitions have been gathered. In Oswego County, Congressman Luther W. Mott, who was one of the signers of the round robin calling upon Colonel Roosevelt to become Republican candidate for Governor, was the first man to put his name to the Whitman petitions, according to the Governor's campaign managers.

The Rockland County Republican Committee, it was announced yesterday, has indorsed Governor Whitman for renomination and re-election for a third term.

Frank Bradley, President, and Seth J. T. Bush, Secretary of the New York Federation of Agriculture, composed largely of agricultural societies and associations whose members are unfriendly to Governor Whitman, called yesterday at the campaign headquarters of Attorney General Lewis in the Murray Hill Hotel.

"Have they indorsed Attorney General Lewis for the Gubernatorial nomination?" Clarence L. Shuster, one of the Lewis campaign managers, was asked.

NEBRASKANS HEAR HAYS.

He Denounces "War Politics" at Republican Convention.

Special to The New York Times.

LINCOLN, Neb., July 30.—The Republican State Convention called to adopt a party platform was more largely attended than any other State Convention held since nominations have been made by the primary method. It was addressed by Will H. Hays, National Chairman, who said that the Republican Party stood for "winning the war, a peace with victory, and a sane preparation now for the solution of the problems that are certain to follow the war." These problems, he foresaw, would be "immeasurable in their complexity and magnitude." He charged that the Democratic Administration was "playing politics."

Four women delegates, representing Custer County, had seats in the convention.

Th platform pledges the party to stand behind the Government in the successful prosecution of the war, denounces any criticism of public officials when such criticism is prompted by partisanship, declaring for non-partisan conduct of the war. One plank dealing with this subject reads:

"We hold that patriotism and loyalty in our country are not and cannot be a party issue, and we condemn the Democratic Party for its persistent efforts to make patriotism and loyalty party issues between Republicans and Democrats in the forthcoming election. We denounce such efforts as putting partisanship above patriotism. We are mindful of the fact that partisan issues which would impede or hamper the successful prosecution of the war should not be thrust into the campaign, but this should not be made a cloak to shield any party in a covert design to secure control of any department of the Government for its own partisan purposes; and we call attention to the fact that under the present organizations of the National House of Representatives, the Chairmanship of every important committee that formulates measures for legislation is held by a member from one section of the country."

The platform condemns the Democratic Administration for permitting profiteering, and pledges Republicans everywhere to do whatever can be done to end profiteering.

R. B. Howell, whose candidacy for Governor was cut short by a call to service in the navy, addressed the delegates.

Senator Norris defended his course in Congress.

URGES NIGHT COURT ACTION

Mrs. Paddon Complains of Delay in Abolishing Tribunal.

A complaint that the Board of City Magistrates has been dilatory in abolishing the Women's Night Court and substituting day trials for woman offenders, as provided in a law signed on May 1 by Governor Whitman, was made yesterday by Mrs. Mary E. Paddon, Financial Secretary of Inwood House. Mrs. Paddon said that thirteen other women's organizations, in addition to Inwood House, were co-operating to obtain the day court for women.

A month ago, she said, the City Magistrates' Board announced that the court would be established as soon as a suitable place was found for it. Mrs. Paddon said that a room on the second floor of the Jefferson Market Court Building was available, but that nothing had been done toward obtaining its use. She said that the Sinking Fund Commission was considering these quarters, and that Mayor Hylan and Aldermanic President Smith had both expressed interest in making the suggested change.

PRESIDENT ASKS VOTE FOR SUFFRAGE

WRITES SENATOR SHIELDS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—President Wilson considers the passage of the Federal Amendment for Woman Suffrage such "an essential psychological element in the conduct of the war for democracy" that he has written twice to Senator Shields of Tennessee, asking the Senator to vote for the amendment.

Correspondence made public shows that the President wrote to the Tennessee Senator before the suffrage vote was expected in June. Senator Shields replied that he did not believe in woman suffrage, but that in deference to the President he would deeply consider the matter. On receipt of this letter, the President wrote again, once more urging the Senator to vote for suffrage.

Suffrage leaders are delighted that the President has taken such a decided stand upon their side. When the Federal amendment came near to a vote in the Senate some weeks ago, the suffragists conceded that they will needed two ballots to win. They have been concentrating on Senator Shields and Christie Benet, the young South Carolinian appointed by Governor Richard I. Manning, to fill the vacancy caused by Senator Tillman's death. Mr. Benet has not yet made his stand on suffrage known. Suffragists say they will obtain his vote, as well as that of Senator Shields.

The President's First Letter.

June 26, 1918.

The White House, Washington.

My Dear Senator—I feel so deeply the possibilities latent in the vote which is presently to be taken by the Senate that I am taking a step which in ordinary circumstances I should not feel justified in taking, and ask you very frankly if it will not be possible for you to vote for the amendment. I feel that much of the morale of this country and of the world will repose in our sincere adherence to democratic principles, will depend upon the action which the Senate takes in this now critically important matter. If it were merely a domestic question, or if the times were normal, I would not feel that I could make a direct request of this sort, but the times are so far from normal, the fortunes of nations are so linked together, the reactions upon the thought of the world are so sharp and involve such momentous issues that I know that you will indulge my unusual course of action and permit me to beg very earnestly that you will lend your aid in clearing away the difficulties which will undoubtedly beset us if the amendment is not adopted. With much respect, sincerely yours,

WOODROW WILSON.

Senator Shields's Reply.

In answer to the President, Mr. Shields's sent him this letter:

United States Senate, Washington, D. C., June 26, 1918.

My Dear Mr. President—Your valued letter concerning the joint resolution proposing an amendment to the federal constitution favoring equal suffrage, now pending in the United States Senate, has challenged my most thoughtful consideration, as do all your views upon public matters. The resolution involves fundamental questions affecting the sovereignty and powers of the federal and State governments, most important and vital to the people of the State which I have the honor in part to represent in the United States Senate, and those of States with which they are closely allied in all social, economical and governmental interests, upon which I have most profound convictions, unfavorable to it, known, and I believe approved by the great majority of the people of Tennessee—arrived at after full consideration of conditions existing when I voted against a similar one some years ago and those now confronting our country. The reasons for my conclusions are those controlling the majority of my colleagues from the Southern States, well known to you and which would not be interesting to here restate.

If I could bring myself to believe that the adoption of the resolution would contribute to the successful prosecution of the war we are waging with Germany, I would unhesitatingly vote for it, because my whole heart and soul is involved in bringing it to a victorious issue and I am willing to sacrifice everything save the honor and freedom of our country in aiding you to accomplish that end. But I have been unable to do so. We cannot reasonably expect the proposed amendment to be ratified within less than two years, and the discussion of it would, unquestionably, divert the minds and energies of the people from the one great absorbing subject before us—the winning of the war—by involving those of many States in a most bitter controversy contrary to our earnest desire for that unity of thought and action of the American people now so imperatively required.

These are my sincere convictions, but, out of my very high respect for your views, I will continue to give your suggestions my most thoughtful and earnest consideration.

With the highest respect, I am, sincerely yours, JOHN K. SHIELDS.

Second Letter from President.

Mr. Wilson wrote again to Mr. Shields as follows:

The White House,
Washington, D. C., June 27, 1918.

Thank you very sincerely for your frank letter of yesterday about suffrage amendment. I realize the weight of argument that has controlled your attitude in the matter, and I would not have written as I did if I had not thought that the passage of the amendment at this time was an essential psychological element in the conduct of the war for democracy. I am led by a single sentence in your letter, therefore, to write to say that I do earnestly believe that our action upon this amendment will have an important and immediate influence upon the whole atmosphere and morale of the nations engaged in the war and every day I am coming to see how supremely important that side of the whole thing is. We can win if we have the will to win.

Cordially and sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

WOMEN ASK CANDIDATES WHAT THEY STAND FOR

Suffragists Put Questionnaire to Men Who Are Seeking Office in This State.

The Woman Suffrage Party of New York State intends to take an active part in the campaign this Fall, and at a meeting of its State Board, at 303 Fifth Avenue, yesterday, it was decided to send out some questions to Assembly district leaders throughout the State to be put to candidates. Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, acting Chairman, said the educational work established by the party for the benefit of organized women voters was rapidly bearing fruit. This work has been carried on through correspondence courses, traveling libraries, citizenship schools, and civic centres. This is the questionnaire that is being sent to candidates throughout the State:

Will you support the Government to the utmost in its prosecution of the war?

Are you in favor of woman suffrage?

Will you support the federal suffrage amendment in its passage through Congress and its ratification by the New York State Legislature?

Do you favor the ratification of the prohibition amendment by the New York State Legislature?

Do you favor the improvement of the rural school system of the State along lines which have proved most successful in other States and which have the approval of the State Department of Education?

Do you favor equal pay for men and women?

Do you favor legislation against all profiteering?

Do you favor the creation by law of a wage commission which would fix in different industries and localities the least upon which girls and women can live in decency and health?

Do you stand for the maintenance of our present labor laws?

Do you approve their extension to new occupations into which women must go?

Will you support further progressive legislation in interest of labor—both men and women?

"Delegations of prominent women are carrying this questionnaire to each candidate," said Mrs. Laidlaw. "They are being presented at public meetings at which prospective candidates are seeking opportunities to speak throughout the State. The Woman Suffrage Party is maintaining its nonpartisan attitude, always giving the opportunity of its platform in various meetings to candidates from every party. Six hundred and thirty-three thousand women in New York State are already enrolled in political parties, but we find that this is only a slight indication of the interest women have in political affairs and in the outcome of the primaries and the election.

"Many women who are not enrolled are taking a lively interest in the candidates' petitions. What we do find everywhere is a great political 'limberness' on the part of the women. In many instances a Republican woman here or a Democratic woman there who is dissatisfied with the way the nominations seem to bid fair to go are announcing their intention of 'scratching' their ticket."

PEARSON'S IN COURT AGAIN.

Frank Harris, Editor, Seeks to Enjoin the Directors.

Supreme Court Justice Guy will hear today an application by Frank Harris, Vice President and editor of Pearson's Magazine, for an injunction against the magazine company and the other officers and Directors to prevent the dissolution of the corporation, for the appointment of a receiver of the business and for an accounting of funds of the corporation. The chief defendants named are Allan W. Ricker, President, whose alleged acts are the chief cause of the suit; Clara A. Reed, John J. Hossenlopp, and George H. Kohles. Harris also asks an injunction restraining Ricker and other defendants from using the office and employes of the magazine to send out literature promoting stock in an oil company for the alleged purpose of inducing the persons on the mailing list of the magazine to believe that the magazine is indorsing the oil scheme.

The suit was brought after Mr. Ricker had called a meeting of the Directors to take action on suspending the magazine because the August issue has been held up by the Post Office authorities on account of an article entitled, "Why I Wore Men's Clothes," stated to be written, "By a Girl," but really written by Guido Bruno.

In his petition Mr. Harris alleges that the circulation is at least 75,000, and that recently Ricker has been running the business to suit himself. Harris says that Ricker has been sending out letters to persons on the magazine mailing list urging them to buy stock in the Dixie-Kentucky Oil Company, which has a prospect near Ervine, Ky.

Ricker contends that Harris's suit has been brought to prevent the corporation from going out of business for the period of the war and cutting off his salary of $1,000 a month. Harris, on the other hand, contends that the majority of the persons who have been solicited to buy oil stock are his personal friends.

POLICE AGAIN LOSE GAFFNEY

Surround Man Who Leaped from Tombs, but He Gets Away.

Vincent Gaffney, who escaped from the Tombs on June 13 by making several jumps and finally getting away in an automobile, was surrounded by detectives in an apartment house on West 118th Street early this morning. He again escaped, making his way down the fire escape of the house, at the same time exchanging shots with a policeman on the roof of the adjoining building, and finally getting out through the cellar.

The police learned that Gaffney was being harbored in the house and went there in force about 2 o'clock. A detective entered the apartment and found the escaped prisoner in his underclothing. Gaffney leaped for the window, and, getting out on the fire escape, reached the first floor.

Policeman Reddek of the West 135th Street Station opened fire. This Gaffney returned, continuing his descent. He got into the first floor apartment through the window, and then leaped into an airshaft. He went down this to the cellar.

How he got out of the cellar, clad in only his underclothing and with the house surrounded, was not learned, although it was thought that he got away again in an automobile. The police detained several persons at the West 123d Street Station pending an inquiry.
